While digging the hole for the new pole, the workers discovered the answer to the question as to why the old pole had been placed a few feet up Campbell Street instead of directly at the corner. When the hole was down only two feet, the diggers ran into solid rock and it was only after drilling to the required depth and blasting with dynamite that the hole was completed.

ROGERS CONFIDENT OF ALLIED VICTORY

By Sam Robertson

London, May 8 (CP Cable) — When Hon. Norman Rogers, Canadian Minister of National Defence, sails for home probably late this week following a lengthy visit to the United Kingdom and France he will carry with him "a deep consciousness of the Allies' determination to push the war until victory and lasting peace have been secured."

All he has seen and heard, he told Canadian newspapermen today, has made him more confident than ever of the ultimate outcome of the struggle.

Squadron Leader W. D. Van Vleet Commanding 110th Army Co-operation Squadron, R. C. A. F.

By the Canadian Press

Athlete, engineer, pilot in Canada's north country, and now squadron leader, Wilbur Dennison Van Vliet is the first leader of a squadron of the Royal Canadian Air Force to be assigned abroad. He heads the 110th Army Co-operation Squadron that in combat will be the eyes of Canada's first overseas division.

At 35, this big Winnipeg warbird was appointed to command the squadron Dec. 20, 1939. He joined the R.C.A.F. in 1926. He went overseas with the idea of leading his men in actual warfare—not merely directing them.

"Certainly I will be in the air," said this "Flying Dutchman" whose ancestors helped settle New York when it was known as New Amsterdam.

On reaching England his words were: "What is expected of us I know we can do."

Van Vliet started to fly when he was 19 and later helped organize the Winnipeg Flying Club and similar groups elsewhere in western Canada. During flying operations he became known to the bush pilots who serve the northern mining area and had many experiences with danger in that rugged area.

He took part in mercy flights and generally made a name for himself among the airmen who fly the northern skytrails. In the R.C.A.F. he found his experience and ability to lead men, sharpened during years of sports participation, a decided asset.

After being appointed to a commission in the R.C.A.F., he served in Vancouver, Camp Borden Winnipeg, Ottawa and Trenton, Ont., and completed a course at the Royal Air Force staff college at Andover, England in 1937. The next year he attended the School of Army Co-operation in Old Sarum, England, and returned to Trenton to assume command of No. 2 Army Co-operation Squadron.

Back of him are generations of individualists and pioneers. His father and mother arrived in the 1870s at the struggling settlement that is Winnipeg today. Earlier forbears trekked to Canada from New Amsterdam with United Empire Loyalists.

In Sport as Student

In his student years the Squadron Leader competed with the best of Canadian amateurs at football and hockey. On the ice he was plain "Wib." In the air he was "The Flying Dutchman."

Van Vliet graduated from the University of Manitoba in 1926 with a bachelor of science degree but stayed with flying and the idea that any man good at hockey and football and taken in hand early enough in life has the makings of a top notch airman.

He figured 19 about the right age. Eye, ear and instinct then can be trained for maximum coordination but for his men of the 110th training will never end. When they were at Rockcliffe Airport near Ottawa he had them out for cross-country hikes and gymnasium work in addition to R.C.A.F. training, all in search of perfection.

"We'll be aiming at perfection forever," he said.

Overseas the 110th will do ground strafing, scouting and other observation work with the First Division and Van Vliet put many of his own ideas into their training schedule.

When he led his men eastward aboard a troop train to embark for England, he learned, if he didn't know before, just what his men thought about their Squadron Leader. Whenever he walked through the train they rose up and cheered him.

While stationed at the R.C.A.F. Base at Trenton in 1938 Squadron Leader Van Vliet became manager and coach of the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" hockey team in the intermediate "A" ranks of the Ontario Hockey Association. In the autumn of 1938 the "Flyers" won the George Van Horne Memorial Cup hockey series in the Kingston pre-season hockey league under the management of Squadron Leader Van Vliet, it marking the third consecutive year the "birdmen" from Trenton had won those ice honors. "Van", as he was known among his hockey associates when at the head of the Trenton "Flyers", was one of the best liked coaches to head the Flyers' club. Squadron Leader Van Vliet also acted as a rugby official in numerous O.R.F.U. games played in Belleville and throughout the Central Ontario region during his sojourn at the Trenton Air Base.

"Lover Come Back"

by BARRETT WILLOUGHBY

"The Glory never failed me once but I failed her . . . because of a woman who pretended she loved me so she could copy me secret charts."

CHAPTER EIGHT

On the Bates dock the crowd parted to make way for the stormy-eyed granddaughter of Captain O'Moore; but Sondra was oblivious of their odd, expectant glances and the excited whispering that followed her swift passing.

She went up the Glory's gangplank and hurried aft through a litter of labeling machines, stacks of coolers, boxes of cans, all recently hoisted from the hold. There she came upon a group of white and native cannery workers being addressed by the most intensely alive-looking young man she had ever seen: tall, lean-faced, with riotous black hair and brilliant dark blue eyes. He wore a white sleeveless undershirt which left bare a decidedly splendid pair of arms and shoulders, smoothly muscled and tanned to the golden-bronze shade that comes from judicious exposure to tropic suns.

His voice had a quiet ring of command that gripped the men to attention. "You have been hired to put up herring for the Baranov Packing Company. I'm asking you to give me a record pack this season. That means hard work, but you'll get top wages and a fat bonus. I'll see that you get the fish. You see that they're canned. Our plant's in perfect shape. The minute the first run of herring strikes in, we start running full blast."

"I wouldn't be too sure of that!" Sondra, suddenly recalling her mission, had stepped into the cleared circle, and stood confronting him, green eyes flashing under her bright, wind-ruffled hair. "Before you put up any fish on this vessel, sir, you'll have to deal with my grandfather."

"W-e-l-l!" His eyebrows went up in admiring surprise; but in the curve of his smile was mockery and power. "Where did you drop from, Miss Aurora? And who is the puissant grandpa, that he controls the denizens of the deep?"

"My grandfather is Captain O'-Moore. He sends word that you are to call on him at once."

"O'Moore?" The name had an instant sobering effect. He turned to face the charthouse. Inside the open door, unnoticed until now, sat Miss Jacqueline Reynall, smoking a cigarette. "That's not the O'Moore?" He shot the query at her.

Miss Jacqueline nodded, with a slight smile that seemed tinged with malicious amusement. The young man frowned thoughtfully; then dismissed the obviously curious workmen. "That's all now. Moose will give you your orders."

He spoke to Sondra: "I'll go with you. Just give me a moment to get into a sweater."

"I prefer not to wait for you. Anyone can direct you to Echo House." She looked at him coldly.

He answered with a sudden warm smile. "Jean Reynall could never forget the way to Echo House. Nor you—Sondra O'Moore."

Her heart lifted in joyous recognition, but the next instant reality—the grotesque, incredible reality—struck home. Jean Reynall, returning like this! The romantic sea rover of her dreams, coming home in command of a floating cannery. Turning to such debased use her grandfather's first command, once lost to him through the treachery of another Reynall.

She stared at him a moment, held speechless by the sickening wave of disillusionment that broke over her. How dared he stand there waiting, with that eager, expectant light in his eyes! A sudden uprush of indignation and contempt sent her toward him, her hands clenched into trembling little fists. "You—you—" Her voice broke. And lest he see the impotent tears that welled into her eyes she faced about and began running from him toward the gangplank.

"Oh, Sondra! Wait—just a minute!"

She rushed on blindly, until she found herself blocked by a red-headed young giant in the gangway.

"Didn't you hear the skipper tell you to wait, Miss?" he said with immense reproach.

"Get out of the way, you—you Piltdown Percheron!"

"My name's Lane, Miss. Shadrach Ignatius Lane." He grinned and bowed deeply, without removing his hands from the ropes. "But you can call me Shady. All my friends do."

Sondra was so furious she might have struck him, had not Kemp Starbuck strode up the gangplank at that moment.

"Would you mind letting Miss O'-Moore pass, old chap?" Kemp courteously addressed Shady's back.

Shady faced about, still barring Sondra's way. Kent put up an open hand and pushed with stiffened fingers against the engineer's chest just over the heart. The gesture seemed gentle, yet the big fellow, with a grimace of pain, gave way instantly.

Before Sondra had recovered from her amazement at the ease with which Kemp had displaced a man so much larger than himself, Jean Reynall, adjusting the neck of a white pull-over, was beside her.

"Sorry I kept you waiting, Sondra." He looked inquiringly at Kemp, who returned his regard with cool hostility.

Sondra hastily introduced the two men. "This is the superintendent of the Baranov Packers, Kemp. Captain Reynall—Mr. Starbuck, president of the American Packers."

Kemp bowed stiffly. Reynall nodded. "Sorry I can't invite you aboard at the moment, Mr. Starbuck. I'm just leaving with Miss O'Moore." He was studying Kemp with curious intentness. "Starbuck . . ." He repeated the name considering]y. "Haven't we met before? Your face seems familiar, somehow."

An odd light flickered in Kemp's brown eyes. His reply was curt. "I think not."

A moment's silence followed during which Sondra became aware of that bristling of invisible hackles which occurs at the encounter of two men who instinctively dislike each other.

"Grandfather sent me to bring Captain Reynall up to the house, Kemp. On business," Sondra said at last.

"I see." Kemp's voice was suave now—too suave. His glance swept the cannery impedimenta littering the Glory's deck. "We seem by way of being rivals, captain. I trust we may be friendly competitors."

"By all means," responded Reynall with equal suavity. "At least . . ." he smiled . . . "until I've had a chance to learn more about that little jujitsu jab with which you introduced yourself to my chief engineer."

x x x

When Sondra and Jean Reynall entered the upstairs sitting room at Echo House, Captain O'Moore's searching seaman's eyes bored into the visitor; his silence implied an imminent explosion.

"Grandfather, this is . . . is the superintendent of the Baranov plant." Sondra wodered why she made the presentation that way, since she had no conscious desire to protect the young man, even briefly, from the rage she knew must come at the mention of the name Reynall.

"How do you do, Captain O'-Moore," Reynall advanced with extended hand. "You sent for me, sir?"

The captain pointedly ignored the proffered hand. "Does your company own that—that thing you've moored to the Bates dock?" he demanded grimly.

Reynall flushed and dropped his hand to his side. "Yes, sir—if you refer to our floating cannery," he answered pleasantly enough. "It's an efficient packing plant which can put up more fish in two days than the old Bates cannery could pack in three."

"And where will ye be gettin' your fish, young man?"

"Why . . . from you, sir. I understand there's a contract . . ."

"Aye. But a contract's not fish, nor a fishing fleet." The captain obviously was hanging on to his temper. "Now, if it's my fish ye'd be packin' this season, ye'd best waste no time about doin' what I tell ye. Wire your owners. Say you are buildin' a plant ashore and movin' your machinery into it. Say that O'Moore—Dynamite Danny O'Moore—wants that bare hull down there and will pay a good price for it. And ye might add that ye see no other way of gettin' fish into your empty cans."

As Reynall listened to these peremptory demands, his lean dark face registered surprise, incredulity, and at last uncertainty. "Why, you must be joking, captain. It would take six weeks to move, rest, and house that machinery. We'd lose the entire early run of fish. Do you think my company would be crazy enough to sacrifice a year's profits merely because an outsider wants to buy that hull?"

"Profits!" O'Moore spat out the word. "And d'ye think I'll sell my fish to a scurvy outfit who'd figure their profits from the shame of as fine a ship as ever sailed blue water? I suppose now, ye didn't know that ship was my first command?"

Reynall was clearly taken aback. "I . . . I did not, sir. I'm sorry about that. Believe me, I can appreciate your feeling in the matter, being somewhat of a sailor, myself, but . . ."

"You—a sailor? Why, you insultin' young dockwalloper, no real sailor that ever lived would do that to a fine ship!"

Anger kindled in Reynall's blue eyes, but he held his voice under control. "It was an eastern firm that converted the Glory, sir. They used her to can shrimps and oysters on the Gulf coast of Florida. My aunt discovered her there last winter and, for some reason of her own, bought her. It was a costly job, towing her through the canal and up here, but my aunt . . ."

"Who the blazes is this aunt of yours? What has she to do with the Baranov Packers?"

"Why, I thought you knew, sir. She IS the Baranov Packers. Every dollar she has is invested in the company. She's Miss Jacqueline Reynall . . ."

"Jacqueline!" gasped the captain, jerking back as if from a blow. He went on hoarsely, "So I owe this to her, too. Draggin' the Glory, maimed and soiled, halfway round the world to flaunt her in my face. Makin' a filthy gurry-scow of me first command, and ensnarin' me into a contract that would make me a party to the disgrace. Tryin' to make good her boast that she'd force me to come to her one day beggin' her favor, eh? Well, by Heaven, I'll not beg. I'll . . ."

CHAPTER NINE

"Hold on, O'Moore! Aunt Jack's never said a word to me about your ancient quarrel. But I know this—you're being unjust to her. She—"

"Look ye here, Reynall. Once I took a knife in the back from your aunt and never lifted me hand. Now she comes, and you with her, to knife me again. But no one ever dealt Dan O'Moore a second blow without gettin' one in return. I pay me debts in full and in the same coin I receive. I . . ."

"Let me explain, captain. I plan to . . ."

"Drat your plans. I've seen too much of 'em already—moored down yonder at the Bates dock. Here's me last word to ye and your sculpin tribe: Ye'll pack no fish aboard the Glory of the West if I can prevent it. And I can! Ye came, thinkin' ye had me tricked and helpless; but, by jeeswax, 'tis a fight ye have on your hands now. Take that word back to Jacqueline Reynall. Tell her when she's had enough—when she comes beggin' me for peace—I'll buy the Glory from her. And I'll pay her enough to take herself far away from here. The farther away, the better."

Reynall bent forward, hands clenched, eyes smouldering in his taut face. He spoke in a cold, level tone that indicated a tremendous effort at self-control. "O'Moore, my company has an optional contract with O'Moore Seiners. That contract binds you to furnish us with fish this season. Tomorrow morning, Monday, I shall be here to exercise that option before it expires. I shall hold you to the letter of that contract if I have to call in the marshal to tie up every vessel in your fleet with a libel action. I prefer peace, but since you . . ."

"Belay!" The captain banged the table with a force that set the model of the Glory shivering in its cradle. "I tell ye ye'll not get so much as a scale from one of me nets to foul the deck of the Glory. Now, get ye gone from my house."

A flush again deepened the tan on Reynall's face. "I hope by tomorrow you'll change your mind, sir. We . . ."

"Get out!" O'Moore's voice rose to a quarter-deck roar.

Sondra darted to Reynall and tugged at his sleeve. "Please, oh, please go now," she whispered, pulling him toward the door.

He went as far as the threshold, then turned. "Depend on this, captain," he said, through thinned-down lips: "I shall be here at eleven tomorrow morning with the advance payment to seal our contract. Good day, sir."

Sondra was leading the way downstairs when Jean Reynall overtook her on the first landing and placed a detaining hand on her arm. "Sondra!"

She paused and faced him, coldly disapproving.

"I'm sorry you had to witness my run-in with the captain," he said. "But I feel that I can rely on you to understand my position, and I hope you'll help me clear up this idiotic misunderstanding. My intention is to . . oh, hang it all, we've no time to go into that here. Besides, I don't want to talk business . . . not now." He paused and stood looking down into her face. His eyes held a glad, wondering light. The silence grew magnetic with their growing consciousness of each other's nearness. "Sondra." He drew in a long, unsteady breath. "Little stormy-eyed one. Grownup. Beautiful. But . . . with the same redheaded temper." His low voice was a caress, half-tender, half-humorous. She fought against its spell, yet she lingered wanting to hear more, and despising herself for her weakness.

"Tell me, honestly, Sondra, were you too young to remember how I used to paddle offshore to talk to you when you stood in the old cupola? Have I stayed away so long that you've forgotten me . . . and all those hours I've so treasured?"

The knowledge that he, too, remembered those days quickened Sondra's heartbeats so that she found it difficult to keep her voice iced with reserve. "I have no memory for trivialities," she said. "Now, take your hand from my arm, and yourself out of this house."

"She has no memory for trivialities." He apostrophized the handsome portrait of Commander Michael Karmanova on the wall at Sondra's back. "Do you advise giving her something she will remember? Oh, you do?" Before Sondra realized his intent, he had gathered her into his arms and very deliberately, very gently, kissed both her eyes.

She knew a warming instant of surrender. Then, furious with herself and with him, she jerked herself back and brought the flat of her hand smartly against his face. "And you may add that to your memoirs, sir!" she cried, retreating one step to the stairs, so that her outraged gaze was nearly level with his eyes. "Your manners, like everything else about you, are abominable."

He smiled at her, unabashed, one finger moving across his slapped cheek. "Perhaps I had that coming. But . . . it was worth it."

"You'll have more coming if I have to call Polena to eject you."

Both his hands went up in mock surrender. "I'll go. The mere mention of violence at the hands of mine ancient enemy is enough to send me flying. But first, let me say this." He was suddenly grave and very much in earnest. "Bumping into a mysterious feud between your grandfather and my aunt has me somewhat stymied. The captain's high-handed demands, and his absolute refusal to let me state my case, had me fighting mad for a moment. I'm afraid I wasn't very diplomatic. But there are some really important points about this situation that I want you, particularly, to know. Let me tell you tonight, in the cupola. Will you go there about nine o'clock, so I can talk to you from the old place offshore?"

His eyes pleaded. She longed with all her heart to say "yes", but a perverse loyalty to her grandfather held her silent, while he waited for her answer. Finally he turned and slowly descended the short flight of steps.

She stood watching him cross the long, paneled reception room to the front door, and fought back a desire to call to him. Then the latch clicked behind him. He was gone. She leaned against the banister wondering at the great sense of aloofness that assailed her. But she wondered more at her sudden rise of spirits when the door suddenly swung back again and his lean, dark face appeared in the opening. "Remember—nine o'clock!" He was smiling up at her. "I'm depending on you . . . darling."

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Why Cause of Cancer is Difficult to Find

You may wonder why the cause of cancer has not been discovered. Here is a little group of cells in one part of the body that keeps growing rapidly and in all directions, and yet there is no symptoms of any kind until the cancer cells grow amongst certain other tissues causing pain, bleeding, or a discharge of some kind. It would seem that compared to finding the cause, and cure for, such diseases as diabetes and pernicious anaemia, the finding of the cause and cure of cancer would not be difficult

It is just because cancer is "different" from other diseases in the way it develops or grows that its cause is difficult to find.

Dr. James T. Nix, in the New Orleans Medical and Surgical Journal, tells us the following about cancer:

"The nature of cancer is known—it is, in fact, of very ancient origin. Exactly like the gangsters among people on the earth, the cells of cancer represent a form of gangster cells—rebels against constituted authority, regular, uniform processes of the body. Health and normal growth are the result of coordination or the working together of the uses and development of every organ and tissue in the body, in accordanace with well recognized rules or principles."

"In cancer, a small group of cells ignore the law and order, rebel against doing their regular, orderly work, cross sacred barriers—grow into and destroy adjoining tissues, multiply rapidly, growing like parasites at the expense of the law-abiding cells, spreading everywhere, disrupting cell harmony and sapping the general vitality to such an extent that cell life ends and the person dies. Cancer is a deadly disease, always ending in death if not removed or controlled."

As you think over this vivid description, you can get an idea of what our research workers are up against; not the usual, orderly growth or processes of the body, but a disorderly group of gangster cells.

Fortunately, though the cause is unknown, the cure in early cancer is known—surgery, the X-rays, and radium. Thus every lump, any sore that doesn't heal, any continuous bleeding or discharge, or any mole or skin blemish that begins to change, should be considered cancer, if in cancer age patients.

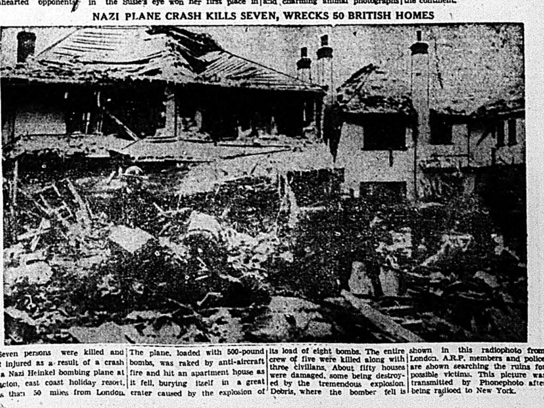
NAZI PLANE CRASH KILLS SEVEN, WRECKS 50 BRITISH HOMES



Seven persons were killed and 162 injured as a result of a crash of a Nazi Heinkel bombing plane at Clacton, east coast holiday resort, less than 50 miles from London. The plane, loaded with 500-pound bombs, was raked by anti-aircraft fire and hit an apartment house as it fell, burying itself in a great crater caused by the explosion of its load of eight bombs. The entire crew of five were killed along with three civilians. About fifty houses were damaged, some being destroyed by the tremendous explosion. Debris, where the bomber fell is shown in this radiophoto from London. A.R.P. members and police are shown searching the ruins for possible victims. This picture was transmitted by Phonephoto after being radioed to New York.

Fascists Indicate Italy is Still on Fence Waiting for Right Moment to Play Part and Try for What She Wants in National Honor and Living Space

Rome, May 9. — (AP)—Premier Mussolini today told his Fascist followers celerating Army and Empire Day that "only facts" would break his self-imposed silence on the European war.

Il Duce thus indicated to his hearers massed under his Palazzo Venezie balcony that Italy's non-belligerency remained without change until some new development in Europe's conflict plunged his country into war.

Mussolini referred to the declaration of the Italian Empire four years ago.

"A great day in the history of our country was that of May 9, 1936", Mussolini said. It was a day of sunny victory.

"After my speeches you must become accustomed also to my silence. Only facts will break it".

The Times said Mr. Chamberlain's Government won "an uneasy reprieve after a Parliamentary battering more violent than any in its life, more severe than any of its kind in the last war." ### Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Rain and life! Rain from the clouds is our primary supply of the water necessary to life. Water is the most universal solvent; it carries in solution chemicals from one part to another, in both animals and plants. It seems to have been especially designed to keep living organisms functioning. For instance, it requires a great amount of heat to raise its temperature and as living bodies are composed largely of water their temperatures are thus maintained at definite levels, and cooled by evaporation. The importanc may be emphasized in another way by saying that one inch of rain is equivalent in energy to twenty-two hours of sunshine.

Capt. Williams, Canadian, Performed Feat of 'Covering' Withdrawal

(By Sam Robertson, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 9—(CP-Cable)—The nerve-testing task of "covering" the withdrawal of Allied troops from Namsos, Norway, was carried out by a Canadian member of the British forces, Captain Robert Williams.

Assisted by French Alpine troops the former insurance man from Toronto mined the Steinkjer bridge and the tunnel bridge at Namalseid just before the Anglo-French forces sailed down Namsos Fjord.

Captain Williams, a veteran of the First Great War, was on a business trip to the United Kingdom when this war broke out and obtained a commission with the British forces. He was chief transport officer on the Steinkjer front.

A newspaperman just returned here with the evacuated Allied fighters told The Canadian Press how the Canadian blew up bridges and roads to prevent the Germans arriving at Namsos before the British and French troops had successfully embarked.

Captain Williams also sabotaged war equipment that had been left behind. He smashed in the engine heads of lorries and slashed tires to prevent the transports being used by the Nazis.

After completing a job that fellow officers described as magnificently done under dangerous circumstances, the Canadian was one of the last four men to board the transport that evacuated the outnumbered Allies.

German Bombs Endanger Norway's King and Crown Prince

YUGOSLAV-SOVIET ALLIANCE SEEN AS POSSIBILITY

Yugoslav Military Mission Reported Ready to Leave Belgrade for Moscow

BALKAN REPORTS

Belgrade, May 9—(AP)—Parallel reports of steps toward both Soviet Russian and Allied protection of Yugoslavia were viewed today in Balkan diplomatic quarters as evidence of possible Russian-British-French co-operation against the Rome-Berlin axis in this corner of Europe.

Whether Yugoslavia is looking for help from Russia as well as from the western powers was not clear.

It was learned authoritatively in Belgrade that a Yugoslav military mission headed by General Vojin Maximovic, Inspector of National Defence, would leave shortly for Moscow and military consultations with Russian leaders.

The belief was expressed in quarters close to the government that a Yugoslav-Russian military alliance might result from the visit.

The disclosure of the forthcoming military talks in Moscow comes while a Yugoslav trade delegation is renewing commercial relations with Russia. The Yugoslavs had a three-hour interview with former Premier Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff there last night.

Mission Kept Secret

News of the military mission to Moscow had been kept a close secret in Yugoslavia while the nation rushed troops and guns to her Italian and German frontiers.

Allied envoys were reported to have assured Yugoslav leaders that British and French troops, planes

BLAZING HEATH DELAYS EXERCISE OF CANADIANS

Watchers Wrongly Think Smoke Pall Part of Defensive Scheme

'SURPRISE FACTOR'

Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment Among Units Taking Part — Troops Fight Flames

Aldershot, England, May 9—(CP-Cable) — A roaring heath fire, which cut a wide swath through the tinder-dry gorse, temporarily held up a field exercise being staged today before a large gallery of Canadian officers and other ranks by selected units of the 1st Infantry Brigade under the command of Brigadier Armand Smith.

Half an hour after combined infantry and tanks had launched an attack in imaginary battle, a heavy pall of smoke crept along the right line of defence.

Watchers on the hillside believed the smoke cloud was part of the defensive scheme. The first wave of attacking infantry, comprising men of the 48th Highlanders, the Royal Canadian Regiment and the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment came to a halt and supporting tanks and Bren gun carriers veered off hurriedly. It was as if the men had been caught in a barrage of heavy stuff.

There was an awkward pause in the running instructional commentary. "It appears that a surprise factor has upset the pre-arranged scheme of things," the military commentator remarked. "But it is all to the good and now we can test the skill of the troops in meeting an unexpected diversion."

Several hundred men from the khaki audience rushed forward to assist the perspiring troops in full battle kit who fought the flames with switches of branches and trees. Within 15 minutes the Canadians had beat back the unexpected flank attack and the fire was extinguished.

Then the exercise was resumed from the point where it was interrupted. Tanks lumbered slowly towards the objectives and speedy Bren carriers bobed up and down over the uneven ground on missions of discovering the enemy machine-gun emplacements and infantry outposts.

The infantry followed in three separate waves, consolidating the positions gained and carrying out mopping up tasks.

It was all part of the advance training program in which the entire 1st Division is now engaged. In an adjoining zone the Canadian on patrol operations in dense woods 2nd Infantry Brigade concentrated while the 3rd Brigade was out on field manoeuvres miles away learning the lessons of advance and withdrawal under varying conditions.

BRITISH DEBATE RECALLS EVENTS OF PAST 2 YEARS

Neville Chamberlain Has Had More Than Average Premier's Share of Grief

PRE-MUNICH SCENES

Controversy Over Munich Will be Argued for Rest of British History

(By Guy Rhoades, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Prime Minister Chamberlain, kicked around for two days by his political opposition and most of the British Press, still clings to his office and guesses he will resign later, perhaps after a new government has been lined up and is ready to take over. Mr. Chamberlain has experienced considerably more than the average Prime Minister's share of grief since he succeeded Lord Baldwin in 1937.

Opposition shouts in the House of Commons the last couple of days were mere whispers compared to the uproar of crowds which jammed Downing Street in the days of the 1938 Munich crisis.

Those crowds, organized mainly by the Communist party and other leftist organizations, shouted: "Stand by the Czechs—Chamberlain must go." Men with kettle drums beat out the time for them.

Country's Railroads Taken Over by Nazi Army Command

Berlin, May 9 (AP)—The German army has taken command of the country's railroads over the Whitsuntide Holiday period this weekend, exerting rigorous control over all civilian traffic, it was reported reliably tonight.

Lieut.-Colonel Bork, transport chief of the German General Staff, is in charge of the railways during the period.

For days the press has been urging Germans not to travel over the holiday. Now placards in stations notify travellers that regular train schedules cannot be guaranteed.

APPEALS FOR WORKERS

Cardiff, Wales, May 9 (CP) — Supply Minister Leslie Burgin said today that much of the success of Britain's armament effort depends on the rapid expansion of the machine tool industry.

He appealed in an address for more night shifts and more skilled workers.

"Absorption of labor is not yet fast enough," Mr. Burgin said. He suggested as a factory motto: "Let no machine idle."

NAZI PARACHUTE TROOPS DROPPED, SAYS STOCKHOLM

Report States Enemy Plans Rear Attack on British Besiegers at Narvik

Stockholm, May 9 (AP). — The German air force was reported today to have dropped parachute troops just northeast of Narvik for rear attack on the Allied forces besieging the German garrison at that Norwegian ore port, far above the Arctic Circle.

These were said to have been reinforcements for other parachute troops dropped behind the Allied siege ring. There was no indication whether large enough numbers had been dropped to threaten the offensive of Narvik.

The situation was reported at least temporarily stalemated by heavy snowstorms with the Germans still clinging to their entrenched positions on a mountain which slopes steeply down to Narvik from a peak near the Swedish border.

The Allies apparently are now using skilled French Alpinists and specially trained Polish units in an effort to gain positions from which they can shell the Germans out of their machine-gun emplacements.

WANT "L. G." AS PRIME MINISTER.

London, May 9—(CP) — The Daily Mail in a front page editorial today said the government of 71-year-old Prime Minister Chamberlain "must resign" and advocated selection of 79-year-old David Lloyd George, Prime Minister during the last war, as his successor with the First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill, in complete control of strategy.

SUBJECT TO CIVIL LAW

Hamilton, May 9 (CP).—"It is a most important thing to show soldiers that they are subject to civil law as well as to military law," Geo. W. Ballard, K.C., Crown Attorney, said in court today after Magistrate James McKay had convicted Pte. Edwin C. Morris of assaulting Pte William Bridge. Both men are with local regiments.

Britain's Leader Will Not Make Hasty Decision

Early Reports Indicate Mr. Chamberlain Might Offer His Seals of Office to His Majesty but Now Believed He Will Confer With Followers to Canvass Whole Situation

COALITION NOT LIKELY

Members Leave Parliament When Notified by Sir Samuel Hoare—Churchill Admits Full Responsibility for Not Attacking Trondheim With Navy—Tells House Germany's Numerical Superiority in Airplanes Caused Setback in Norway

By J. F. Sanderson
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 9. —(CP Cable) — Prime Minister Chamberlain has agreed to make sweeping changes in his ministry, it was reported in political circles today, while the feeling grew that Britain's wartime leader had abandoned precipitate action over his own resignation.

Earlier reports had indicated Mr. Chamberlain might offer his seals of office to the King today, but now it is believed that he will spend some time conferring with his followers and canvassing the whole situation before deciding on action.

Willing to Overhaul Cabinet

The Prime Minister was reported to have told a group of Conservative members of the House of Commons this afternoon at a meeting in Westminster that he is willing to overhaul the Ministry and admit Labor Liberals and rebel Tories. But whether they would be willing to serve under him remained doubtful.

Another Conservative Committee under the Marquess of Salisbury, whose father was once Prime Minister, agreed that since a coalition of all parties under Mr. Chamberlain appeared to be impossible, he should resign.

Geoffrey Mander, Liberal, told the House this afternoon that "consultations are going on now as to whether, by getting rid of the Chancellor of the Exchequer (Sir John Simon) and the Secretary for Air (Sir Samuel Hoare), the Prime Minister might be allowed to carry on with partially fresh colleagues."

Mr. Mander said such a move would be "perfectly useless".

FRENCH CABINET HOLDS MEETING

Deliberations Will be Continued on May 14 It Was Announced

Paris, May 9—(AP)—The French Cabinet met in a three-hour session today to discuss the situation in Norway following the Allied withdrawal.

It was announced the Cabinet would "continue its deliberations" on May 14, two days before Parliament resumes it labors after a two-week vacation over Whitsuntide.

A ministerial meeting scheduled for this afternoon with President Albert Lebrun to hear a detailed statement from Premier Paul Reynaud was cancelled.

Allied Orders For Warplanes Made in U. S. Expected to Speed Up

Washington, May 9—(AP)—An official British admission that the Allies were inferior to Germany in air power stirred expectations today of a speed-up in Anglo-French orders for United States-made warplanes.

Aviation authorities, conversant with negotiations to date, said they were puzzled by the lag in Allied purchases.

It has been six weeks since the last of the army's newest military ships was released for sale abroad, yet the Allied purchasing mission has announced contracts for only about 1,900 planes out of a projected $1,000,000,000 order for a fleet of possibly 8,000.

Members of the Allied mission had been stressing a desire for speed, and officials consequently believed that release of the latest American models would be followed promptly by mass orders for Allied air reinforcements. This expectation has gone unfilled.

CANADASTRONGER AT END OF WAR

F. J. Horning, Economist of Bank of Canada, Tells U. S. Securities Commission

Washington, May 9 (AP).—F. J. Horning, economist for the Bank of Canada, told the United States Securities Commission today that the end of the war would find Canada "economically stronger than ever in her history."

Horning said the dominion's role in this war would be chiefly that of a "supplier of munitions, foods and other necessary materials." He testified at a hearing on a proposed reorganization of International Utilities Corporation.

Horning said that at present Canada did not contemplate extensive military participation comparable to that of the last war because "at the moment it is not deemed necessary." Its contribution, he added, in addition to that as a supplier, will include the Empire Air Training Plan and "relatively small contingents overseas". Canada enlisted 600,000 men in the first great war, of whom about 450,000 served abroad.

National Credit Preserved.

Horning said financial regulations had been imposed which would "have the broad effect of building a wall around Canada economically and bringing all external business under official purview." He said this was done with a view to preserving the dominion's "national credit unimpaired".

Noting that in the last war the Canadian federal public debt had increased seven-fold, the economist said Canadians had "borne this huge burden with equanimity" and that the experience since then had shown the country's economy "sufficiently strong and well conceived to withstand this heavy strain, even during the years of severe recession in business as in the 1930's."

He said the present cost of the war is around $1,000,000 a day and that later commitments might reach $500,000,00 a year. This compared, he said, with a peak expenditure during the first great war of $446,500,000 in 1918-19.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

LETTERING PLACED ON POLICE CAR

In order that it may be identified more readily, the lettering "Belleville Police Dep't" has been painted on the sides of the Belleville police cruiser. The lettering clearly brings out the words in two inch white letters on a black background. "Other cities have such information painted on the sides of their police cruisers and we thought the idea should be put into practice in Belleville in order to assist the public in policing of the community," added Chief Kidd as he scrutinized the new paint job on the police car this morning.

BELLEVILLE FREE OF CONTAGION

Although there is a serious outbreak of whooping cough in Peterborough, Dr. G. S. Cronk, local Medical Health Officer, stated today there were no serious cases of whooping cough in Belleville. "There are a few isolated cases of measles in Belleville, but generally speaking there is no immediate danger and contagious diseases are at a minimum." A total of eleven homes were placarded in warning of whooping cough in Peterborough this week.

SCENIC HIGHWAY TO BE CONSTRUCTED

A scenic highway, to be constructed on Highway No. 2 east of Gananoque and along the north shore of the St. Lawrence River, will be completed by the Department of Highways this year, it was announced in Gananoque recently. The highway will also link Gananoque with the new international Thousand Island bridge, thus tending to increase international tourist trade throughout Eastern Ontario.

MAIN STREETS GIVEN GOOD FLUSHING

Belleville main streets took on a bright and clean hue this morning as the result of a thorough flushing given the downtown pavements last night While all good citizens slumbered peacefully in their comfortable beds, members of the city fire department flushed the pavement with the employment of city fire hose. The pavements along Front and Bridge Streets were given a thorough dousing. Three city firemen, armed with a short length of hose flushed the main street from the upper bridge to the Dundas Street intersection and a portion of East Bridge Street. If found practical this method of cleaning and flushing the main streets in Belleville will be continued throughout the summer months in an effort to minimize the rapidly-collecting debris and to keep the dust settled.

REGIMENT NEEDS SPORTS EQUIPMENT

The lack of sports equipment among the soldiers of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment stationed at Picton is prompting the enlisted men to take the initiative and do something about the matter. Yesterday numerous soldiers from the Picton regiment were in Belleville offering dance tickets for sale to the passersby and reported a fair response from the dance-minded public. The boys expressed the hope, that enough tickets would be sold to enable them to purchase ample sports equipment to afford recreational enjoyment for the troops in their leisure hours.

Police Blotter

Following a provincial-wide radio broadcast seeking the whereabouts of two local girls who ran away from their home here Tuesday, Whitby police informed Chief Kidd last night that the girls had spent Tuesday night in that town and yesterday morning left in the general direction of Toronto.

The girls were Ann and Patricia Wilson, aged 16 and 20 years respectively. The girls are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. J. Wilson, 149 Pinnacle St. Today Mr. and Mrs. Wilson were in conversation with Toronto authorities, through Chief Kidd's office, seeking further information of their daughters.

While patrolling Highway No. 2 as a night patrol, Provincial Constable W. E. Smith arrested a transient, who gave his name as George Roach, in front of the Belleville Hospital last night. Constable Smith lodged Roach in the city police cells after stating the accused man was in such an intoxicated condition that he was staggering on the open highway and in danger of being struck by passing motor vehicles. Today Roach was released by Chief Kidd and told to "get out of town."

No other arrests being necessary left the cell block available for the 15 transients who sought shelter there last night.

Exterior Brickwork Now Completed

With the completion of the exterior brickwork on the south portion of the new store being constructed on Front Street by the Canadian Department Stores, workmen were engaged this morning in taking down the scaffolding from which the bricklayers have been working and thus viewers are able to form an opinion as to how the completed building will appear. Of three-storey construction the new building is faced with handsome white brick, which will add considerably to the appearance of Front Street, when entirely completed. Interior work on the building is going on pace with the sub floor of all three stories being completely laid. Much of the finish work of the interior has been let out to sub-contractors.

London, May 9—(CP)—The Admiralty announced today that six officers and 35 seamen are "missing" from the submarine Starlet and five officers and 48 men from the submarine Tarpon. Both were reported on April 30 to be overdue and presumed to be lost.

CAST INCLUDES 28 MEMBERS

Amateur Production of "Stage Door" for Benefit of Red Cross

A bevy of Belleville beauties, twenty-eight in number, are included in the cast of characters of the play "Stage Door" to be presented in aid of the Belleville Branch of the Red Cross at the Collegiate Auditorium on Friday evening. The production is being produced and directed by Alex Cann, well-known Broadway and Hollywood actor-director, who recently joined the Royal Canadian Air Force and is stationed at Trenton. Mr. Cann has appeared in several New York productions, 52 movie plays and last season directed "Stage Door" in connection with the "Little Theatre Movement" in the United States.

"Stage Door" is the story of a New York theatrical home, where numerous young and aspiring actresses reside and the story is based on the trials and tribulations of these young stars in the making. The lead is taken by Miss Joan Maraskas, who takes the part of Terry Randall, a young actress who has visions, while the part of Jean Maitland is taken by Miss Jean Stoble. The Russian pianist, Olga Brant, is portrayed by Miss Bernice Saunders with other well known local amateur talent, such as Court Miller, Harold Carruthers, Mary Forster included in a full cast of 32 characters. Mr. Cann takes the part of Larry Westcott, a theatrical publicity man. Special lighting effects have been installed by Mr. Cann to assure the desired settings.

The entire net proceeds of "Stage Door" will be given to the work of the Canadian Red Cross.

Three Quarters Of Fund Required Is Now Collected

The sum of $5,177.50 has been contributed toward the local Y.M.C.A. War and Home Service Campaign it was revealed following the district campaigners' weekly meeting and tabulations of receipts at the "Y" Tuesday evening. The official figures released Tuesday night thus show that approximately three quarters of the objective set for this district has been realized with $1,782.50 yet to be collected if the local objective of $6,950 is reached.

Although in many places the National Campaign is officially closed, the local workers will continue to make calls in order to complete the lists assigned to them. The books are being left open for that reason because there are some two hundred cards yet to come in and officials state that if anyone has been overlooked, donations can be sent to "Y" or a telephone call will bring one of the workers around to collect them.

Appreciation of the efforts of the campaign workers was expressed by J. E. Shortt, Secretary of the Y.M.C.A. following the meeting. "I wish to thank the committee chairmen for their energetic work which is seen in the amount we have collected this far, and the thanks of the "Y" goes to all the workers who put an extra effort into the campaign this year," Mr. Shortt stated.

Employment Conditions In City Definitely On the Uptrend

General employment conditions in the city are definitely on the uptrend, according to Employment Superintendent W. D. Ross today.

Registration files, which reached proportions during the winter never before experienced are gradually decreasing, through the placement system and other phases of securing work.

There are still a number of building tradesmen available in the city, but skilled mechanical labor is at a premium. Farm help is scarce with potential laborers generally refusing to work for the scale of wages offered by farmers.

Skilled domestics are conspicuous by their absence, and the number of inexperienced girls available for housework a week ago is being rapidly absorbed by employers.

Casual employment, odd jobs etc., have increased during the past few days with the advent of Spring cleaning and other seasonal employment.

Factory Patrons To be Consulted

Discussion of the proposed amalgamation of Springbrook, Harold and Enterprise cheese factories, and to build a new factory which would serve the patrons of all three on a site to be chosen, resulted in a tabling of the motion until patrons of all factories had been consulted, it was decided at a meeting held this week in Harold.

The meeting was addressed by C. E. Lackner, Department of Agriculture and Messrs. Frank Robinson and J. L. Irwin, George Bailey, president of Harold factory, presided.

Although the pros and cons of the proposal were thoroughly discussed, representatives of the three factories involved, voted for a separate meeting of the patrons of each factory concerned, and for securing the approval of stockholders before proceeding further with the plan.

Record Attendance of Stirling Oddfellows at Divine Service

Stirling—In the warm sun of the first really Springlike Sabbath of the year, the largest turnout of members and visitors of the Stirling I.O.O.F., Stirling Rebekah Lodge and the Stirling Encampment were led in their annual church parade by the Stirling Citizens' Band. Assembling at the lodge hall on Front St., and bedecked with colorful regalia of the Fraternity the long procession proceeded to St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church which was filled to capacity for the inspirational service which included a fine message by Rev. W. H. V. Walker and special music under the capable leadership of Miss Grace Pitman, organist and choirleader.

Basing his thoughts upon the story of the "Good Samaritan", Rev. Walker delivered an inspiring address in which he emphasized the power of neighbourliness in the redemption of those travelling on the "down road". The three links of the "Independent Order of Oddfellows" exemplified Christianity for which the world of today is so hungry.

During the service a large choir under the capable direction of Miss Pitman offered two special numbers, an anthem "Jesus the calm that fills my breast" and a vocal quartet featuring Mrs. W. H. V. Walker, Mr. Clayton Tummon and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Eggleton entitled "Just outside the door". Organ prelude interlude and postlude music included Grand Chorus (Th. Dubois), Chantelle (Cicero), Triumphal March (M. Costa). Following the service the procession led by the Stirling band passed through the village for general dismissal at the lodge hall.

St. Paul's Women's Association

About forty ladies were present at the May meeting of St. Paul's W.A. held at the home of Mrs. J. L. Good on Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. P. N. McKee, president presided over the meeting which opened with the use of the theme song and prayer by Mrs. W. J. Scott. Mrs. Nora Westcott presented the secretary's report and also the communications received. Six cards and four letters of condolence were sent out during the month. A complete financial report was presented by Mrs. R. B. Duffin, Treasurer. Reporting for the visiting committee Mrs. J. J. Wilson said twenty-seven calls were made by the committee. Mrs. E. Nicholson was appointed convener of the visiting committee for the month of May. During the business period, Mrs. W. Elliott and Mrs. Nora Wescott were appointed official delegates to the W.A. convention to be held at Rednersville.

At this point Mrs. R. A. Patterson, convener of the program committee took charge and the meeting continued with the use of hymn and prayer by Mrs. S. Williams. The Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. M. Hick who also offered a poem "God Holds the Key". An impressive memorial service was conducted by Mrs. Geo. Pollard for three members of the Association who had passed on since the last meeting, Mrs. A. Martin, Mrs. Park and Mrs. Geo. Livingstone. Included in the service was the use of Whitcombe's Riley's "They are Just Away" and a memorial hymn.

The address of the day was prepared by Mrs. Arthur Andrews and delivered by Mrs. Patterson entitled "Sermons and Sandwiches". The paper dealt thoroughly with the social side of religious life. "There are those who object to luncheons and suppers etc., but in both the Old and New Testament Scriptures the two are closely associated. Feasting was a part of the worship in many cases". The address was interesting and enlightening and the members expressed their gratitude to the writer for its preparation.

In keeping with the spirit of the oncoming Mother's Day several numbers associated with the celebration were given including the following poems. "My Opportunity" read by Mrs. J. Good; "God speaks to a Mother" by Mrs. R. A. Patterson. An instrumental number "Melody in F" was given by Mrs. M. Pidgeon and this part of the meeting closed with a hymn and the Benediction. Dainty luncheon was served by the ladies of the committee and a social hour enjoyed. Mrs. Wm. Fox expressed the thanks of the organization to Mrs. J. L. Good and Mrs. J. E. Good for their fine hospitality. On the committee in charge of the arrangements were Mrs. R. A. Patterson, Mrs. M. Hick, Mrs. E. Nicholson, Mrs. Arthur Andrews, Mrs. Geo. Pollard, Mrs. Roy Finkle, Mrs. H. Chambers, and Mrs. Sid Williams.

The Challenge to Industry

The demands of this war may make Canada's industrial production vital to the Empire.

The challenge is met best when employees are given a sense of financial security. They want to know that there will be funds—

(1) when accident or sickness causes lay-offs

(2) when hospital and surgical bills must be paid

(3) when death occurs from any cause.

Morale depends upon "the unswerving conviction that our nation, having exhausted every means to escape war, has been forced to accept the challenge or die—physically and morally," Major Kilpatrick said.

FINLAND REPAYS NORWAY'S HELP

News which shows where the heart of Finland lies is told in despatches that Norway, now afflicted with the presence in her country of an invader is receiving hospital, ambulance and medical help from Finland in return for what Norway did for Finland when Finland was passing through the trials of invasion. It is said that every bit of hospital equipment and other aid which can be spared from Finnish hospitals is being sent to help stricken Norway.

Such an incident gives support to the view that there is possible a new international order of peace and security which Britain and France hope to see develop after the war ends.

PLANES AND SHIPS AND BLOCKADE

How far is this war going to veer from the course of the last Great War?

Planes have been greatly perfected and warships likewise been advanced to meet the menace of the plane. These two factors are certain to have a vast effect upon the course of the struggle. Out of the campaign in Norway has come one fact, the British navy is relatively stronger than the enemy to a marked degree. Hitler threw away, it is said, a third of his in his seizure of Norway.

The relative strength of the air forces of the Allies and the enemy is not publicly known.

On the West Front stand two walls of defence. Will the rival forces essay the attempt to drive through these lines?

The naval strength of Britain, being relatively higher than the enemy's as a result of the losses of Hitler's navy, has through this increased superiority, added that much more to the intensification of the blockade of the Allies against Germany.

YEAR'S WORK OF FILM CENSORS

Number of films submitted to the Ontario Motion Picture Censorship and Theatre Inspection Branch for the year ending March 31st., 1940 by fifteen licensed exchanges was 2,278. Of these 184 were altered. United States films totalled 1,915 of which 145 were altered, and British films 54 of which 15 were altered. There were five Canadian films with no alterations and 304 foreign films with 24 alterations.

This year not a single feature was rejected. One, a U. S. production, was rejected by the board and later passed by the board of appeal.

British films this past year showed a marked superiority over those received during previous years, the report shows. Several of these have had record runs throughout the Province and public appreciation of these films has been shown in increased attendance at the theatres where they were shown. "The Board hopes that during the coming year this high standard will be maintained by the British producers," is the board's comment.

This is war time and an extra duty has fallen on the film censors with the need for great caution so as to avoid the spread of propaganda. As a result, all foreign language films, with the exception of French talking films, have been barred from showing in this province.

The Board of Motion Picture Censors has taken the firm position that war considerations must have precedence over any contention that the screen should enjoy the greatest degree of freedom. Producers and their representatives have shown the finest spirit of cooperation in their willingness to meet the views of the people of Ontario at a considerable cost to themselves without complaint.

Praise is given in the report for those constructive forces of the motion picture industry which have turned the great power they control "into a condemnation of the totalitarian outlook."

The power of the motion picture to portray life has been allowed to do good work in reference to the pressing social problems. Such subjects have been passed upon as the plight of the transient, the migratory worker, the mentally afflicted, slums, venereal disease and immorality, whenever subjects are presented constructively and in good taste.

WAR SAVING CERTIFICATES

Canadians will have the privilege of buying war savings certificates in small denominations. This will supplement the issue of war loans and will provide the opportunity for smaller investments in the national war cause.

One of the important factors in the use of certificates will be that they will inculcate thrift as well as providing a means which everyone desires of assisting in the war effort. There is not the slightest doubt of the success of the plan.

The certificates will be in small amounts and the campaign for the sale of certificates will continue throughout the war period, it is believed.

The method of raising money by the sale of certificates has been proven in Britain to be very successful. In the United States certificates have also proven to be a method of raising money for government purposes. It is stated that over two and a quarter billion dollars of money has been loaned to the United States Government in this way.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

German propaganda machinery is working at full speed in order to confuse the European situation and create a gigantic mental smoke screen, probably with a view to launching another move in the German strategic program.

As usual the Allies are accused of aggressive designs, this time in the Balkans. It does not follow, however, that the German move will come in that quarter. The conquest of southern Norway enlarged the area from which German aircraft and submarines might launch attacks on Great Britain but brought the Germans no closer to British shores.

To get closer they must strike through Holland or Belgium or both. The uneasiness being created in the Balkans may be a ruse to divert attention there while an attack on the Low Countries is launched .

On the other hand, the alarm created in Holland may be a move to set the Allies at work preparing to assist Holland with naval, land and air forces which otherwise might be held in readiness for a move in another quarter.

At the same time Allies probably are not without guile in their present moves. The intimation from the King of Norway that Norwegians would fight on for their independence and that he had reason to believe the disadvantage the Norwegians suffered in a shortage of equipment would be corrected hints at further Allied pressure on the invaders of the Scandinavian kingdom.

Italy's Lot

The Italian housewife is faced with the growing problem of low wages and high prices. In Italy, today, (according to private advices) coffee costs $1.12 per pound; butter, $1.25; sugar, 20 cents; meat, 50 cents. Soap is 14 cents a cake and getting scarcer. Bread of poor quality is quoted at 14 cents a small loaf. Flour is 8 1-2 cents a pound. In Canada it is from 4 to 5 cents.

Compare wages: Male farm workers get 40 to 50 cents a day; women farm workers, 35 to 40 cents. Women factory workers get 35 to 40 cents a day. Miners, among the most highly paid of Italian workmen, get 75 cents to $1.00 a day.

Taking these figures as a basis, a farm worker in Italy works a whole day for the equivalent of 2 1-2 lbs of sugar. A moderately paid mechanic would work three days to buy a twelve-year old boy a pair of wool stockings for school. A youth clerking in a cigar store earns about enough in a day to buy 1 1-4 pounds of sugar.

Sugar is rationed as also is coffee.

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

The Fifth Column in Southeastern Europe

ZURICH.

IF AND when the war actually comes to southeastern Europe, it will have been preceded long before by the fifth column of those agents, secret and open, those conspirators, spies, commercial agents, provacteurs, revolutionists and propagandists, who search out the Henleins and the Tisos, and the Quislings, the malcontents and the traitors, the idealists and the rascals, who prepare the way and open the gates for the soldiers.

This is a strange war. It is not only a war. It is a revolution. There is little chivalry in it, unless it be perhaps among common soldiers who do their tasks, among airmen who form a transcendental society of their own, and among seamen who fight in actual conflict with their equals according to old tradition. Waters and roads are mined by soldiers. That is war. But nations are mined and undermined in other ways. The Nazis have gone to school with the Russians and have been good students. The Italian Fascists know the technique also. Russia, Italy and Germany are all led by revolutionists who have made subversive movements into instruments of conquest. In this field the Allies are absolutely no match for them.

The Nazis, especially, proceed with a scientific thoroughness. There is not a disgruntled individual, not an over-ambitious statesman or politician not a resentive social class, not a discontented national minority not an avaricious business man, whom they overlook. Like strategists surveying the terrain upon which the campaign is to be conducted, mountains and streams that must be crossed, swamps that must be circumvented, the estates and farms upon which troops can be quartered; who study the climate and seasons, who know when the roads will be muddy or under snows, estimating every advantage and every handicap, these twentieth century revolutionary leaders sap the very structure of the society against which they are campaigning, and know all the weak points, which can be made weaker.

I write this on the train between Trieste and Zurich, on the way back from a tour which has taken me to Italy and Turkey, to Rumania, Hungary and the two provinces of Yugoslavia, Serbia and Croatia—from the east of Germany to the Dardanelles, from the Adriatic to the Black Sea and back again. In no country is the aspect of things quite the same as it is across the border in the neighboring country. But one aspect is everywhere typical: the technique of subversion as a weapon of conflict.

Because the Nazis have perfected this weapon with the most meticulous thoroughness, while, at the same time, their methods are the most crude and the most obvious, it is easiest to study the German side of the picture. The Russians are more devious, and the Italians more inhibited, subtle and Machiavellian.

In contrast to the Allies who pursue their own political aims along the more trodden and traditional paths, working through governments, established commercial connections, and espionage organizations euphemistically called "intelligence services," the Germans, who use these mediums also, vastly expand them in an effort to reach, tap and influence the broad masses. I have counted ten ways in which they work; I have doubtless overlooked numerous others.

1. The German minorities. In all the southeastern countries there are large colonies of German-speaking people, settled there for generations, but never completely divorced from the influence of the mother country. These people have been worked upon for years. They have their own Nazi organizations, their own Gestapo, and they receive instructions from headquarters. In Yugoslavia, German settlers began purchasing land along the Danube a short time ago. To counteract this, the Yugoslav government published a decree forbidding the sale or transfer of any land immediately proximate to this most important stream, or within fifty kilometers of its shore.

2. Through other dissatisfied national minorities. Thus the Magyar as well as the German minority in Rumania, has been promised reunion with Hungary when the time comes to "break the Rumanian yoke." In Croatia, the northwestern province of Yugoslavia which has always been rebellious under the highly centralized government concentrating its power in Belgrade the movement for Croatian independence is encouraged. Its leader is a man named Bucak, with a scavenger named Buc. The powerful Croatian Peasant party, led by Dr. Matchek, is against this group because they know that an "independent" Croatia, divorced from the rest of Yugoslavia and surrounded by Germany and Italy, would very soon forfeit its Adriatic coastline to Italy, and in any case be about as independent as Slovakia is today.

But there are idealists and scoundrels ready to join any movement that can call itself patriotic. Despite the fact that the Independence party (the Frankists) are responsible for having produced the camarilla that, organized, drilled and nourished on Hungarian and Italian soil, committed one of the most wretched crimes of the decade—the assassination of King Alexander and the French Foreign Minister Barthou at Marseilles—they are not yet finished. The local leader, Budsk, was recently imprisoned by the authorities. Only a few days ago his wife was found dead, head-downward in a well. The Frankists raised the cry of murder although the verdict was suicide, and laid the crime at the door of the Peasant party. Budak was released and his wife's funeral became the occasion for a great demonstration in the Croatian capital of Zagreb, where the Frankists appeared for the first time in a distinguishing dress—a sort of pill-box cap.

In the next few days, leaflets were distributed in Ljubljana, the capital of Slovenia, another Yugoslav province that wishes for home rule. These leaflets, supposed to have been distributed by students, demanded Trieste, Fiume and the Litoral—parts of Italy— for Yugoslavia. Immediately there were counter demonstrations in Italy. No responsible element in Croatia or Slovenia could possibly have been guilty of such nonsense. Yugoslavia wants nothing less than an incident with Italy at this time, and even the Frankists, supported by Italy, could not sincerely wish an incident.

Such incidents are not uncommon. Within the last three weeks the former Prime Minister of Serbia has been arrested, together with the Chief of Police. The arrests were minimized in the press and attributed to purely internal reasons, but it is an open secret in foreign diplomatic circles that both men were pro-German, with Fuehrer complexes, nor are those facts alone sufficient to cause the arrest of two such prominent figures.

The point is that constant interference in internal political affairs is a cardinal policy of the undermining process.

3 and 4. Commercial agents and commercial offices exercise a constant pressure both upon individuals and upon the press. Germany is and always has been the most important seller and buyer in all the southeastern countries. The acquisition of Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland, along with industries and markets of those countries, has increased her position. In Budapest, Belgrade, Zagreb and Bucharest shops are full of German wares of all kinds. The great German companies, such as A. E. G. (electrical products) and the sellers of machinery, cutlery, cosmetics and similar products, luggage, cameras and novelty articles, are heavy advertisers in the newspapers, and their pressure greatly reduces the impartiality of the press. The newspapers almost invariably give front page prominence to the official German communiques regarding the war and bury the Allies' news in condensed form in the back pages.

Every commercial office in this part of the world is a propaganda display. In Zagreb, for instance, the German Travel Bureau was displaying a few days ago photographs of the finding of the Polish documents facsimilies of some of the correspondence, together with many photographs from the Norwegian front. A long queue of Zagreb citizens were staring at the display. The English Cunard Line office, further down the street, contented itself with a long account and a boring picture of the British fleet, which had probably been in the window since before the start of the war.

The "sensational" Ribbentrop revelations attempting to prove that it was the British and not the Germans who violated the independence of Norway were not taken seriously by a single government official anywhere with whom I was able to talk, but the Germans believe that the broad public is greatly influenced by this sort of sensationalism. They hammer on it inside and out, while the Allies do nothing to counteract the impression upon the nationals.

5. Contacts between German and local business men are used constantly to emphasize the rationalization, efficiency and progress which would ensue from German economic organization of the entire Danubian basin, and the advantages to executives, who, when the change came, would already have become recognized as sympathetic and willing to co-operate.

6. Widespread anti-capitalistic propaganda, spread among the masses mostly in the form of pamphlets, accusing Great Britain and France of trying to quench the social revolutions of the Nazis and the Russians. This propaganda makes full use of quotations from British left wingers themselves, depicting the worst aspects of social life in Great Britain and France, and is supported by Russian propaganda as well.

7. Appeals to soldiers and the population at large, depicting the enormous strength of the German Army and the complete hopelessness of resistance, with terrifying references to the fate of Poland and Norway and the blissful happiness prevailing in wise and reasonable Denmark. This propaganda is distributed by leaflets and supported by the German press which has wide distribution all through this part of the world, reaches it earlier than British, French or Swiss newspapers, and is published in a language more widely spoken here than any other foreign tongue. Especially effective are the German illustrated papers, which tell their story in a language that even the illiterate can understand. The Allies have no press whatsoever that can tend to offset this.

8. Anti-Communism. The Nazis do not hesitate to talk almost the exact language of the Communists in addressing factory workers and miners, and to present themselves as the bulwark against Communism to the conservative peasants. At the same time in the Slav countries and to peasants and workers alike they undermine the malevolence to their cause of Russia, who in the Slavic peasant mind is still Mother Russia, whether imperial or Soviet.

9. The actual corruption of officials. It is very difficult to trace this, but it exists on a grand scale, according to the evidence of all who know these countries well from long residence in them.

10. Terror. The candid revelation of what happens to individuals and officials who take an outspoken stand against the Nazi plans. "If we succeed and you are known to our enemy, exile, concentration camp or death will be your lot."

Many who sincerely believe that the Germans will lose the war nevertheless contemplate the possibility of a temporary German occupation and have no desire to be its victims.

The Henleins, the Seyss-Inquarts and the Quislings are the German advance guard who are all over southeastern Europe. The Allied counter-espionage counter- propaganda and counter-organization does not even touch the peoples whom the Nazis reach. For when the Nazis fail to reach the responsibile they go after the irresponsible, and they have learned from experience how valuable both can be to them.

Surpliced Choir of Indians Appeals to White Tourists, Testifies to Anglican Missions

A choir of surpliced, full-blooded Indians whose singing attracts white tourists to its place of worship during the summer months, is not only a distinctive feature of the Church of St. John the Baptist, Walpole Island, Ont., but also a living testimonial to the value of the work of the Church of England in Canada among the Indians of the Dominion.

That the choir is so regarded in the neighborhood of Walpole Island, is shown by the fact that it is constantly being invited to participate in the services of other churches of the district, and has proved a valuable stimulus to interest in Indian mission work, says the missionary in charge of St. John's.

At present, he reports, the church, with a seating capacity of 200, has an average attendance of 100, some 80 boys and girls also being regular attendants at the Church of England Sunday school. The full total of Church of England adherents in the Island Reserve is given as 740, including whites who are connected with the administration of the reserve.

Walpole Island the report mentions, originally was settled by Chippewas, under the leadership of the famous Chief Tecumseh. Later a band of Pottowattamies managed to establish themselves on the island. Feuds between the two tribes arose, and, though the newcomers desired to accept Christianity, they declined to do so at the hands of the teachers of the Chippewas. The result was that the Methodist Church was invited to build a church for the Pottowattamies.

The resident missionary of the Anglican church states that it is almost impossible to arrange a specified Sunday for baptismal services, since scarcely a week passes but what some Indian couple will arrive with a new baby which they insist must be baptized immediately.

He points also to the Indian's practical views on education. Few Indians desire that their children shall become professional men and women and the teaching at their schools aims at producing carpenters, machinists, and skilled laborers generally. An exception is that many of the girls enter the nursing profession, to which, says the report, they are especially suited.

This practical side of the Indian character, the report shows, calls upon the Church of England missionary to be much more than a spiritual guide. The Indian looks to him for advice on all business matters as well as on domestic affairs. He is also expected to bring about a reform of anything in Indian relations with the Dominion Government which the former may regard as unjust. In this last connection the report asserts, the Church has been successful on many occasions.

Misery in New Russia

Russia's Red Hand has fallen heavily on Eastern Poland. Ukrainian papers published in Canada and the United States tell of breadlines in the streets of Lemberg; of ragged hungry children; of untilled fields.

"Since the middle of March" says the "Narodne Slovo" (National Word) a Ukrainian paper published in Pittsburgh, "not a single private enterprise has been functioning in Lwow (Lemberg). Everything is nationalized. Private trade was liquidated by the Red Army by officials buying everything up and taking it to Russia. No new stocks were laid in. Rich lands are now facing starvation. There is no coal, wood, meat or butter to be had in Lwow at any price. All has been carted away and the promised supplies have proved to be a myth. The streets are filthy. Good clothes are no longer to be seen. Breadlines are always in evidence in front of government stores. The devaluation of the zloty has had catastrophic results".

"The estates and church lands have been confiscated and divided among the peasantry but this was accompanied by so many restrictions that the new owners are not owners at all. Farmers must give up to the government purchasing centres so much of their crop per hectare that there is not enough left for their own needs. Every cow and every horse is government branded. All fowl are listed and cannot be sold privately under penalty of a jail sentence".

"In spite of the war and upheavals experienced by Western Ukraine it is considered an Eldorado by the men who come from Central Russia. Many of them are bringing their families over, and these women and children were in such a ragged and dirty condition that the Soviet authorities have issued an order for them to arrive decently clad . . . . Ukrainian feeling against Communism is becoming acute."

The "Kanadyski Farmer" (Canadian Farmer), a Ukrainian weekly published in Winnipeg, reports that Russification of Ukrainian lands is proceeding apace. In the Don Basin school principals and teachers are not Ukrainians, nor are officers of the militia. Workers are officially supposed to work seven hours a day, but can only keep body and soul together by working ten to fourteen. Supplies are pitifully inadequate. Clothes are altogether lacking. Miners only talk to one another in whispers, and refrain from expressing an opinion for fear of being overheard for an unwise word means arrest and removal to no one knows where. The Ukrainians stick together and are strangely anti-Bolshevik.

At the recreation centres, Ukranians wondered at the poor appearance of the crowd. Only the party secretaries had fairly decent clothes. According to Ukranian workers, Russian villages are poor beyond description. "We did not know that there could be such poor people on earth," the story continues, "we never came into contact with the farmers, but we asked the officials why the peasants were so poor and they said it was because they would not work. We later realized that this was true. The peasants won't work for the regime, but they suffer terribly".

Not Theirs to Complain

The last people who should complain about the decision of the Allies to withdraw from the southern port of Norway are the Norwegians.

Before the invasion knowing as she knew that her only danger came from Germany, Norway played rigidly the part of neutral. Norway nagged the Allied governments over minor and technical breaches of neutrality—while the Germans sank Norwegian ships and killed Norwegian sailors, used Norwegian waters as a covered way for cargo vessels and warships. In their pitiful blindness the Norwegians refused to heed plain signs of the oncoming storm.

Then the Germans struck. Norway was helpless almost unarmed. Moreover here was treachery blatant and unashamed and Oslo, a city of 300,000 people, as we have read, was occupied by a force of but 1,500 Germans. Forts were surrendered without firing a shot.

Now the Norwegians are paying for the things they did and left undone in the months when Britain and France alone were fighting for the Norwegians and all other neutrals. No matter where Germany is beaten the victory of the Allies will free Norway—and Norway will regain her independence in no way but by Allied victory. But the campaign in Scandinavia will not be permitted to weaken the general strategic plan, nor to serve German aims.

Norway has not been abandoned, but in the circumstances Norway has no right to complain if the Allies fight this war in their own way.—Ottawa Journal.

Magic of Mother's Self Control

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

ANY intelligent mother who has mastered self-control has little or no difficulty in bringing up her child well. Self-mastery is the most essential trait for successful parenthood.

Until the child can move about, his control is entirely a matter of self-control by the one who cares for him. His discipline is her discipline. He doesn't even need to hear NO. His mother must train herself, making sure there are some things she must do and some things she must not do, in his care and guidance.

As this child begins walking, becomes a runabout, even when he goes to high school, self-control by the mother and father is essential to his happy and effectual guidance.

Psychology of It

Self-control means planning and sticking to the plans without fail. It means being always calm, and most calm when the child is most excited. It means speaking most softly when the child speaks most loudly. It means being loveliest when the child is ugliest. It does not mean just holding yourself in with great effort. Rather, it means you have so harnessed your emotions that they won't swell up ready for explosion. No one of us, of course, can ever hope to attain these ideals of self-control. Nevertheless, they are desirable objectives and some mothers never losing sight of them do seem about to arrive at them.

We tell parents to ignore the child in certain situations. Sometimes they say they do and think they do, when they don't. They make some outward gestures while the violent feelings are pent up within them and when they are not watching, these feelings reveal themselves.

A mother writing about an eight-year-old boy with a disagreeable temper can't understand why he does not improve, since she is sure she ignores him entirely when he "gets that way". "For example, we sent him away from the dinner table last evening and all finished our meal in misery, ignoring him."

Feelings Gave Her Away

She supposed she was ignoring him when she didn't look at him or talk to him, yet her feelings and the feelings of the whole family were thundering at him.

Think of all the emotions in the mother over the baby's lack of appetite. Even if she so controlled herself as not to nag at him or say a word, she unconsciously shouts aloud her feelings at him. Our strong emotions, especially those of fear and anger, may be most eloquent when we seal our lips; and the little child is keenly sensitive to these emotions.

We manage our emotions best when we don't have them or think we don't. We do it by planning our way of acting next time we know they are about to seize us; and then by training ourselves to act as we had planned.

Solving Parent Problems

Q—Would you forbid your child, say from three to 10 to play with certain other children within a block, whom you know to be "undesirable children"?

A.—As a rule, I would not, so long as they played out in the view of all and were not destroying property or annoying other people. I should not worry much about what my child heard so long as I maintained his love and complete confidence, having always answered all his questions.

Q.—Isn't the bully a coward?

A.—He practically always is. Therefore we help him most as we enable him to acquire more physical and social courage, help him learn to defend himself against others his size and age, and to enjoy more successes and approvals that seem to him worthwhile.

Fashion Flashes

CUT ON TOP of the smartest costumes are handsome white hats. A new model has a deep curving mushroom brim of white guipure lace with a fitted crown of white pique, made in two flanges, and slashed with navy grosgrain ribbon.

Details are important on many of the smarter new coats. For instance, a model in soft navy sheer wool has bishop sleeves a flaring skirt, and navy grosgrain banded insertions in squares and bands.

Meet Spring wearing smart new shoes. A nice sandal is in blue calf with dark red stitching forming a decorative motif beneath a piping of white kidskin.

Two for the money in fashion is the redingote plus frock ensemble. A smart redingote in navy woollen with edgings of navy silk braid discloses a frock of sky blue silk with a marine print in navy, white and red.

There's a whisper of rustling moire in the newest fashion shows. A suit of black silk moire is made with the long torso jacket which has white faille inserts in the collar and to form narrow cuff edgings. Jacket has a row of black jet buttons inset with gold motifs.

Very smart is the designer who thought up the idea of the detachable glove cuff. Thus a white kid glove has two gilt buttons on its cuff and comes with a red and blue kid cuff flange, either of which buttons onto the glove cuff. Otherwise the gilt buttons are just decorative.

Vatican City, May 8 (AP)—Pope Pius made it known today he shared widespread fears that other countries were in danger of invasion. Addressing an audience of 4,000 pilgrims, including 41 French children, at the Vatican the Pope said "a world poisoned with lies and disloyalty has lost the spiritual health of peace."

"The earth should be a place of concord," the Pontiff declared, "but instead the fire of war has broken out in various nations and is threatening to invade others."

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Difference in Wording

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I am very much confused by the difference between the wording of an "At Home" card when it is enclosed with the wedding invitation, and the wording when this card is enclosed with the announcement. Will you please be so kind as to set me right about this?

Mother of the bride-elect

There is a very definite difference between the wording of an At Home card enclosed with the wedding invitation and the At Home card enclosed with the announcement.

An At Home card enclosed with the invitation does not carry the name, since when the invitation is received, the bride-elect has not yet acquired her married name. The card may read like this:

At Home
after the first of July
Two Home Place
Denver, Colorado

If an At Home card is enclosed with the announcement, the married name is used on the card, since the card is mailed after the wedding. The card may then read like this:

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Underwood
At Home Two Home Place
after the first of July
Denver, Colorado

Gift for Man

Dear Miss Beeckman:

I have been going out with a young man who has been very nice to me. He has sent me flowers, candy, and so forth.

1. His birthday is next month and I would like to get him a gift. Would that be all right? What would be appropriate?

2. Should I have the gift sent to him or should I give it to him myself?

M. J.

1. It will be a thoroughly proper thing for you to send a birthday gift to this friend of yours.

Since his gifts to you have been chosen with such perfect taste, you should be especially careful that your gifts are chosen with equally good and discreet taste. Keep your eyes open to see if you can discover a book that he will especially enjoy, one of the excellent new biographies, for example, or a book on one of his pet sports or hobbies. You might select some item for his desk, or one or two initialled sheer linen handkerchiefs for evening wear.

2. I think it would be better to send the gift, perhaps enclosing a friendly little birthday-note of felicitations.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Don't Forget Mother on Mother's Day

Another year has swung around and again Mother's Day is with us. I'll not be sentimental and talk about your best friend. That goes without saying, if your mother has been cast in the mould God made when He created mothers.

With so many of us, alas, when the flowers, candy, gloves, and other little trifles the shops put out for the second Sunday in May are sent to mother, we feel our duty is done for another year. But not all sons and daughters take their mothers for granted. Love, devotion, even sacrifice, are given in full measure. With such sons and daughters, every day is Mother's Day.

But there are thousands as loving as they are thoughtless—yes, I mean just that. The idea that they'll get around to doing something really nice for mother they keep in the back of their minds, month after month, year after year. "Do it now" is relegated to the future. It comes as a cruel shock when mother is no longer with them, to be cheered by the little thought or letter which would have meant so much to her in life. The following is typical of so many letters which have come to this column in the first days of loss over a beloved parent:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"If mother had only been of the dependent type, her children would feel more resigned to her sudden passing, which has left us not only bewildered but with a feeling of guilt as well. Mother was such a good sport that none of us ever thought of her as dependent on us for affection or little attentions. It was the other way 'round. We depended on her.

"Our father died when we were small children. Mother managed to secure a job as postmistress in our town, and she kept a little shop as well. Through changing administrations she continued to hold the job as postmistress, because she was popular with everyone and gave complete satisfaction.

"When age made her give up the postmistress job she was financially independent of us all. Her little home was cleared of encumbrance, and she continued with the little shop. We were all so proud of her. No whining over old age or infirmity. She was so capable that we forgot, I'm afraid, that she starved for the little attentions her children and grandchildren could have given so easily.

"After her death we found her diary. On days when any of us wrote, or even sent a postcard, the entry began: 'Red Letter Day. Sonny has sent me a card.' 'Happy for a week over Julia's letter. They may come to see me next summer—wouldn't that be too heavenly?'

"Well, we didn't get 'round to visiting her very often, though we loved her devotedly. But we had our own husbands and children to look after, and I expect we forgot when we should have remembered. Now she is gone and it's too late. We used to be mildly amused over Mother's Day we thought it sentimental, and never sent the little gifts that would have made her so happy.

"I'm writing this, Miss Fairfax, in the hope that other sons and daughters, who like us, love their mothers devotedly, may remember Mother while she is here to be remembered.

Regretful."

This correspondent's letter is a better reminder than a Mother's Day sermon. If you can't afford even the small gifts, the shops suggest, please go to see her. Or write her a letter. Tell her about yourself, your husband, your children, your job, how you live. The letter will give her a feeling that she really belongs to you and you belong to her—it's a lonesome business, this growing old.

Kingston Presbyterial W. M. S. Of Presbyterian Church Holds Fifty-Fourth Annual Meeting

The 54th annual meeting of Kingston Presbyterial W.M.S. of the Presbyterian Church was held in St. Andrew's Church, Belleville, on Friday May 3rd with an unusually large attendance. The executive met at 1.30 DST with the president, Mrs. Darling, Gananoque, in the chair, who gave a prayer for guidance. The nominating committee of Miss Cameron, Newburgh, Mrs. P. Ranson, Belleville and Mrs. Penwarden, Kingston was chosen, also the resolutions committee of Mrs. Douglas, Deseronto, Mrs. MacDonald, Foxboro and Mrs. White, Roslin. Arrangements were made for a summer meeting in Deseronto the last Friday in August and the program to be given by the auxiliaries in the morning and the Young People in the afternoon. Arrangements were made to have a synopsis of all reports printed.

Roslin Auxiliary in Charge

The afternoon session was opened by Roslin Auxiliary in the worship period with Mrs. White and Mrs. MacDonald conducting it. Mrs. Alex Morrice of Belleville then gave delightful words of welcome and these were responded to by Miss Wallace of Kingston. The minutes of the last presbyterial meeting also of all executive meetings were read by Mrs. Harper Rollins, Stirling in the absence of Mrs. Cameron, Sunbury. The roll call was given by the corresponding secretary, Mrs. P. Ranson, Belleville and each auxiliary responded with the name of a missionary and where located. A hymn was sung and then the reports of each department were given. Miss Fowler, Kingston, reported a slight deficit.

Excellent Work by Young People

The Young Women's organizations were reported by Mrs. Penwarden, Kingston, which showed that the Katherine Farley group of Kingston had done excellent work. Mrs. W. H. V. Walker of Stirling gave the report of Mission Band and mentioned the excellent rally held in Stirling in July. Mrs. J. W. Douglas, Deseronto reported a slight decrease in "Glad Tidings" subscriptions. The Home Helpers report was given by Mrs. White, Roslin and Mrs. K. Watson, Kingston reported for the Welcome Welfare Department. Mrs. J. Farley, Belleville reported an unusually gratifying year for Library and Literature and of how much these were appreciated in lonely places in Canada. Mrs. J. Wallace of West Huntingdon reported the Life Membership work, which showed a slight decrease. Mrs. M. Tomkins, Stirling, spoke of the splendid papers to be had in the Exchange Dept. Miss MacFarlane, Kingston, gave a fine report of the work done among students in Kingston.

Press Report Given

The press report was given by Mrs. McCaffrey, Madoc, after which she gave the prayer of dedication of the year's work. Mrs. Bell, Belleville sang a beautiful solo and Mrs. Darling, Gananoque and Mrs. Fargey, Belleville, gave excellent reports of the Provincial meeting in Toronto. The offering was taken and Mrs. Williams of Toronto, the provincial president was introduced and answered any questions asked and gave many helpful suggestions. The Lord's Prayer closed a full session.

The ladies of St. Andrew's Church served supper in the church hall after which the United Church and Anglican Church sent greetings.

Affiliation Service

The evening session opened at 8 o'clock in the auditorium with a candle lighting and affilation service conducted by Mrs. Walker and Mrs. Ward, Belleville of a group of teen-age girls and Mission Band children. The processional hymn "Jesus Calls Us O'er the Tumult" was sung by the children carrying lighted candles. A Scripture reading was given and the hymn "Take My Life and Let It Be" was sung. The C.G.I.T. girls lighted more candles and gave the pledge "We pledge our love to Thy work, O God." The affiliation service was conducted by Mrs. J. Fargey, Beleville and the girls were welcomed into the fellowship of the presbyterial by Mrs. Darling, President and into the provincial by Mrs. Williams, President. The recessional hymn was "O, Jesus I Have Promised." The worship period was then conducted by West Huntingdon Auxiliary in which Mrs. Thompson read the lesson. Mrs. John Wallace spoke on "The Guidance of God", and Mrs. Wm. Shaw led in prayer. The greetings of presbytery were given by Rev. Mr. Walker of Belleville, moderator of the presbytery. He stressed the need for more young men for the ministry and also urged the W.M.S. to use their spiritual vitality for the furtherance of Christ's kingdom and for peace to reign once more on earth.

The minutes of the afternoon session were read by Mrs. H. Rollins, Stirling and Mrs. P. Ranson, the corresponding secretary gave a splendid report on all the activities of the officers and secretaries for the year, Our Supply Secretary, Mrs. Bateman, Belleville has moved to Toronto and Mrs. Hunter, Madoc was selected to take her place. The guest speaker, Mrs. Williams, Toronto was introduced and chose as her subject the words of the hymn "This is My Task", and took each line in the first stanza as "to love", "to serve", "to ponder over", and "to pray." She said that the love of Jesus is the message of the church and when a church has no message it dies. The love of Jesus must shine through us to help others. Love is never inactive and one of our great tasks at the present time is to keep Canada a Christian country as righteousness exalteth a nation. Many foreigners are lonely among us and we must reach these lonely places before the forces of evil do their deadly work. She cited that Mr. Prasenco, our Ukranian minister, in Toronto has written nearly 100 letters a month to Ukranian people in their own language. To counteract the flood of Communistic literature. She spoke of tribes of Indians in the mountains, who had never yet heard the gospel we receive so much and should have much to spare. She asked the members if they were praying and thinking in their own auxiliaries and churches and urged all to greater study of the Bible. If we have done these things it is so easy to smile at eventide and know "This is my task."

Choir Assists

The evening session was greatly benefited by the choir of St. Andrew's Church and a delightful solo, "a beautiful garden" was sung by a member of it.

The report of the resolutions committee was read by Mrs. Douglas and of the nominating committee by Miss Cameron after which Rev. W. A. Hunter installed the following officers:

Yanks Whipped Unmercifully And World Champions Safely Tucked Away in Last Place

Wonder Team Practically Helpless Against Left Handed Hurling

RED SOX ON TOP

Boston Bees After Losing First Six Have Now Won Six Out of Eight

(By Judson Bailey)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The World Champion New York Yankees are in last place in the American Baseball League today and perhaps the most amazing aspect of their strange situation is the complacency with which everyone is accepting their slump.

The season already has been a grab bag of many surprises, but none of them compares in portent with the break-down of the wonder team of baseball.

The same club that won four consecutive American League and World Championships is out there floundering like a fish out of water day in and day out, losing 11 out of its first 17 games, five in a row and nine to lefthanded pitchers.

The Yanks were whipped unmercifully 10-4 yesterday by Cleveland Indians, who started a southpaw named Al Smith against them, and backed him up with a 14-hit attack, that included two home runs by Hal Trosky and one by Rollie Hemsley.

Castoff Pitcher Beat Yanks

Smith is a castoff of New York Giants who pitched for Buffalo in the International League last year. The game yesterday was his first start as an American League hurler.

The same day a New York paper printed a cartoon showing a manager tapping a left-handed street sweeper on the shoulder and saying, "Lefthanded, Hugh? You're going to pitch against the Yankees tomorrow."

Yet in the American League there isn't a manager who doesn't believe the Yanks will rise again to haunt them and Joe McCarthy keeps letting his starting pitchers go five, six, seven innings in the face of heavy hitting, still waiting confidently for one of those old time big innings, that will erase everything.

The fans are so stunned they don't know whether to believe their eyes. It may be just as well, because those Yanks have made hasty appraisals bounce before. Joe DiMaggio had a perfect day at bat yesterday and Joe Gordon hit a homer with two on in the eight.

They are due to get a look at righthanded pitching today—if Bobby Feller's fireball isn't too sizzling to look upon—and even though they're in eighth place they're only 6 1-2 games behind the leaders. Prudence may still be the best policy.

Red Sox Still on Top

Boston Red Sox kept on top of the pile yesterday, squeezing past Detroit Tigers 5-4 by bunching five hits for four runs in the fourth and with Jack Wilson doing a splendid relief pitching chore. This dropped Detroit back into third place, beneath the Indians.

There was some other shuffling in the standings. Philadelphia A's outslugged St. Louis Browns 10-8 with Benny McCoy getting four hits to take over fourth place and Chicago White Sox climbed out of the cellar with a 6-3 decision over Washington on the five-hit hurling of Ed Smith and Clint Brown.

Brooklyn's National League leaders were rained out at Chicago and Cincinnati Reds were blocked out of a chance to move into a virtual tie, when the surging Boston Bees pounded Paul Derringer off the mound and won 10-4. The Bees, who lost their first six straight but since have won six out of eight, clustered four runs in the first inning and five in the fifth.

Melton Going Good

New York Giants plastered 17 hits against the Pirates for a 10-6 victory that not only ran Pittsburg's string of defeats to eight but broke the Terrymen's own losing streak at four. Babe Young got four consecutive hits and the Giants rolled up eight runs before the Pirates penetrated Cliff Melton's armament for their first score. It was the southpaw's third victory without a defeat.

Stu Maritn hit two home runs to lead St. Louis Cardinals to a 7-4 triumph over the Phillies, but Fiddler Bill McGee had to be rescued in the ninth when the Phils bunched three runs around a homer by Gus Suhr.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, May 9 (AP)—Plans of Humbert J. Fugazy to break the Mike Jacobs monopoly apparently have bogged down.... Anyway, his opening gun—Bob Pastor vs. Red Burman at Ebbets Field, June 6—has been called off.... The Dodgers who flew from St. Looey to Chicago in two chartered planes the other night were insured for $640,000 .... Players are divided whether they want this business of dashing around the country via air to become a permanent routine.... Old Seabiscuit's first colt, already foaled has been named First Biscuit .... Why not Tea Biscuit?

That stopped him.

The cards have put up a huge sign reading:-"No gambling" in the back of their park.... Maybe that's why Ray Blades would take a chance on only one pitcher Tuesday and two tne day before.

To Stop Constipation Get at Its Cause!

If constipation's got you down so you feel heavy, tired and dopey . . . it's time you did something about it. And something more than taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble.

If you eat only the things most people do, the chances are that a very simple fact causes your constipation . . . you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean heavy food. It means a kind of food that after the digestive process leaves a soft "bulky" mass which helps a bowel movement.

If constipation is due to lack of "bulk" in your diet, eat Kellogg's All-Bran, a tasteful ready-to-eat cereal, for breakfast every day and drink plenty of water. All-Bran supplies the "bulk" you need, plus the intestinal tonic, vitamin B₁. Made by Kellogg in London, Canada. Sold by every grocer.

TEN EXPECTED TO GO TO POST IN PREAKNESS

Twelve or More Expected but Training Grind Has Taken Its Toll

GALLAHADION TO GO

Bimelech Will be on Hand and Many Think He Will Turn Tables on Derby Winner

By MASON BRUNSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

Baltimore, May 9—(AP)—The "Get Gallahadion and Beat Bimelech" club appeared to have lost a few members today—so only about 10 horses are likely to go to the post in the Preakness Stakes at Pimlico Saturday.

The "G. G. and B. B." club is composed of three-year-old colts spoiling for a crack at the Kentucky Derby winner and runner-up. Requisites for membership are faith, hope and charity—the latter meaning a willingness to give Gallahadion and Bimelech a run for the money.

Right after Gallahadion showed that Bimelech could be beat, there was a rush to join the club. It seemed everybody wanted a "G. G. and B. B." button and a Preakness field of 12 or more was predicted.

But that was before the training grind began to take its toll. Half a dozen Preakness possibilities have fallen by the wayside at Pimlico this week.

Ready to accept the mile and three sixteenths issue are five horses that suffered defeat in the Derby and a small group that didn't run in the Kentucky classic.

Here are those considered definite Preakness starters:—

Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Gallahadion.
Col. E. R. Bradley's Bimelech.
Arnold Hanger's Dit.
C. S. Howard's Mioland.
Tower Stable's Royal Man.
W. L. Brann's Pictor.
Millsdale Stable's Andy K.
Mrs. George D. Widener's Your chance.
Mrs. E. G. Lewis' Jacomar.

That's nine. The other starter—or starters—probably will come from this group:

Mrs. H. C. Phipps' Snow Ridge, Mrs. Anthony Pelleteri's Sun Pharos, John Hay Whitney's Woof Woof, J. W. Y. Martin's Abrasion and R. A. Firestone's Marogay.

Word that Marogay could be considered a possible starter came as a surprise. This colt hadn't been figured in the pre-Preakness calculations.

BOWLING LEAGUE HOLDS BANQUET

Ray Lennox Elected President of Major "B" Loop and Prizes Awarded

Ray Lennox was elected president of the Major "B" Bowling League of the Recreation Alleys when the Major "B" trundlers met for their annual banquet, presentation of prizes and election of officers last evening. Speeches by the captains of the respective teams composing the league and officials of the alleys and league featured the annual "maple knockers" social evening.

In presenting the prizes, President Bob Coleman first thanked the clubs for their assistance in making the league one of success. The prizes of the Major "B" Bowling League were won by Mark Storms winner of the high three string with a score of 813; high single was won by Ed Burns with a score of 338, while the high average honors went to Les Lennox.

Other prizes were presented to the teams in order of merit. The Nightshifters finished the league schedule in first place, Bank of Montreal second and Houstons third. The consolation prize went to the Barbers quintette. In the league play-offs, however, the Houston trundlers won the series and the league cup.

The result of the election of officers for the season of 1940-41 resulted as follows—

Past Pres.—Bob Coleman.
President—Ray Lennox.
Vice-Pres.—Cecil. Hardwick.
Sec.-Treas.—Jack Martin.

It was unanimously decided to adopt the Major "A" playing rules in the league in their entirety for the coming year.

During the social part of the evening toasts were proposed to "Bounce" Calbury, who has joined the ranks of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and to Harold Doyle, who has joined the Royal Canadian Air Force. Both have been members of the Major "B" Bowling League during the past year, Harold Doyle being captain of the champion Nightshifter quintette.

Mebbe it's just another yarn, but a hoss trainer at Belmont Park told us yesterday that all through his two-year-old career Bimelech was subject to attacks of nervousness and was scratched from at least two important races for that reason....This trainer thought Bimmie might have had a recurrence of the malady last Saturday ....In a game the other day the semi-pro Rosenblums of Cleveland came up with an entire outfield of guys wearing glasses.

British army authorities have ruled neither Tommy Farr nor Eric Boone can do any scrapping over here while the war's on.

VANCOUVER LEAFS BEAT MONTREAL

First Game for Senior Basketball Title of Dominion Easily Won by Western Team 33-26

Montreal, May 9—(CP)—Lineups of both teams will be unchanged tonight in the second match of the Dominion Senior Basketball finals as Coach Moe Abramowitz of Montreal Y.M.H.A. has elected to give his same players a chance to make up for their initial loss to Vancouver Maple Leafs.

Abramowitz was disgusted last night with his team's 33-26 loss to the Leafs in the first game of the best-of-five series. Much of it he blamed on nervousness, however, and the rest on their long lay-off since eliminating Windsor Alumni for the eastern title almost a month ago.

"Remember how long it was since our last competitive game and don't blame the boys too much for their poor shooting," he said after the match. "Besides, they all were a little nervous because of the big buildup Vancouver got. I think the same team can overcome both and take the next game."

Evidence of Montreal's nervousness is reflected in the scoring statistics which show they made good on only 10 field goals of 74 tried. On free shots they were a little better, scoring six of 10.

Vancouver, attempting 59 field goals, made good on 13 of them and scored eight of 15 free throws. The percentage is not particularly high but the Maple Leafs gave the impression there always was a little reserve power they could use when needed.

Pacing the Leafs' scoring attack throughout was forward Art Willoughby, who bagged a total of 9 points. Next was Jim Bardsley with six while Ralph Henderson notched five and Ross and Rann Mathison four each.

Jim Reninger Limits Leaders to Six Hits but Taken Out in Eighth

ORIOLES NOW SECOND

Nick Etten Hitting at .333 Clip is Main Reason for Baltimore's Standing

(By The Associated Press)

Connie Mack always said the guy could hit, and Nick Etten, former first sacker for Philadelphia Athletics, has been doing plenty of hitting for Baltimore Orioles this season.

Etten is clouting the ball at a .333 clip and is one of the main reasons the Orioles are in second place in the International Baseball League.

Nick was in good form yesterday and slammed out two home runs in four trips to the plate to pace Baltimore to a 10-2 victory over Rochester Red Wings. His first blow came in the eighth inning with one on, and the second an inning later with the bases loaded. Tommy Hughes went the distance for Baltimore and although he gave up 11 safeties he kept them all well scattered.

The victory broke a three-game losing streak and boosted Baltimore to within two games of the first place Jersey City Giants, who went down 7-3 yesterday before Toronto Maple Leafs.

Reninger Beat Leaders

Big Jim Reninger limited the league leaders to six hits and was the winning hurler although taken out in the eighth in the middle of a Giant rally. John Berly replaced him on the mound with the bases loaded and two out and pitched hitless ball for the remainder of the game. Rado Logigiani, Buddy Bates and Mickey DeJonghe all hit for the circuit to drive in Toronto's runs. Bill Harris started for Jersey City and was the losing pitcher.

In the only other game played yesterday, Newark Bears defeated Montreal Royals 6-4 to climb into third place in the standings. Ken Sears, pinch-hitting for Tom Padden, broke up a 3-3 tie with a single in the seventh that was good for two runs. Mike Chartak supplied two other Newark runs when he homered in the fifth with one on. George Barley received credit for the victory but only after Norman Branch was rushed into the game in the ninth inning to stop a belated Montreal uprising. Ira Hutchinson who took over for the Royals in the sixth was charged with the loss, his fifth of the season.

Buffalo Bisons and Syracuse chiefs were rained out.

Yesterday's Stars

(By the Associated Press)

Hal Trosky, Indians—Batted in four runs with two homers in 10-4 victory over Yankees.

Babe Young, Giants—Made four consecutive singles, one with bases loaded, to bat in four runs as New York beat Pirates 10-6.

Stu Martin, Cardinals—Smacked two home runs to lead St. Louis to 7-4 decision over Phillies.

Jack Wilson, Red Sox—Took over pitching chore with bases loaded in seventh and preserved victory over Tigers with fine relief performance.

Benny McCoy, Athletics — Got four hits, one of them single with bases filled to provide margin of 10-8 decision over Browns.

VALUABLE STALLIONS BURNED

The Four-Flying Heels Kiev, Anerold and Sergeant Byrne—were trapped in their barn by flames that spread so quickly farm employees were unable to reach them.

Things we never knew before—Broker's Tip, winner of the 1933 Kentucky Derby, never won a race as a two-year-old and never won a race after winning the Blue Grass classic. . . . Umpire Bill Stewart was behind the plate in the last two no-hit games in the National League, during Johnny Vander Meer's 1938 effort and Tex Carleton's more recent achievement in Cincinnati. . . . Oddly enough, the same teams were involved in each incident. . . . That Bill Pidgeon, B.C.I. track and field star, will compete in the Eastern Canadian championships at Molson Stadium, Montreal, on June 1st, instead of the Interscholastic meet at Stirling. . . . That Bill is one of the best middle distance runners and pole vaulters in this district. . . . That the U.S.A. will hold its Olympic trials as per schedule and make the customary awards regardless as to the cancellation of the 1940 Olympics. . . . That five women will start horses in the Preakness on Saturday . . "or is it the spades that cause the dirty digs at a bridge game?"

Now that H. M. "Dolly" Gray has taken the proverbial baseball bull by the horns and has entered a ball club in the Bay of Quinte League, there are exactly three things that must be done in order to assure the successful revival of the game in Belleville. First, "Dolly" can't be expected to put the project of baseball over in this city alone, he needs executive help, secondly the players will have to assist in the reorganization, assume executive positions and hold active offices as is the case in both Peterboro and Oshawa. Lastly, however, the most important feature of the entire picture, we refer to the creating of enthusiasm among the teen-aged boys of the community. There is absolutely no use wasting time with players who have been playing baseball for years and whose day of usefullness on the diamond has long since been spent. Replenish the roster of the Belleville team with teen-aged boys and start with a clean slate from the foundation and build a solid structure. There is no use saying teen-aged boys are too young for league competition; always remember—Mel Ott was playing ball for the Giants when he was but 17 years of age and major leagues will not look at prospects over twenty.

The following sport comment is taken from the Peterborough sheet —"Young Walter Gerow, Jr., of Napanee expects to hook on at first base with the Petes this summer. He is only about 20 years of age, stands six feet, two inches, and bumps the beam at 185 pounds. Walt—who played hockey last winter for London in the Mich.-Ont. loop, and they went to the finals —broke in with Napanee in the C.O.B.L. and later played intermediate ball. A good fielder and hitter he should fill the bill nicely at first, if he gets his transfer okay. His dad, Walter, Sr., was a starry first-sacker with the old Belleville Nationals, later piloting them to several titles, and then moving to Napanee where he managed the Gibbards in senior and intermediate company."

Usually it is of interest to wrestling fans when one hooded grappler appears on a grappling card but when two bemasked grapplers are included in the main bout of a show, that should prove doubly interesting to say the least. That's exactly the picture when "The Great Ringer" meets "The Masked Marvel" in the main bout of Friday night's professional wrestling card at the Hume Arena. The feature of the show is the fact that the loser must unmask and establish his identity and to assure an unmasking the promoters of the local grunt and groan business signed these two top-notchers to a finished bout contract, thus assuring the unmasking of at least one of the main bouters. Two supporting bouts will precede the hooded gents' battle royal.

"Why buy highly-priced fishing tackle?" is the question being asked by 14-year-old Douglas Bunt who hooked a 6 1-2 pound Rainbow Trout, using only an old bamboo pole, clothesline and a three-pronged hook in the Coldwater River near Midland the other day. To make the story more of the Ripley type, young Bunt wasn't exactly angling at the time, that is not for fish. He was trying to lift a bag of straw out of the water when his prize came along, struck and low and behold young Douglas landed a 6 1-2 pound Rainbow trout, measuring 13 inches in girth and 25 inches in length. (Joe Shortt and Cap Bottum please note.)

Some Preakness peeks — The Woodlawn Vase, the oldest and most famous racing trophy in the United States, sees its 50th consecutive running on Saturday. The Preakness does not date back as far as the Kentucky Derby, but the Woodlawn Vase is one of the oldest racing trophies in the country. The winner of the Preakness this year will also receive a plaque, which will be mounted over the stall used by the winning horse in this golden jubilee race.

The season's first softball casualty was registered last night when outfielder Jimmie Barriage of the Corby's A.C. sustained a nasty gash on the head. Jimmie was shagging flies in practice at the Flats, when he stumbled and fell backwards, inflicting a wound that needed three stitches to close. With Playing-Coach Alex Simpson laid up, Manager Gerald Barriage is buying aspirins by the wholesale lot to cure his headaches. Otherwise the local "mushballers" will convene Friday night when at least one new entry is assured, and two others have been invited to join the throng.

SPORT EYE—The Major "B" bowlers from the Recreation Alleys made whoopee and presented their prizes last night to close off a successful season. . . . It looks as though any old southpaw can beat the Yankees these days. That is especially if his name is Dean or Smith. . . . Arnold Hanger's Dit, the horse that chased Bimelech under the wire at Louisville in the Derby, turned the Pimlico track in good time yesterday. . . .As did Andy K, a non-starter last week. . . . Both are eligible for the Preakness, but "Big Bim" will again go to the post as favourite and there won't be too many Gallahadions around to upset the dope bucket this Saturday. . . . Vancouver beat Montreal 33 to 26 in the first game of the Dominion basketball finals last night. . . . After going all season undefeated, the Bata quintette folded up under pressure and lost out in the Y.M.C.A. volleyball finals to the "Y" seniors, losing three straight to the locals.

New Canadian Flotilla Leader, Assiniboine, Shares Honors With British Cruiser in the Capture of German Freighter, Hannover

Ottawa, May 9 (CP)—The new Canadian flotilla leader, H.M.C.S. Assiniboine, shared honors with a cruiser of the Royal Navy in the capture of the German merchantman, Hannover, in the Caribbean Sea, the Royal Canadian navy made known today.

The 5,600-ton Nazi vessel, attempting to run the Allied blockade with 6,000 tons of ore and lumber from the Netherlands West Indies was overhauled in the early morning darkness of March 8 off the Dominican Coast.

Despite high seas and attempts of the German crew to destroy their ship by fire, the Allied vessels towed her to Kingston, Jamaica, as a prize of war and the Assiniboine and her commander earned his praise.

In his letter of proceedings the Captain of the British cruiser, unnamed in the navy's announcement, wrote:-

"I should like to stress the value of the work done by the H.M.C.S. Assiniboine without whose assistance it is most unlikely that the German ship Hannover would have been saved.

"Great credit is therefore due to the Commanding Officer who showed initiative and ability and handled his ship with great skill throughout the operations."

Sir Sydney Meyrick, Commander-in-Chief, America and West Indies Station, also praised the Canadian navy's work, reporting "valuable assistance has been rendered by the Assiniboine in patrolling the Caribbean."

He added, "the towing into port of the disabled Hannover was a feat of seamanship of which officers and men in both ships can be justly proud."

Both Ships on Patrol

Both ships were on patrol, operating apart and meeting at intervals to exchange news and views when the cruiser intercepted the Nazi vessel. The signal to "close me immediately" brought the Assiniboine in.

The German sailors showed no force but in the darkness some escaped in a boat while the cruiser battled flames started by the fleeing seamen fore and aft on the Hannover's decks.

The Captain, in his report, chronicled how the German skipper and chief officer stood glumly on the Hannover's bridge, guarded by a British tar with a fixed bayonet, as the white ensign of the Royal Navy was hoisted over the swastika.

When the Assiniboine reached the scene it was nearly dawn and a prize crew of five officers and 29 men already were aboard the Hannover. But with the merchantman drifting toward a nearby neutral shore the Canadian destroyer was detailed to take her in tow while the cruiser searched vainly for the fleeing German crew.

Uses Battery of Hoses

Later the cruiser took over the towing job and the Assiniboine ran alongside in turbulent seas with a battery of hoses playing and helped bring the flames under control. For more than four days the Allied vessels struggled along with the disabled vessel.

A freshening wind with increasing sea made no easier the job of handling a freighter left with broken steering gear, jammed windlasses and no anchors.

En route to port the Assiniboine took time out for refuelling and on her return delivered supplies to the prize crew aboard the Hannover.

The Assiniboine's log gave a laconic account of an attempted escape by a German prisoner who jumped overboard. He was swimming strongly when picked up by Canadian tars in a whaleboat.

This message from the Assiniboine tells the story: "Whale boat picked up man who requested coxswain to shoot him. Coxswain regretted he had no gun."

AT THE McCARTHY

"Tropic Fury"

Regarded as a highly authentic story dealing with rubber plantations in the Amazon jungle, Universal's "Tropic Fury", co-starring Richard Arlen and Andy Devine, is now showing at the McCarthy theatre.

The story tells of an attempt to break a monopoly. Arlen and his "buddy," Devine, go directly to the heart of the trouble, and there fall into the power of the man who rules the interior.

Forced to work as members of the rubber slave gang, they are finally successful in bringing order out of chaos.

Seen with Arlen and Devine in the picture are Beverly Roberts, Lupita Tovar, Samuel S. Hinds, Charles Trowbridge and other favorites.

George O'Brien Western

In addition to "Tropic Fury" the current program at the McCarthy theatre presents popular western star, George O'Brien in "Timber Stampede" an action-loaded, up-to-the-minute, western, filmed against the heavily timbered slopes of an impressively beautiful region in the Rocky Mountains. It is every bit as good as O'Brien's last hit "Marshal of Mesa City" recommended as perfect entertainment, for each and every movie fan that loves adventure and action. A new episode of "The Shadow" thrilling screen sensation, taken from radio and magazine stories, is also shown preceding the feature attractions "Tropic Fury" and "Timber Stampede."

"Y" Prep Boys Get Certificates For Swimming

The presentation of certificates and pins to the Prep Boys' Swimming Classes took place at the Y.M.C.A. last evening as the "Preps" ended a successful swimming season with their annual Prep Decoration Banquet. Mr. J. E. Shortt, Secretary of the Y.M.C.A., acted as master of ceremonies for the evening's entertainment which consisted of community singing, with Mr. Phil Huddleston as pianist. After the boys had partaken of supper, the presentation of certificates rounded off the evening's entertainment.

As on Tuesday evening at the Junior Decoration Banquet, when the winning junior swimming team, the "Eagles," were awarded their crests, the highlight of last evening's function was the presentation of crests to the "Iroquois," the Prep team which won group honors for the all-round participation. The crests to the winning team were presented by J. E. Shortt.

Mr. Phil Huddleston officiated at the presentation of certificates and pins to the Beginners Swimming Class, while Mr. James Seymour, swimming instructor in charge of all swimming classes at the "Y", presented the Swimmer certificates and pins.

BIRTHS

WHITE—At Belleville General Hospital on Wednesday, May 8 1940 to Mr. and Mrs. W. J. White, (nee Edna Blye), Rossmore, a daughter. m9-1t

BORN AT MADOC, ONT.

Wallaceburg, Ont., May 9—(CP)—Richard Thomas Brown, died in the Public General Hospital, Chatham, last night. Resident of Sombra Township, he was born 79 years ago at Madoc, Hastings County, son of William and Agnes Brown and located in this district when quite young.

He is survived by his widow; two sons, an adopted daughter and one brother.

PENSION FUND TO BE INCREASED

Ontario Synod Takes Step by Which Clergy and Parish Will Contribute

Kingston, May 9—The Anglican Synod of the Diocese of Ontario adopted a new pension system for clergy, to which the clergy as well as parishes will contribute.

The report of the pension fund committee was presented by Canon L. E. Davis, Brockville. The report was adopted as presented, with the understanding that a canon dealing with the whole matter will be presented at the next meeting of the Synod.

The clergy will be required to pay about $2,600 a year. Last year they agreed to pay $1,600, and actually contributed $1,000. The parishes will be expected to raise about $5,300 annually. They now contribute $4,200 yearly.

The report stated that if the scheme was carried out pensions would be assured on retirement. According to the past arrangement there was a serious danger that clergy, fifteen years from now, might not receive their pensions. Extra provision is made for children if the father dies, and the amount is estimated at $300 yearly. An extra payment of $500 is provided immediately on the death of a clergyman.

Rev. Selley E. Harrington reported the Church was in a more healthy condition than it was a year ago, improvement being slight but general.

Religious Education Schools

Speaking of religious education in his charge to the Synod, Bishop Lyons said that the public school system of Ontario opens an avenue for religious education. The church has availed herself to some extent of this opportunity. We must admit, however, we have not made full use of our privilege. In the curriculum, provision is made for religious education and character training. To prepare the way it may be necessary to awaken the Christian consciousness of the public. Co-operation of all Christian communions is essential. Sometimes school boards may not be found sympathetic. Time and patience will remedy this. The law is on our side. Once permission is obtained to give religious instruction in the schools as enabled by Statute, the real problem of imparting religious knowledge under the Public School System has to be faced—the question, who is to do it?

"The work is beset by many difficulties but the major one lies in that the teaching of religion stands on an altogether different plane from all other subjects. A person who teaches religion impersonally should not teach it at all. It is one subject on which a teacher cannot be neutral. All teachers may not be qualified. In fact, teachers are not chosen on the ground of religion. Our problem will not be solved until the teachers of the day schools teach religion with the same devotion and enthusiasm as selected teachers in the Sunday Schools. Nothing will serve our purpose except the full teaching of the Christian Faith with its implications applied to all the problems of the day." Until the situation clears the one to give the instruction, in my opinion, is the parish priest. The need of our day demands that we present to our youth the one subject which can give unity to all our education for it alone presents the Lord Jesus Christ as the centre and source of all knowledge."

Slight Drop in Butter and Egg Prices

Toronto, May 9—Selling pressure at some points, together with seasonal increase in fresh receipts, caused further recessions in butter prices during yesterday's session of the Toronto open produce market. Eggs were easy, while cheese remained dull and unchanged.

Sales of the first grade Ontario product were made all the way from 22 1-4c to 23c per pound during the day's trading in the butter market, with prices closing in the range of 22 1-4c to 22 1-2c. Some of the holders were not willing to sell at the lower levels, but others appeared anxious to clear supplies of the fresh make, forcing the market down. Western offerings at 23c attracted no buyers.

Offerings were reported as ample to satisfy the fair demand on the egg market. The undertone remained easy and prices declined on the two top grades in the graded section.

COURT ORDERS HORSE DESTROYED

Owner Charged With Working Animal Unfit for Work of Beast of Burden —Sentence Suspended

C. W. Bailey, Point Anne farmer, was convicted of cruelty to animals, namely by the working of a horse unfit for the work of a beast of burden, contrary to Section 301 of the Canadian Criminal Code, when he appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., in today's session of County Police Court held at the Court House. Bailey pleaded guilty as charged, but held there were extenuating circumstances in the case. He was ordered to destroy the horse and pay the costs of the proceedings following which he was given a three months' suspended sentence.

Walter Reeves, president of the Humane Society for the County of Hastings, told the court, he had received a complaint to the effect that Bailey "was working a lame horse". "With Dr. Wellbanks and Constable Thos. Thorne I visited the scene and found that the horse belonging to Mr. Bailey had a badly fractured ankle", stated Mr. Reeves in evidence.

"Would you say the trouble was incurable?" asked Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C.

"Yes I most certainly would", replied Mr. Reeves.

Mr. Bailey informed the court he had worked the horse for the past six years without ill effects. "It had a crooked ankle all that time, but I shod its hind hoofs this Spring and no doubt that caused the trouble", held Mr. Bailey, who agreed to meet the judgment of the court and destroy the animal. Bailey was not represented by counsel.

Fascists Indicate Italy Still on Fence

While Mussolini was addressing his followers, Fascist authorities indicated that Italy still is on the fence waiting the right moment to jump in and try for what she wants in prestige and more living space.

Associates of Premier Mussolini emphasized that Italian preparedness for war did not mean necessarily that Italy was entering the conflict soon.

"Our army is under arms, but nobody can or must draw arbitrary or dangerous deductions from this attitude", said the newspaper Il Messaggero. "Our arms are always ready to be shouldered at any moment interests of the country require".

Il Popolo di Roma indicated that Italian interests eventually would require it, saying "the idea of being able to preserve one's own peace with the clever and Pilate-like conduct can be for the present non-belligerents a dangerous delusion."

None should delude themselves that any country which stays out of the war will be able to make its voice heard afterward as the Italians intend to do, the paper added.

British Situation Studied

With Italy's course dependent chiefly on relations with Britain, Italians watched the fate of British Prime Minister Chamberlain's government and expressed belief it was beaten in parliament despite the fact it won a narrow majority.

Chamberlain, "engaged in impossible defence, thought himself justified in involving other persons and bodies, thus aggravating the general uneasiness," said Il Popolo di Roma. "Churchill also acted similarly to save himself when he ended up by uncovering the Admiralty."

Italy today celebrated her fourth Empire Day and her second Army Day with a military review here and the opening in Naples of a vast overseas exposition. Five Thousand troops were ordered out to march past Premier Benito Mussolini.

During Mussolini's address sections of the crowd interrupted his words with shouts of "Tunis" and "Malta."

(Tunis is the capital of France's North African possession, Tunisia. Malta is Great Britain's island naval base off Sicily in the Mediterranean).

An indication of what new developments could change Italy's attitude appeared in a warning to Yugoslavia against accepting British-French guarantees of protection which was sounded in the Bologna newspaper Resto Del Carlino.

'Mediterranean For Us' Cry

Mussolini's brief statement was drawn from him by the crowd under his balcony which kept calling, "The Mediterranean for us", and asking for a speech.

Il Duce appeared three times on the balcony, smilingly shook his head and placed a finger on his lips which formed word "No".

It was only at his fourth appearance that he spoke.

Resto Del Carlino said that Yugoslavia was in no danger from Italy and Germany now.

Warning that "storms in the Mediterranean are short and violent", it told Yugoslavia her future "and perhaps very existence" would be in danger if she "tried to delay by a few weeks the inevitable defeat" of the Allies.

Genoa shipbuilders announced that Italy's fourth new 35,000-ton battleship, Roma, described as the world's finest super-battleship, was ready for launching.

SEES WAR PUSHED

"On balance, it (the debate) should make the British people feel better to know that complaints can be aired so freely and that Ministers can be held to account so directly. The British people can be relied upon to push the war with more determination than ever, and to make sure that their Ministers do the same.

"The hot words of this debate will be forgotten; the grim fighting spirit behind it will remain, no matter what trials the British nation may be called upon to endure."

The Herald Tribune urged that the outcome in Norway not be exaggerated, saying "it is true that it would have been unwise to take too great risks or expend too great an effort on what was at least a secondary theatre." It said three weaknesses in the British conduct of the war were revealed: lack of information and forethought, tardiness in action and lack of coordination between land, sea and air forces."

The Daily Mirror wound up with an attack on President Roosevelt for his "rigid, defiant, totalitarian" attitude on domestic American policies.

It said:-

"With crystal clarity, the basic strength of the British Empire, the strength that enabled a small island-full of people to conquer and rule a quarter of the earth, emerged in the course of the debate on Mr. Chamberlain's policies.

Strength of Britain

"That strength is in the fact: If the people of England don't like a leader, they get rid of him. . . .

"His mistakes are aired; they are flung in his face. They may oust him from power. A dictator calls that the inefficiency of democracy."

"It is not inefficiency. It is to a government what circulation is to the human body. It is life and strength and confidence.

"It is the absence of these elastic qualities of democracy in America that is most alarming today.

"As a candidate, President Roosevelt promised to admit mistakes, to rectify errors. Not once since he has been in office has he admitted a mistake. And there is no machinery for submitting him for a 'vote of confidence'."

Refers to Churchill

The Daily News said Mr. Chamberlain virtually had "abdicated his leadership," putting the direction of the war in the hands of Mr. Churchill. It added:-

"Whether he can deliver results is another question. The Norway rout is being blamed on Chamberlain, but it seems evident to us that Churchill had more to do with it than Chamberlain had."

The News accompanied its editorial with a cartoon depicting a battered and bruised British lion saying:-

"Not the life line of the Empire but jolly humiliating, eh, what?"

BRITAIN'S LEADER

It is argued that it would be a national folly to accept the Prime Minister's resignation until his successor is selected and alternative ministers have agreed to take office.

The whole political situation is in a state of flux with reports and rumors filling the air.

A sudden meeting of the war cabinet was called at 12.30 p.m., (7.30 a.m. EDT) in Mr. Chamberlain's room at the House, but whether it concerned political affairs or the war situation could not be learned.

All Trooped Out

It was called during the meeting of the House. Sir Samuel Hoare, Secretary for Air, entered the chamber and whispered to the Prime Minister, who gathered his cabinet colleagues. After a short consultation on the treasury bench they all trooped out.

Within a minute or two Clement Attlee, Leader of the Opposition, Arthur Greenwood, his deputy, Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal leader, and David Lloyd George left the chamber, suggesting that they might be conferring with the government over the general political situation.

Meanwhile it appeared that the Labor party is in the role of "Warwick the Kingmaker." One of the reasons why political observers believe Mr. Chamberlain must retire is the steadfast refusal of the Labor party to serve under him. It also declines to enter a government with Sir John Simon and Sir Samuel Hoare.

At present Labor members are forbidden by a resolution of their National organization to enter any government with representatives of other political parties, but this bar, which dates back to 1931, is expected to be withdrawn at the party's annual meeting on Monday.

This consideration, in the general picture, adds strength to the belief that Mr. Chamberlain's resignation, even if offered today, would not be accepted until it is known definitely if the Labor leaders are to be free to enter an alternative administration.

Believed Ready to Resign

Earlier Prime Minister Chamberlain was believed to be ready to resign, as a result of Opposition he encountered last night in a vote of confidence which gave him a majority of 81 but saw 134 members of the House of Commons either absent or abstaining from the vote.

The vote was 281 for the Government against 200 for the combined Opposition.

Actually, the vote was on a motion for adjournment. Mr. Chamberlain made the question one of confidence when the Labor party demanded a division.

The Labor party is expected to consider the question of taking part in a National Government at its convention next Monday.

It is still impossible to say who may succeed Mr. Chamberlain if he resigns. Two of the likeliest possibilities continue to be Winston Churchill and Viscount Halifax, but white-haired Mr. Lloyd George, despite his 76 years, is being mentioned in some circles.

Due to Accelerate Effort

No matter what changes are made in personalities, one thing is certain—Britain's war effort is due to be accelerated. The Chamberlain administration has been brought to the brink of defeat by charges of ineptitude, timidity and complacency, by allegations of lack of drive, determination and initiative, and, in general, by the old story of "too late, too late."

The two-day debate which preceded last night's division impressed upon all parties the consideration that there must be more direction, more drive and more determination and zeal in the nation's war effort, regardless of who forms the government.

It is quite possible that the whole basis of the government will be changed with establishment of a small compact war cabinet of men shorn of departmental routine.

Churchill Less Buoyant

If the Liberals, Labor and rebel Tories are invited into the government, these men would be in line: Mr. Attlee, Mr. Greenwood, Herbert Morrison, A. V. Alexander, Mr. Lloyd George, Sir A. Sinclair, Alfred Duff Cooper and L. S. Amery.

In the House today Mr. Chamberlain agreed to a further debate two weeks hence "if events should make it desirable." In some quarters this was taken as an indication that he does not intend to resign.

Pugnacious Winston Churchill, who gave a pledge of loyalty when he entered the cabinet last fall, last night accepted "full responsibility" for the decision against attempting to force Trondheim Fjord with British warships during the ill-starred Allied campaign in central Norway.

Members of parliament, whipped to fever pitch by the biting attack of David Lloyd George, demanded that Mr. Chamberlain quit, cooled slightly when Mr. Churchill told them solemnly that Germany's numerical superiority in airplanes caused the Allied setback in Norway.

Mr. Churchill's oratory failed, however, to quell a storm of boos and shouts of "resign!" which came from Opposition stands when the Prime Minister, tired and pale, stalked from the House.

The First Lord himself drew the wrath of Labor members during an angry exchange in which he called a heckler a "skulker."

Fails to Satisfy Keyes

The explanation made by Mr. Churchill of the decision against a frontal naval move on Trondheim failed to satisfy Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger Keyes, who charged on the first day of debate that the government, showing "shocking ineptitude" in the war, failed to make proper use of warships in the Norwegian campaign.

Sir Roger voted with 43 other Conservative members of parliament against the government.

Other government supporters who voted against the government were Lady Astor, two former first lords of the admiralty, Alfred Duff Cooper and L.C.M.S. Amery, Earl Winterton, Viscount Wolmer, R. J. Boothby, General Edward Spears, Leslie Hore-Belisha, former war secretary, Harold Nicolson, Harold MacMillan and Quintin Hogg. Among the Independents, Clement Davies cast his vote against the government.

Mr. Churchill told the House that if the Trondheim naval attack had been made Sir Roger would have been chosen to lead it.

Sir Roger, who spoke Tuesday night, explained to newspapermen that he was not "nimble" enough to tackle Churchill in the final debate.

Speech Had Solemn Tone

Government critics today claimed that Mr. Chamberlain's 81 majority amounted to nothing less than a vote of no confidence.

Mr. Churchill's speech had a solemn tone unexpected from the ordinarily buoyant First Lord. He warned ominously that at no time in the last war was Britain in such peril as today, but he declared that the British now have the Narvik airport and "we now fight for Narvik."

Making no attempt to minimize the British defeat in Norway, he disarmed the Opposition by frankness.

He said Britain had 12,000 troops against Germany's 120,000 in Norway and had the choice of getting them out or "leaving them to be destroyed."

Mr. Churchill declared that Britain's numerical inferiority in warplanes "will condemn us for some time to come to a great deal of difficulty and suffering which we must endure with firmness until more favorable conditions can be established—as they assuredly will be."

London Star's Comment

Among afternoon newspapers in London, The Star said:

"It is inconceivable that the present government should continue in office unchanged".

It added that "it remains to be seen" whether Mr. Chamberlain "will cling tenaciously" to office or "with higher patriotism make way for a man who is fitted to win the war, not muddle it."

It predicted an offer of Cabinet posts to Labor and Liberals is "certain to be made this week" and will be "rejected at once".

Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard cautioned:

"We must not jump to the conclusion that the Labor Party has assumed plenary powers to dictate the removal of Mr. Chamberlain. . . . He still possesses the biggest voting strength in the House. . . . Conceivably the difficulty might be overcome by the presence of Mr. Chamberlain in a new government as Premier but as Leader of the House".

Says Government's 'Credit Shattered'

The Evening News said the Government's "credit is shattered".

"They may linger on a while as caretakers, pending reconstruction of the Cabinet or formation of a new government", it said of Mr. Chamberlain and the members of his Cabinet, "but their end cannot be more than a few days away".

Questioning the Labor Party's wisdom in forcing last night's vote, this morning's Manchester Guardian said the government deserved reprobation but the opposition party "would have done much better to have held its hand".

"The oppositions are by themselves too weak to shake Mr. Chamberlain by their votes. They need the backing, either active or by abstention, of a large section of the Tory party. And it is pretty obvious that the Tories will not be driven to that point unless there is a far more crushing defeat than the withdrawal from Norway . . .

"If we are soon to get a greatly strengthened government and a new and infinitely more vigorous prosecution of the war, it will take more than a parliamentary challenge by a numerically small opposition . . .

"It is not the fault of the employees or workers that our output of airplanes is, as Sir Samuel Hoare has to admit, insufficient. It is not the fault of the hundreds of thousands of unemployed and of the army of women in unessential jobs that they have not long ago been brought into munitions production and that we have to stint our expeditionary force in equipment.

"And it is the same through the whole range of war activity. We have had all these years of Mr. Chamberlain and this is where we have arrived. This country can never organise itself for a victorious war so long as he and the 'friends' on whom he called last night keep their dead hands on the levers of the national effort."

The Yorkshire Post of Leeds said:

"The further very strong impression left by the debate is that we are suffering even more than Mr. Chamberlain and his colleagues have admitted from a state of war preparedness far behind that of Germany. This, in all probability, is the very crux of the matter. Details cannot be revealed lest they should aid the enemy, but the truth is that we are still paying a stiff price for the unreality which hung over our defence preparations for many months and even for years, while Hitler was training his soldiers and amassing his resources for war.

"We are not concerned so much with the effect of these gibes on the Conservative leader. He will not rate them above their value. We deplore the effect that such wild speaking may have in spreading dismay among our fighting men. They, not altogether understanding the political idiom may be disheartened at the suggestion that their very lives are handled with outrageous ineptitude.

"It is regrettable that the debate was not conducted throughout with more careful regard to its effects outside the House and outside political circles. We entered upon the war so unready for it in many respects that there were bound to be setbacks if not disasters. A new Prime Minister would have had almost certainly the same experience. Owing to past delays we still need time before we can hope to arrive at the strength of total mobilization but that time must be short."

HOUSE ADJOURNS UNTIL MAY 21ST

Parliament, However, Can be Called Back Immediately in Event of Emergency

London, May 9 — (CP) — The House of Commons adjourned until May 21 today for the Whitsuntide holidays after the government had reiterated its willingness to have parliament called back immediately in the event of an emergency.

A motion to have the House reassemble May 14, a week earlier, was introduced by Clement Davies, Independent, who declared "it is not right at a time of crisis that the House should adjourn for 12 days."

Mr. Davies withdrew his motion when Captain H. D. Margesson, Chief Government whip, repeated Prime Minister Chamberlain's assurances that the Speaker would be advised to recall the House if the Government deemed it advisable.

The Welsh member, who withdrew from the National (Government) group last December because he was dissatisfied with the Government's conduct of the war, said the vote last night, following the two-day debate on the Norwegian affair, had made it "all the more necessary that the House should meet earlier" than May 21.

"There is a feeling throughout the country," Mr. Davies said, "that at least we should be putting ourselves on a real war footing."

U. S. Battle Fleet Expansion Permanence Urged by Walsh

Washington, May 9—(AP) — A recommendation that the United States guarantee the permanency of the projected battle fleet expansion was advanced today by Chairman David Walsh (Dem.-Massachusetts) of the Senate Naval Committee.

As the committee neared action on a bill authorizing an 11 per cent increase in the sea forces, Walsh offered an amendment which would empower the navy to replace the contemplated new fighting ships when they become obsolete.

A long-range proposal, it would enable the navy to keep the fleet from falling below authorized strength.

The expansion program was expected to win quick committee approval, but the foes of further warship building already were priming their guns to fight it on the Senate floor.

Senator William King (Dem.-Utah) found ammunition in the British House of Commons debate on the Norwegian campaign. Information disclosed, he said, demonstrated the need for more aircraft and submarines instead of new battleships which he declared "are so vulnerable from the air and below the sea."

BRITISH DEBATE

After Munich

There was no such shouting when the Prime Minister returned from Munich to enjoy a brief triumph with a piece of paper bearing his own and Adolf Hitler's signatures to an agreement to maintain peace. When Mr. Chamberlain said the piece of paper meant "peace in our time" most of the noise makers believed him and were glad to do so. Nobody wanted to fight and everybody realized Britain was woefully unprepared for a fight.

When the Prime Minister and Mrs. Chamberlain appeared with the King and Queen on the balcony of Buckingham Palace an anti-aircraft battery turned its searchlights on them and a huge crowd bellowed with delight.

The Prime Minister's umbrella which he carried almost everywhere he went became a symbol of peace and then a cartoonist's joke when it became apparent that Hitler had double-crossed the Munich conferees.

Leftists Consistently Denounced

Leftist circles consistently denounced Mr. Chamberlain for what they called his soft attitude toward Hitler, but they were left far out on a limb last fall when their own hero, Joseph Stalin, sold them out by attacking Poland in unison with Germany.

Whether Mr. Chamberlain was right in his attitude at Munich probably will be a subject of controversy for the rest of British history. There was not the slightest doubt in the mind of anyone living in the United Kingdom at the time that the country was in a thoroughly miserable state defensively.

Mr. Chamberlain obviously had to avoid a fight then, but the question remained: could he and Edouard Daladier, then Premier of France, have won a poker game against Hitler and Benito Mussolini.

'Hitler Acted Tough in 1938'

The Duce obviously did not want a war to start at that time—in fact he said so. Hitler acted tough, but it may never be known if he really had enough to back up his toughness.

It was often argued that a man like Winston Churchill at Munich would have outbluffed Hitler. Second guessing seldom took into consideration the fact that failure of a bluffing attempt would have been calamitous for Britain.

Such a failure at that time would have been a gilt-edged invitation to an aerial blitzkrieg which Britain could not have fought off.

Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Churchill say Britain still is behind Germany in air strength, but in the early autumn of 1938 she was so far behind that it was alarming.

Year for Preparation

If Mr. Chamberlain resigns now in the face of charges of dilatoriness and ineptitude, he can at least look back to the time when he gained his country a valuable year for war preparations which showed in the general attitude toward the Munich and the Second Great War crises.

Munich was a nerve-wracking nightmare, the war crisis merely a sad occasion.

YUGOSLAV-SOVIET

and naval forces would be sent to the country's help in case Yugoslavia found it necessary to resist an axis attack. Similar Allied offers to Bulgaria and Hungary already had been reported.

Bulgaria was said to have insisted she would preserve complete neutrality while Hungary was understood to have told the British envoy that any decision would have to be reached when the necessity for a decision arises.

TWO CALLS ANSWERED BY FIRE DEPARTMENT

Two calls were answered by the local fire department this morning. A grass fire on Lingham street required the attention of the firemen and just at the noon hour a run was made to 182 James street where a chimney fire was in progress. No damage was reported in either case, however.

COMPLETE DINNER PREPARED AT COOKING SCHOOL

Whole Dinner Cooked at One Time and Each Part Retaining Its Original Flavor

DRAW FOR PRIZES

Complete oven dinners, an economical way to prepare an entire meal by electrical cooking, were prepared on the stage of Bridge Street Church Sunday School Hall yesterday afternoon by Miss Leta Small, home economist of Moffats, Limited, who was in the city this week conducting a two day cooking school. Under the auspices of Bridge St. Woman's Association the School was arranged through the Belleville Utilities. The school was completed last evening when fish cookery, supper dishes, pies and desserts were demonstrated. Miss Wilma Clarke assisted Miss Small very efficiently during the cooking school.

The delicious dishes prepared included stuffed baked heart, ham slice supreme, casserole of carrots, baked potatoes and baked apples, all with a distinctive and original flair.

In planning an oven dinner the meat should be considered first, and on the length of time necessary for its cooking will depend the time that other dishes should be put in the oven. Dishes should be placed in the oven in a manner that will allow lots of circulation around each dish. For roasting meats it has been found by research that a low temperature is best. Then the meat will not shrink, all flavor will be left in the meat and it will be lovely and juicy. The oven will have less grease spattered in it.

Washed Once a Week

Ovens should be washed out once a week to keep them in good condition.

As she continued her discussion and demonstration of recipes, Miss Small discussed the merits of electric cooking, and the economies that can be practised in its use.

Turning the tables on her audience Miss Small began asking the ladies questions. The first query was "What do you mean by the term 'braising'." This proved a stickler the answers being description of basting, broiling and pot roasting. Only one lady, Mrs. R. Woodley, could answer the question correctly and she received the stuffed, baked heart. By answering "spinach" to the question "what is the only vegetable that can't be cooked with other dishes in an oven dinner", Mrs. W. A. Dolan received the baked carrots. Spinach requires such a big dish for cooking that it takes up too much oven space when other dishes are to be baked.

Interesting Talk

Mr. Everett Smith gave an interesting talk pointing out that Belleville enjoys such unusually low rates of electricity that there is nothing as cheap used in the home. He explained the various new developments in the electric ranges on the stage.

Continuing her demonstration Miss Small prepared vegetables on top of the stove advocating the use of saucepans flat on the bottom and straight sided. Utensils black on the bottom absorb heat better than the shinier types. Using saucepans with a tightly-fitted lid permits the use of very little water in the cooking of vegetables, a very healthful method which preserves the food values of the vegetables. Miss Small also discussed the fine points of broiling.

POULTRY PROJECT SPONSORED BY KIWANIS CLUB

7,500 Day-Old Chicks, Fifty Per Cent More Than Last Year, Delivered to Rural School Children

DR. FORRESTER HEARD

The Kiwanis Club will continue their Poultry project among the school children of Hastings County with a 50 percent increase over last year according to Charles Tripp, chairman of the Agriculture committee and who reported to the club at the weekly luncheon at the Queens Hotel on Tuesday. Fifteen hundred day-old chicks were placed among six schools on Tuesday afternoon ten of the children in each school receiving 25 chicks, 25 pounds of starter mash, a chicken feeder and a drinking fountain supplied by the Swift Canadian Company. The members of Mr. Tripp's Committee of which there are six in number will each be responsible for one school and in this way the work will be divided up and proper attention will be given to every child.

"Every school in the district wanted to go into the project" said Mr. Tripp, "but we could only accommodate six schools this year and that is increasing our output 50 percent over last year. The schools to take on the project are second concession of Thurlow with Miss Spencer as teacher, 3rd concession of Thurlow with Mr. Patrick in charge, 4th concession of Sidney in charge of Miss Foster. Centenary in charge of Mr. Bates, Wallbridge in charge of Mr. Martin and 5th concession of Sidney in charge of Mr. Garrison. Mr. Lynn Fair, Agricultural representative for the County will assist the committee in putting this project over." "I believe this is one of the finest projects the club has ever sponsored," said Mr. Tripp.

President in Charge

The meeting was in charge of Bill Anderson with Ed Willing as Sergeant-at Arms and Harold Carruthers as song leader. In the absence of the principal speaker, Dr. James Forrester, a member of the club gave a most interesting and instructive address on the technique in removing articles that have been swallowed by children and sometimes grown-ups. The speaker gave a great deal of information to the club, some of it in a technical nature but the members will be more careful in the future after hearing the splendid talk. Dr. Forrester exhibited the instruments that are used by the medical profession for this work and after viewing the instruments will be doubly careful. The speaker explained in detail the passages down which these foreign substances travel and the great pain they can cause before being removed. Dr. Forrester also exhibited many articles that he had removed from the lungs and stomach during his practice and they were viewed with eager curiosity. The thanks of the club was extended by Ivan Scott, who regretted that more addresses were not given by members of the club on their own business or some other subject in which they were interested.

To Entertain Kingston

Dr. R. A. "Dick" Flynn, chairman of the Inter-Club Committee told the members that an Inter-Club visit by the Kingston Club would be made to the Belleville Club on May 21st and that the meeting would be held at the Bay of Quinte Country Club. Walter P. Zellar, District Governor will be the principal speaker at this luncheon. Jack Trudeau, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee explained to the members the need of raising funds for the club due to the strain on the finances last year for War Work. The drive will take the form of a book drawing and will close on June 18th. The club was divided up into teams with Charlie Tripp, Jimmy Cowan, Frank Domenico, Morley Wyman and Cliff Baragar as captains. To provide plenty of rivalry the losing teams will have to entertain the winning teams at dinner.

BARS NIJINSKY FROM U. S. VISIT

U. S. Consulate at Zurich Refuses Six-Months' Visa to Ill Dancer

By CHARLES S. FOLTZ, JR.
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Zurich, May 9 (AP).—Vaslav Nijinsky, renowned dancer who knew the heights of world acclaim before mental disorders blighted his career two decades ago, was blocked by the United States Consulate today from visiting the United States.

Despite a Labor Department ruling that the dancer should not be barred because of insanity—a state from which he is emerging gradually—the consulate refused Nijinsky a six months' visitor's visa on the grounds that spread of the war might prevent his return to Europe.

To his wife, Mme. Romola Nijinsky, it was a bitter setback in a two-year fight to take the great dancer to the United States for further treatment from a Viennese physician.

Wife Weeps.

Weeping in her hotel room Mme. Nijinsky cried "Vaslav's life depends on America!

"Why does America give me hope and then dash it? The Labor Department cabled April 22 that my husband should not be refused on grounds of insanity, but now—"

Nijinsky, a sunburned healthy looking middle-aged man, sat beside his weeping wife with a bewildered expression.

Insulin shock treatments administered by the Viennese physician, Dr. Manfred Sakel, already have brought Nijinsky back from the twilight of Schizophrenia, enabling him to leave the sanitarium where he had been confined since 1919. Sakel has gone to the United States.

Officials Decline to Discuss.

Consulate officials declined to discuss the case but Mme. Nijinsky said she had been told the visa was refused on the grounds that although Nijinsky has both Swiss and Hungarian return permits, the war might spread to those countries and prevent his coming back.

"I offered to get Cuban and Mexican visas" as further assurance he would not be without some place to go, Mme. Nijinsky said, "but consular officers told me they would issue the visa only if Washington ordered it."

Immediately after the refusal, Mme. Nijinsky cabled President Roosevelt, State Secretary Cordell Hull and several United States women's organizations hoping to change the ruling.

R.A.F. SCOUTS OUT ENEMY AIR BASES

(By Axel De Holstein, Havas Staff Writer)

Paris, May 9—(CP-Havas)—Repulsed on land in the sectors to the east of the Moselle and Nied Rivers, the Germans last night sent their air force out on reconnaissance flights which took enemy observers over the Belgian border area and the Alps.

This morning's official war communique reported that "a number of enemy patrols were repulsed by our artillery and infantry fire in the region to the east of the Moselle." The Nazi setback in this sector followed the defeat early yesterday of a German raid in the Nied River zone.

Push in Nied Area

Detailed reports on the enemy push in the Nied area showed it was launched following brief artillery fire against a French outpost. French artillery and machine gun fire was immediately brought to bear on the German infantry, however, and they turned tail when a French volunteer detail went to the rescue of the outpost.

The Germans subsequently sent out a number of patrols in the same sector, but they were turned back in every instance.

The Stars Say

For Friday, May 10
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

ACCORDING to an interesting chain of planetary configurations, this may prove a day on which things will move at particularly high tempo and toward the launching of important projects and the attainment of cherished objectives. It is a time for strong and determined initiative, especially in new directions, with the promise of desired support from influential sources for promotion. This might demand a revamping of plans or other beneficial change. In all transactions be alert to duplicity or fraud, or hazardous complications.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year in which much in the way of good fortune and general satisfaction depends upon bold initiative, sound plans and methods, together with the ability of character to enlist the support of superiors and those in financial standing who will be ready to support practical and workable new ideas. Some change may be required, and there may be the necessity of frustrating duplicity, fraud or dangerous entanglements. But the mentality is splendidly equipped and of trustworthy stability.

A child born on this day may have much resourcefulness, ingenuity and enterprise, with a shrewd and discerning mind, perhaps easily turning to ways of expediency if cornered. Training in integrity and forthrightness might not be amiss.

"Lover Come Back"

by BARRETT WILLOUGHBY

CHAPTER TEN

When Sondra returned to the sitting room, where she expected to find her grandfather nursing a mighty rage, she was surprised to see him talking cheerfully into the telephone to his old crony, Tom Jarvis, president of the Merchants' and Fishermen's Bank.

"Ho! Ho!" The Captain laughed into the telephone. "Ye should be askin' what holiday I mean! Man dear, don't ye know 'tis the name day of the great Alexander Baranov, first Governor of the Russian fur colonies in Alaska? . . . Sure, 'tis no legal holiday, but ye'd not be flyin' in the face of sacred tradition, would ye? . . . But 'tis your own bank, man. Ye can close it when ye like! And ye can have the Tanya flagship of me fleet, to take ye out there where the king salmon are that hungry they're leapin' for the naked hood. . . . What's that? Ye can't? Listen, now, ye dumb Cornishman,—" the captain's voice took on a steely ring,—"if ye value me friendship, and the O'Moore account ye'll—oh, ye get me, eh! . . . Well, thanks, Tom. . . . Sure, me boy. Call on me any time ye have snakes of your own to kill."

He eased the instrument back into its cradle and sat, grimly complacent, before he noticed Sondra's presence. "Ah, Sondy! Ye did well to show that young dockwalloper the door before I lost me temper entirely." She felt faint surprise at the genial heartiness of his tone. "Now, I'll be havin' another wee nip of the rum, darlin'. Never mind the water this time."

All through dinner Sondra was divided between wondering what Jean Reynall had to tell her, and assuring herself that she didn't care enough about it to go to the cupola to find out. Today had been the most eventful, the most disillusioning she had ever known; yet, paradoxically, she felt a quickening of the current of life, a stirring anticipation of something thrilling waiting for her in the near future. She wanted to be alone to think about this, but Liane, after dining in her room, had come downstairs. Now, languid and exotic in black velvet, the older girl was trailing Sondra from room to room, smoking and chatting.

"Sitka, ever since I can remember, has always been a dull hole, Sondra. Why you, with your money, ever came back here to live is a mystery to me. After knowing life in the outside world, too. Collele. Europe. Everything gay. Certainly, there's never been a man in the place that either you or I would consider marrying. However, this Starbuck has distinct possibilities. His manners are those of a real southern gent; and he must have money, holding the position he does. I suppose you two are good pals—both being interested in historic stuff and all that?"

"We're good friends," answered Sondra absently. The clock had just struck half-past eight. In half an hour Jean Reynall would be out there in the bay, talking across the water. The thought sent her moving restlessly from the library into the spacious old drawing room. She was thoroughly annoyed when Liane tagged after her.

"Who is this other chap who comes to the house?" asked Liane.

"What other chap?" Sondra was at the old square piano sorting music that had already been sorted.

"Don't try to hold out on me, darling. I saw him leaving the house this afternoon—tall, dark, white pull over, and a high and mighty walk."

"That must have been Captain Jean Reynall."

"Not Miss Jacqueline's boy? What luck! We were in school here together, until Miss Jack sent him out to the States. But how come, Sondra? Aren't your respective families sort of Montague-and-Capuletish?" Liane rested her folded arms on the piano with the air of one set for a long chat.

Sondra answered shortly, "He came today to see Dynamite on business. He's superintendent of a floating cannery that's just been moored to the Bates dock."

"Um-m-m-m. I must run down tomorrow and renew our childhood friendship. The lad's a complete knockout. But of course you never noticed that. Honestly, darling, you might as well be in a cloister for all the—hey! Be careful. You've torn that sheet of music in two."

It was true. Liane's patronizing tone, her frank admiration for Jean and what it implied, had irked Sondra beyond control. Moreover, it had resulted in a decision. She would go to the cupola now, come what may.

"By the way, Sondra, didn't Kemp say he was coming over tonight to bring you a bronze plaque, or something?"

"Good heavens!" thought Sondra, aghast. It was a quarter to nine. He might arrive any moment. She must get away at once. Liane's remark had given her an idea for escape. "Yes," she said aloud. "Would you mind waiting here to receive him, Liane? I want to run upstairs and do a few little things for—for Dynamite before he goes to bed. Here—sit in this easy chair The late magazines are there on the table. . . . There you are."

Sondra forced herself to walk from the room; but once out of Liane's sight, she ran up the stairs as fast as her feet could carry her.

Alone in the cupola she stood looking out through the openings, conspicuous of the scene of peace which the height and space and sweep of country always brought her.

This was the hour that had always brought romance near to her—that lover she had fashioned from dreams: Daring, wise, gentle, strong. Capable of commanding dangerous men, yet yielding to one woman—herself.

Tonight she felt, poignantly, that never again could the magic of twilight bring back that dream. It had died today in the irony and disillusionment of Jean Reynall's return.

The luminous dial of her wristwatch gave her eight minutes to nine. She leaned forward tensely, scanning the dim, shining water between the two islands.

The channel was empty. Nothing moved there.

Her nerves, grown taut with the concentrated intensity of her effort, seemed ready to snap when she heard a faint splashing sound far out. Holding her breath, she strained her eyes through the clear, amethyst dusk. Was something moving out there between the twin islands? . . . It was . . . a dim canoe gliding out from the shadows. It came to a standstill. Jean!

"Hey!" Behind her Liane's voice shattered the silence. "What's the big idea, mooning up here by yourself? I've been looking all over for you."

Sondra turned. "I—oh—I came up for—for a breath of fresh air," she stammered, weak with sudden panic. It was five minutes to nine. She must get rid of Liane before Jean began to speak. But how?

"Well, old dear, your boy-friend's arrived with your present. He—"

"Hi, Sondra!" Kemp came briskly into the cupola. His eyes were bright in his eager face. "I've got it—the Russian plaque. It's downstairs. I knew—"

"Oh, Kemp! The plaque!" Sondra hoped the hysterical note in her voice might be mistaken for joy. She acted instinctively, scarcely aware of what she was saying. "Come along, you two, let's go right down." She caught their hands and drew them to the door of the cupola. "Hurry, darlings! I can scarcely wait to see it!"

x x x

When Sondra managed an excuse to absent herself from the drawing room for a few minutes, it was five minutes past nine. She raced up the stairs, hoping desperately that something had delayed Jean's talking. But when she stepped out into the cupola she heard his guarded tones, blurred for an instant by the thumping of her heart. Then his words came clearly, referring, obviously, to something he had explained during her absence.

". . . had me puzzled from the first. But after I left you this afternoon, I placed it. Then the situation here with its implications, became all too clear. I don't want to frighten you, little one, but it might lead to anything—even murder. I don't dare say more now. But I beg of you, be on your guard—you and your grandfather. . . . About myself, now that I've told you my plans, and you understand, I'm hoping for your trust and friendship — more than aything else. But, with or without that, I'm pledged to go through with what I have to do here for Aunt Jack. There's no alternative.

"If, knowing that, you still have faith in me, prove it tomorrow when I come to see your grandfather. I'll be there early—a quarter to eleven. Meet me at the door. Before I go upstairs we'll arrange for a later talk about this other matter that has me worried. If you are not there — well, I'll understand that it's thumbs down. Should that happen, I beg of you once more—watch. Be on your guard against—"

The break was startlingly abrupt Then, as if he were singing to himself, his voice came across the night making Sondra forget, momentarily, everything he had been telling her:

"Wild geese cry, flying high,
Where silver spruce and hemlock sigh.
The campfire's glow lifts high,
. drops low.
My heart goes out to you."

The old Thlinget song of their childhood—signalling an interruption!

The words were the same—yet not the same. The boy's voice had become a man's, rich, deep, poignant. It vibrated in her heart. It put a new glamour into the northern night. It made her feel the freedom, the enchanted loneliness of the wilderness. It made her feel the beauty and the longing that only lovers know.

When it ended, she stood, wondering at herself. Was she being foolishly romantic again — or had he sung the verse not only as a signal, but also as—a love song?

CHAPTER ELEVEN

The morning following her experience in the cupola, Sondra woke with a vague feeling that something momentous had happened. Then, swiftly the events of yesterday clarified in her mind—the arrival of Jean Reynall and the Glory; the discovery that Miss Jacqueline was the old ship's owner, as well as the power behind Baranov Packers; Jean's strange fragmentary message which had come to her across the night waters of the bay.

Certain remembered phrases of that message she found no less bewildering now than they had been last night. "Menace . . . even murder. . . . Be on your guard, you and your grandfather." On guard—against what? What menace could there be in dreamy old Sitka that would justify a warning couched in such melodramatic terms?

Darn Kemp and Liane! If they hadn't kept her from reaching the cupola last night in time to hear the first part of Jean's message, she'd know what all this was about.

Jean had told her. "I must go through with what I have to do for Aunt Jack." That meant he intended to defy Dynamite and operate the Glory as a floating cannery. If he did, Dynamite certainly would declare a war that would fill the lovely summer with a merciless conflict she shrank from contemplating.

Jean could not know what a fish war in Alaska meant. Nets slashed, boats rammed, men sacrificed. "Nothing too dirty to pull." He might be overestimating his seeming advantage in finding Dynamite crippled and house-bound, unaware that the old sea-fighter's least command would be ruthlessly and efficiently carried out by young Chris Sandvik, hard-boiled senior captain of the O'Moore fleet. If he really understood this, perhaps he might try to persuade Miss Jacqueline to make peace on Dynamite's terms.

Yet, even as Sondra revolved this possibility, a wisdom older than herself told her Jean Reynall was not the man to abandon a set course merely to avoid opposition; nor was he one to urge peace solely because the alternative might mean danger to himself. No, if peace were to be effected, it must be through a better understanding between Jean and her grandfather; through a spirit of compromise permitting each to give a little for the sake of gaining more. What the situation needed now was an arbitrator, and that's where she, Sondra, might come in.

But to be successful in such a role, she must know both sides of the question. So far, she knew only the O'Moore side. To learn the other, she must see Jean when he came this morning; and before he went upstairs and further antagonized her peppery old grandfather.

Sondra flushed suddenly, realizing she had been trying to rationalise this meeting with Jean. Then, defiantly, she shut her eyes, rested her chin on her knees, and surrendered to the warm remembrances that had been clamoring for recognition at the back of her mind ever since she woke. . . . The way he had sung the old Thlinget song last night. . . . And on the stairs, the way he had looked at her when he said, "Sondra. Grown-up. Beautiful . . ."

A little shiver of happiness went through her. She opened her eyes and raised herself so she could see her reflection in the long mirror across the room. Gravely, impersonally, she scrutinized the small, bare-armed girl in the nest of pillows; big gray-green eyes under the tousled red-gold curls. Beautiful? She wanted desperately to be beautiful—for him. But . . .

Did she have faith in Jean Reynall? . . . She didn't know, without explanation or analysis; she wanted to see him again; to stand close to him and talk with him—alone. And nothing should keep her from meeting him at the door this morning.

She shrugged into a jade-green satin robe and crossed to the open window.

The radiance of the morning flashed upon her—clear blue distances; trilling of hermit thrushes; fragrance of flowers. Magnificent white clouds billowed against a sky of bachelor-button blue. Sondra gazed over the ocean toward the haunted island of St. Lazaria, and beyond that to a dim, jutting headland, with Mount Edgecombe lifting in slopes of lapis lazuli to a snow-rimmed crater.

It was out there, recently, that scouting fishermen, homeward bound through a heavy fog, had glimpsed a "ghost ship". A mysterious vessel, gray as the vapors that wrapped her, slipping seaward at incredible speed. . . . It was out there, too, that the herring would presently appear in glittering, swimming schools; some twenty square miles in area and many fathoms deep. Incredible numbers of fish! But this morning she found herself marveling less at the boundless abundance of the north than at the greed of men who fought one another so ruthlessly for that harvest when there was more than enough for all.

Along Sitka's waterfront, such men were waiting now for the galvanizing cry: "Herring! The run is on!" Waiting in big O'Moore trawlers; in the small, well-kept vessels of Kemp's fleet; and in the "Siwash Armada", a clutter of slovenly native craft anchored in front of the native village farther along.

On Kemp's float a number of his herring-boat skippers were gathered respectfully around his newly arrived fleet captain, Ikeda. After a brief word to the group, the trim-looking Japanese handed each man in turn a slip of white paper which doubtless bore his typed orders for the day. Disciplined efficiency, thought Sondra, wondering at Dynamite's bias against these wiry little brown men who handled themselves and their fish-boats so smartly. And how polite they were—each skipper making a jerky bow to Ikeda before he hopped aboard his craft and sent it floating off toward the sheltered reaches of Peril Strait.

But now the multiple put-put-put of their setting-forth was drowned in the roar of a powerful Diesel, as the Tanya, flagship of the O'Moore fleet, headed out, full speed, through the middle passage that wound through the islands to the open sea.

Sondra waved to Captain Chris Sandvik, whose burly shoulders filled the wheelhouse window. He was bound for the offshore fishing grounds with orders for the O'Moore patrol, maintained day and night to spot the vanguard of the expected run. Aft, on a pile of green nets, fat old Tom Jarvis puttered with the strip-fishing tackle which insured him a day of bliss far from the cares of his bank.

The entire waterfront was astir now — men's voices calling, bells clanging, exhausts roaring; and over all, the strident clamor of gulls. There was something wonderfully stimulating in these sights and sounds, which spoke of the harvesting of the sea that gave life to old Sitka.

There was but one discordant note, which Sondra had studiously avoided seeing until now—the Glory. But as her eyes moved over the cluttered, stump-masted deck, her frown gave way to a look of happy surprise. Leaning against an outer wall of the Glory's charthouse was John Winthrop—the Forest Man. He had been absent from Sitka three years, and this was the first she knew of his return.

As usual, he was bareheaded, and in the sun his thick hair, his beard, and his faded khakis were all one golden shade. Also, as usual, he wore an air of serene watchfulness, as he lounged there facing the Starbuck float.

GRENVILLE DOCKS IN LOCAL HARBOR

Crew Hard at Work Loading Gas Buoys to be Placed in Bay of Quinte

Working her way westward up the lakes to the western limit of her beat, the buoy tender "Grenville" docked at the Belleville harbour this morning and took aboard the large gas buoys, which had been placed on the Government Dock for the winter months, and will place them in their allotted position in the Bay of Quinte. When visited shortly before the noon hour the boat's crew were hard at work on the gas buoys loading them with gas and putting on the various fixtures, which are necessary to keep them burning throughout the summer months.

When speaking with the master of the boat, Captain J. Berry of Prescott, it was learned that the occupation of tending buoys was not merely a seasonal job, but one which took up the boat's full time all through the summer months. Captain Berry, veteran of 38 seasons with the Marine Department, said this morning that the boat's district included all waterways between Coteau Landing, only 30 miles west of Montreal, to Point Edward, a few miles above Sarnia and on the shore of Lake Huron. It was their duty to transport all supplies to lighthouses within that district and to tend all buoys which needed attention. It kept them so busy, said Captain Berry, that even with a crew of 21 men aboard they could hardly find time to paint the "Grenville."

'Loneliest Soldier' Mail Not Accepted By P. O. Department

While the Post Office Department has, on numerous occasions, solved puzzle-addresses and even has known where to send mail addressed to Santa Claus, it is unable to accept any letters or parcels addressed to "The Loneliest Soldier" or "The Lonely Soldier." Notice was given today that the Post Office Department will not undertake any delivery of mail so addressed, and Postmasters have been advised that such letters if handed in at a Post Office are not to be accepted and if posted in street letter boxes are to be sent to the Dead Letter Office. Mail addressed as above bearing a return address on the cover will be returned to the sender.

Recently a large quantity of letters addressed to "The Loneliest Soldier" or "The Lonely Soldier" were received from Aldershot, England, by the Dead Letter Office. The Post Office Department, while recognizing the sympathetic consideration which prompted the writers of such letters, points out the difficulty which would confront the Postal Service or military authorities in attempting to select the "loneliest" soldier from day to day upon receipt of batches of mail addressed as above and directs attention to the fact that the handling of such mail in any quantity delays the despatch of properly addressed mail.

On Feb. 7 a Canadian Press story from Aldershot told of a disappointed soldier who walked empty-handed from the barracks post office when his comrades were reading letters from home.

The story disclosed the soldier's parents, because of pacifist views, were not writing him and he became known as the division's "loneliest soldier".

The name of the soldier was kept in confidence by The Canadian Press to prevent embarrassment but stacks of mail addressed to him in care of The Canadian Press at London were delivered. Even mail addressed to Aldershot's "Loneliest Soldier" direct reached the Canadian but difficulties arose when letters merely addressed "Lonely Soldier" began to appear.

Resident Warned Against Practice

Rummaging in private garbage-pails left for morning collection, has proven a hindrance in the gathering of garbage, according to complaints made by Bert Zebedee, local garbage collector recently. Early today while making collections along Charles St., Mr. Zebedee observed a man rummaging through private garbage receptacles. City police were notified and Detective Fred Isard apprehended Frank Elliott, 21 St. Paul St., who was taken to the police station for questioning.

"Men with pushcarts make regular rounds of the city gathering articles of rummage from out of garbage pails, leaving debris strewn along the streets and generally impeding the progress of our work," Mr. Zebedee complained to police today.

After questioning today Elliott was permitted his liberty and allowed to take his pushcart home, after being warned against repetition of rummaging through private garbage containers by Chief Kidd. Charges are being preferred in today's case and a more serious charge will follow whenever subsequent cases are brought to the attention of the police, authorities warned.

Why Common Cold Travels So Fast

We were taught as medical students that influenza was due to a certain bacillus. During the 1918-19 epidemic, this bacillus or organism was often found in the throats of those suffering with influenza and it was found also in individuals who were not suffering with influenza. Similarly with the common cold. Certain organisms that were believed to cause the cold are found in healthy throats.

Today it is believed that while a certain organism causes the common cold, it is too small to be seen. "It belongs to the class of organisms known as 'filterable viruses' because they are small enough to pass through a porcelain filter, which will catch ordinary bacteria or organisms".

The fact that this organism is so small and can get through "anything" to get "somewhere" explains why the common cold is so common and why it travels so rapidly and thoroughly through homes, offices and factories. It is very difficult to stop this organism on its travels.

Illustrating how easily the common cold organism goes from one person to another was shown by Dr. L. M. Miller in an article in Hygeia.

It is because of our friendly habits with our families, our neighbors our friends, and even strangers, that this virus or organism travels so rapidly.

We sneeze in crowded rooms and the virus rides in the air in tiny droplets until the next victim breathes it in. We blow our noses politely and then shake hands with a friend, who later takes a pencil in that hand and puts it in his mouth. Or we kiss and give our love and our virus too. Or we leave it on door knobs for the next comer.

While there are many "home remedies for treating a cold, some of which are effective even if not always recognized by physicians, nevertheless the one outstanding or important point in the treatment is getting off the feet and into bed. Taking hot drinks and putting feet into hot water shortens the time of the attack and eases the symptoms.

The idea behind getting to bed at once is to save the strength of the heart should any complications arise. The common cold in itself is not serious but its complications—bronchitis, bronchopneumonia and pneumonia—are very dangerous.

DEATH PROPOSED FOR GRAVE CASES SPYING, SABOTAGE

Measures Introduced in Britain Provide for Death Penalty

NOT RETROACTIVE

Minister of Home Defence States He Believes 'These Powers Are Necessary'

London, May 9 (CP).—The death penalty for "grave cases of espionage and sabotage" was provided in a series of measures presented to the House of Commons today by Sir John Anderson, Home Secretary and Minister for Home Security.

Sir John said the steps were urgently required to combat "fifth column" activities and subversive propaganda "calculated to foment opposition to prosecution of the war."

He emphasized that "these regulations have been very carefully drawn so as to avoid penalizing mere expression of opinion, while at the same time giving full power to deal with mischievous activities directed toward impeding the war effort of the nation."

The death penalty clause was provided in a special government bill. The other measures were presented as orders-in-council to amend existing defence regulations.

Amendments Explained.

As explained by the Home Secretary, these amendments empower the government to:

1. "Intern non-enemy aliens who would ordinarily be deported but cannot be deported to their own country by reason of circumstances arising from the war."

2. "Control the entry into this country of persons repatriated from enemy territory who, technically British subjects, have no close association with British interests. A person to whom the regulation applies may, as an alternative to internment, be required to reside within a specified area and not travel outside it without permission."

3. "Check the spread of propaganda calculated to undermine the resolution of the people to prosecute the war to a successful issue."

4. "Make it an offence to endeavor to incite men who are liable to military service to evade their duties or to endeavor to incite persons who abstain from enrolling voluntarily in any defence service."

No Retroactive Enforcement

Sir John told a questioner that the measures would not be enforced retroactively. He said that individuals or organizations persisting in such propaganda after being warned would be liable to a prison term of seven years, a fine of 500 pounds, ($2,225), or both. He went on to explain:

"Finally, new regulations have been made empowering the Secretary of State to direct that no further use will be made, pending an application to the high court, of any printing press which has been used for the production of documents published in contravention of regulations dealing with illegal propaganda."

Communist Asks Question

William Gallacher, Communist, asked: "Will there be any attempt to give a definition of what is meant by the very loosely worded phrase "opposing the national war effort" because it is very desirable that the working classes of this country who were not taken into consultation in connection with the war, should have the right to oppose the war and take legitimate measures to change the government and get a government that will work for peace instead of extending the war?"

In announcing the measures, the Home Secretary had advised the House that copies of the new regulations would be made available to members during the day.

"The honorable gentleman should wait", he said following Mr Gallacher's interpellation, "until he has seen the regulations. Every effort has been made to define the purpose of the regulations in as precise a way as possible."

Satisfied 'Powers are Necessary'

After listing the anti-espionage and anti-defeatist regulations, Sir John said: "I am satisfied that these powers are necessary to meet situation with which we may be faced."

Asked whether the government had been influenced by "experiences recently endured by other countries as a result of enemy action," he explained:—

"While I would be sorry to think that circumstances in this country were exactly comparable to circumstances elsewhere, the government have certainly had in mind in framing these regulations the dangers—possibly limited in extent —to which the state might be exposed."

FIRE LOSS IS $18,000

Coteville, Que., May 9 (CP) — Fire which for a time threatened to destroy this village four miles east of Hull was brought under control this afternoon after four homes, four sheds and two garages were gutted.

Twenty-five persons were left homeless by the blaze which started from overheated stovepipes in one of the houses. Property damage was estimated at between $15,000 and $18,000.

The members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police who went to England with the Canadian Active Service Force are slightly less colorful without their horses and red and blue uniforms, but, nevertheless, make an impressive sight when lined up with their motorcycles as in this photograph which was taken in England.

Epic Battles Fought in Norway By R.A.F. Pilots Against Odds

One Pilot Without Ammunition and Almost Without Gasoline Saved His Plane by Repeated Feints at German Heinkels

London, May 9—(CP) — Behind the brief report given in the House of Commons last night by Sir Samuel Hoare, Air Secretary, of a gallant battle between a fighter squadron of gladiators and 80 or 90 German bombers over an improvised base in southern Norway lies an amazing story of the bravery and determination of a small group of Royal Air Force men who participated in the fight.

Further details today revealed that this battle was one of the most thrilling and inspiring air engagements of the war. Soon after the squadron had landed on frozen Lake Kesjeskogen, 40 miles southeast of Andalsnes, it was necessary for some of them to take off to intercept two aircraft which were approaching the lake but were found to have Norwegian markings.

These Norwegian aircraft probably were flown by German pilots for at 3 a.m. the next day a patrol of the lake began. After shooting down a Heinkel in preliminary battles the Royal Air Force men were raided from 7.30 a.m. until 8 p.m.

Except on a runway, deep melting snow made it almost impossible to move. British pilots became drenched after having to crawl through the snow on their hands and knees.

Incessant Attacks

Throughout the incessant attacks to which the landing ground was subjected, the pilots remained in the open, without cover and without thought of seeking any. As they came down from their combats with the enemy they refuelled, replenished their ammunition and tried to start up again.

As one by one the aircraft were destroyed, the pilots, although some were badly burned, helped one another get the remaining aircraft into the air. Towards the end of the day, when ammunition was exhausted, the pilots made attacks which were feints, without any chance of returning the enemy's fire.

One pilot, with no ammunition and practically no gasoline, was attacked by three of the most modern and heavily armed German fighters. He saved his aircraft from being shot down by repeatedly attempting to collide with the enemy until they swerved away from him.

Attacks on 3 Heinkels

"I attacked three Heinkels during the course of my patrol," one pilot reported. "How much damage I inflicted I cannot say, as there was always another Heinkel to attack.

"I broke away as I was running short of petrol and not certain of my position. I landed on the lake and saw three Junkers approaching so I took off again and attacked these, eventually making a forced landing through lack of petrol. In all I had 16 combats.

Altogether on this day 40 sorties were carried out and 37 enemy aircraft were engaged. On the British landing ground on the frozen lake 132 craters could be counted.

By the end of the day only five of 18 gladiators remained serviceable, but the gladiators had taken their toll. Six enemy aircraft for certain and probably eight more were brought down on the surrounding mountains.

Lloyd George Accused By Beverley Baxter Of Having Encouraged Adolf Hitler

London, May 9—(CP)— Just before the House of Commons rose today for the Whitsun recess, Beverley Baxter, Toronto-born Conservative, accused David Lloyd George of having encouraged Adolf Hitler at several critical moments.

He urged that Mr. Lloyd George "reform so that his genius and indomitable spirit might be used in the future conduct of the war."

Mr. Lloyd George, who in yesterday's debate was one of the leaders of the attack on the government, replied that Britain was to blame for Hitler's rise to power and that since 1922 he had urged the conquering powers to exert their authority and carry out the pledges made in the treaty of Versailles and afterward.

"They had the opportunity," he declared. "Germany was prostrate adn the creation of this terrible power in Germany, and the spirit behind it which makes it so formidable is due to the fact that we did not carry out our pledges."

SUPERVISOR ROBBED OF $1,200

Montreal, May 9 (CP) — Hazen Johnson, supervisor of an oil company, reported to police last night that he had been robbed of $1,200 by an armed man in the vestibule of an apartment house. Johnson said he was returning from collecting receipts from several stations of his company and was accosted by the gunman as he entered the apartment building.

WAR BRIEFS

London, May 9—(AP)— Home Secretary Sir John Anderson told a questioner in the House of Commons today that printed notices urging workers to listen in on a German radio station calling itself "The New British Broadcasting Station" were being distributed outside of North London factories.

He said the workers could aid police in "the efforts they are making to discover and bring to justice the persons responsible."

London, May 9 (CP).—A prediction that Germany will bomb Britain "and probably soon" was published by the Magazine Aeroplane, which urged a campaign of "swift methodical attacks by the Royal Air Force on Germany's communications, munitions, aircraft works and flying fields."

"We must not be forestalled again . . . we must carry the war to Germany," the magazine article declared.

"We must use our air force to hit the enemy hard and often in his tenderest spots."

Philadelphia, May 9 (AP).—Miss Anna Jarvis, 61-year-old founder of Mother's Day, has suggested to the heads of Europe's warring nations that an "armistice" be observed on Sunday as a tribute to "mothers living and dead". She cabled her plea to King George, King Haakon, Premier Paul Reynaud and Adolf Hitler last night.

Hollywood, May 9 (AP)—A good movie job is going begging. Twentieth Century-Fox wants someone to play the role of Adolf Hitler in "I Married a Nazi". It's an excellent speaking role. Jack Cooper, former Sennett comedian, declined today even to take a test. He is a British subject.

Honolulu, May 9 (AP).—Germany's seizure of Denmark has raised a question for the former Barbara Hutton, who gave up her American citizenship to wed the Danish Count Haugwitz von Reventlow from whom she has filed suit for divorce. The dime store heiress, who arrived in Honolulu the other day, was asked what nationality she considered herself. "I didn't read the papers today," she answered.

Manila, May 9—(AP)— War uncertainties caused two Scandinavian freighters to unload their cargoes and announce today they would remain in Manila harbor indefinitely.

The Swedish freighter Ningp discharged a $250,000 cargo of coconut oil consigned by Philippine interests to Gothenburg, Sweden. Representatives of the ship said European waters were too hazardous.

The Danish freighter Nell Maersk unloaded 1,470 cases of desiccated coconut intended for New York. The coconut will be reshipped in another vessel because Britain, since Germany invaded Denmark, have said Danish ships would be subject to seizure as vessels of a belligerent.

Calcutta, May 9—(CP Cable) — The Star of India, commenting on yesterday's debate in the British House of Commons said today that Prime Minister Chamberlain "is no match for Hitler."

"He (Mr. Chamberlain) is not conscious that he is living, in a ruthless age" the newspaper said. "It is no use applying new testament precepts to a megalomaniac. The Empire will feel happier if a more national government emerges as a result of the debate."

Somewhere in Northern Norway, May 9 (CP-Havas).—The German attempt to drive northward overland from Trondheim to Narvik has slowed down south of Mo, the midway point, and is prevented by geographical conditions from assuming a blitzkrieg pace, according to Norwegian military sources today.

The roadless, railless, hill-ribbed country between the Nam Valley and Narvik offers the Norwegians a fairer chance against the invaders and liberate them from the relentless air attack which crushed them around Steinkjer and the Gudbrandsal. . . . .

Paris, May 9 (CP-Havas). — Le Temps reported last night that oil deposits discovered in southern France, in the Departments of Arige and Haute-Garonne, may prove so large as to cover French national petroleum consumption. Discovery of oil in the Saint-Gaudens region was reported a few days ago.

Montreal, May 9 (CP).—A committee of six to organize aid for Norway was formed here last night at a meeting of Norwegian residents of Montreal and Hawkesbury, Ont.

The meeting was called by J. Bergithon of Hawkesbury, who acted at the request of the National Council of Norsemen, Winnipeg.

SEARCH WARRANT NOT MANDATORY

Ottawa, May 9 (CP)—A search warrant is not mandatory for Royal Canadian Mounted Police officers investigating a suspected offence or a suspected imminent offence under the Defence of Canada regulations, Mr. Justice Edgar Chevrier of the Ontario Supreme Court ruled today at the trial of three men charged with printing and distributing anti-war pamphlets.

START WORK ON BRIDGE

Buffalo, N.Y., May 9 (CP)—Construction of the new $3,760,000 International Bridge at Niagara Falls will start on the United States side next Monday, Norman H. McLain, contractor in charge of preliminary concrete foundation work, said today. The span will replace the so-called "Honeymoon" bridge destroyed by ice in January, 1938.

BODY IS FOUND SLUMPED IN CAR

George Herbert, Driver of Car, Found in Bed and Charged With Careless Driving

Toronto, May 9.—(CP)—Investigating the wreckage of an automobile here today, police found the crumbled body of 45-year-old George Simpson slumped in the rear seat.

Apparently unaware one of his passengers was dead, George Herbert, driver of the car, took a taxi and proceeded to his home. He was found in bed by police and later charged with careless driving and failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

Herbert and three other passengers in the car suffered minor injuries when the vehicle crashed into a Hydro pole and after receiving emergency hospital treatment, went to their homes. When police found Herbert in bed, they said he was bleeding from a deep chin cut.

Sane Outlook Urged in Time Of 'War of Nerves'

Dr. Dorothy Turville Says 'One of Prime Duties is to Keep Home Fires Burning'

London, Ont., May 9.— (CP) — Dr. Dorothy Turville, of the University of Western Ontario, warned the Provincial Council of Women here today that women should not be so "hysterically active in war effort that they fail to keep "the home fires burning".

Dr. Turville, who is assistant professor of romance languages and Dean of Women at Western, addressed a luncheon of the semi-annual convention on the topic, "Women's Place in Canada".

She declared that "one of the very best aids that women can be to society, especially in wartime, is to keep the normal routine of life running smoothly along its accustomed grooves—particularly in this war which is journalistically said to be a 'war of nerves'.

"Women, more than men, are able to provide through social activities the relaxation necessary to preserve a sane outlook on life".

"I think one of our prime duties is to keep the home fires burning," Dr. Turville stressed. "We should not go off on Red Cross or other service tangents so hysterically as to neglect the family circle. Life must go on as usual if we are to have stamina enough to remain firm until the end."

Urges That Dominions Receive Two Votes in War Cabinet

Sydney, Australia, May 9—(CP-Cable)—The Sydney Sun today urged the inclusion of Dominion ministers in Britain's war cabinet.

"Perhaps from Prime Minister Chamberlain's difficulties will come a better recognition of the strength of the empire's democracies," the newspaper commented.

The Sydney bulletin urged that the Dominions be given two votes in the war cabinet.

"New blood obviously is needed in the Allied war council, to which Norway and Poland have been admitted and the Dominions can and should supply it," the bulletin said.

The Sydney Herald declared that "the nation and the empire can summon the mighty effort needed for victory only if they are assured that they are being firmly and wisely led."

"At present that assurance is wholly lacking" the Herald added.

RECEIVED BATTLE FLAG

Arras, France, May 9 (CP-Havas) —The first regiment of the reconstituted Czecho-Slovak army in France received its battle flag here today in ceremonies marking the 25th anniversary of the battle of Arras, in which soldiers first saw Great War service with the Allies.

FINED UNDER FISHERY LAW

Fred Babcocke, Deseronto fisherman and trucker, pleaded guilty to a charge of transporting game fish, namely pickerel, contrary to the Game and Fisheries Act during the year 1939. A fine of $10. and costs was paid, although Babcocke pleaded innocent to a similar charge dated in 1940. The latter charge was enlarged for one week at the request of Game Warden Herb McCabe, who preferred both counts.

2,500,000 MEN SUBJECT TO CALL BY PROCLAMATION

King George Issues Proclamation Making Men from 27 to 36 Years Old Subject to Service

EVASIONS SMALL

London, May 9 —(CP)— King George today signed a proclamation making men from 27 to 36 years old liable to military service and bringing Britain's total of those subject to call to an estimated 2,500,000.

The last proclamation, issued Jan. 1 rendered men from 20 to 27 subject to service.

The 27-year age group is scheduled to register May 25 making the total already called to the colors approximately 2,000,000.

The King's new order affects men born between May 10, 1903, and May 9, 1921, inclusive.

The proclamation also enabled the government to call up 19-year-olds, though they will not be required to register unless they reach 20 in the next few months.

Group Called Each Month

It was expected that one age group, on an ascending scale, would be called each month unless circumstances require registration of more than that number a month.

Exemptions for men in vital industries and for conscientious objectors undoubtedly will cut the total of those actually available for service.

The number of men available decreases in the higher age groups because from the age of 30 upwards the schedule of reserved occupations, such as in textiles and construction, take an increasing toll.

The number of deliberate evasions of military service in previous call-ups was reported "comparatively small," and the ratio of conscientious objectors has fallen with each registration.

N. B. AIRMAN AWARDED D. F. C.

Pilot Officer Philip Purdy, 21, Led Successful Attack Against Enemy Heinkel 111

London, May 9.—(CP Cable)—A young New Brunswick airman has been awarded the distinguished Flying Cross, the Air Ministry announced last night, for his leadership in an attack on enemy aircraft and for bravery under fire.

He is Pilot-Officer Philip Purdy of St. Stephen, age 21. He led a successful attack against an enemy Heinkel III, the Ministry said. He also showed bravery in remaining in his cockpit while subjected to a bombing attack by three enemy planes and abandoned his aircraft only when it was set afire by a bomb.

Purdy received serious burns but insisted in helping start two other planes in the face of enemy machine-gun fire.

Other awards included the distinguished service order for Squadron-Leader John Donaldson, a Briton whose squadron of fighter aircraft in the Andalsnes region of Norway shot down six enemy planes and put eight others out of action.

(Air Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare told the House of Commons that this squadron possibly accounted for as many as 30 German planes before the greater part of the British planes were themsel[illegible] put out of action by terrific bombardment of their base by reinforced German bombers.)

British Press Unanimous in Asking for Government Changes After Surveying Debate

London, May 9—(CP-Cable)—The British Press was unanimous today in asking for government changes as it surveyed the Norway debate, but opinions varied between the need for a government shuffle and the need for a completely new ministry.

The Daily Express felt that more important than ministerial shuffles was the need for Britain to regain air supremacy.

"With airplanes we are safe—whether Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Churchill are in office or out of office," it said. "Without airplanes we are sunk—no matter who sits in power at Downing Street and in Whitehall."

The Daily Herald and the News Chronicle called for a new ministry.

The Times said that "after the disclosures of opinion in parliament and in the Press during the present week there can be no question of the strength of the demand for a ministry more broadly based and therefore differently constituted. The only question is how it can be achieved and how soon."

It went on: "If the Labor party fails to answer a clear public call it leaves the Prime Minister more free to choose his own means of showing that the set-back in southern Norway was not merely a failure successfully extenuated, but a new starting point for British energy and valor."

The Daily Telegraph said that the Prime Minister hinted he was prepared to make changes and suggested that he would be well advised to do so.

Thinks There Should Be Purge

Among the Scottish Press Provincial newspapers, the Dundee Courier said it could not see any political figure more trust-worthy than Mr. Chamberlain but thought there should be a purge of the inefficient members of the administration.

The Yorkshire Post and the Birmingham Post advocated the need for an infusion of new blood in the cabinet.

The Daily Herald said: "Parliament has dismissed the Prime Minister. Morally and politically Mr. Neville Chamberlain has been defeated beyond hope of recovery in commons . . . . the nation's will is that Chamberlain shall go".

Interpreting the debate as showing that the Chamberlain Government no longer commands the confidence of parliament and country the News Chronicle said: "The need of the hour is that Mr. Chamberlain should bow to the will of the country and a new and strong government, representative of all parties should be formed."

The mirror, criticizing the appointment of the Air Secretary, Sir Samuel Hoare, spoke of him as "one of the weary architects of our present deficient air power", and asked if there was any better example or "any better argument to be advanced for the dire and urgent need of a change of government".

The News Chronicle flared "Chamberlain likely to resign" across its front page.

Reports Change Certain

The political correspondent of the Daily Express, Guy Eden, reported that a change of government is certain, but whether it would be headed by Mr. Chamberlain or someone else would be decided during consultations later today.

Elsewhere the Express said it was believed Mr. Chamberlain would not resign but would reconstruct the cabinet.

The Daily Mail's political correspondent, Wilson Broadbent, said that Mr. Chamberlain's resignation to make possible a drastic reconstruction was regarded as a certainty. He speculated, however, that the King might not accept the resignation and might ask him to form a new government.

Editorially the Mail said that "the country wants a new team, which will give no promise but performance."

Its ace cartoonist, Illingworth, depicted the debate as a scuffle where Mr. Churchill is punching Clement Attlee, leader of the Labor Opposition, and Mr. Chamberlain, wielding his umbrella, is pushing Leslie Hore-Belisha, former war secretary, in the face, while Leopold C.M.S. Amery, former First Lord of the Admiralty, is tugging Mr. Chamberlain's tie, Oliver Stanley, the War Secretary, is depicted as lying on the ground while the struggle is going on.

AT THE BELLE

"Dr. Kildare's Strange Case"

The romance behind the walls of a great hospital and dramatic moments of a life and death struggle mingle in M-G-M's latest "Dr. Kildare" story, "Dr. Kildare's Strange Case," now on the Belle theatre screen. With Lew Ayres and Lionel Barrymore again in their familiar roles as the impetuous young intern, Dr. James Kildare, and the eminent diagnostician, Dr. Leonard Gillespie, the story revolves about a supposed incurable psychiatric case. After Kildare has refused a tempting and highly remunerative life-time post in a private sanitarium, he returns to his hospital and is assigned to surgery. His first case is an accident victim, demanding immediate brain surgery. The patient comes out of his coma hopelessly insane, and Kildare's friend, Shepperd Strudwick, is held responsible for having bungled the operation. Taking matters into his own hands, Kildare does a little detective work and administers insulin shock treatment to restore the patient to mental normalcy. Though he refused to allow Dr. Gillispie or even the head of the hospital, Dr. Carew, to know what he is doing, Ayres goes ahead, brings the patient out of insanity and thereby clears himself and the surgeon. Based upon an original story by Max Brand and Willis Goldbeck, the picture presents many dramatic highlights, including the picturization of the successful insulin shock treatment and the reactions the patient goes througn as the basic part of his brain is finally rendered normal. Harold S. Bucquet, who filmed the three previous "Kildare" films as well as "On Borrowed Time" directed. Settings include a bird's-eye view of a large surgery room and the picturization of a delicate brain operation, the grounds of a large private sanitarium, the interior and exterior of a great hospital, the interior of the sanitarium, and the private quarters of Dr. Gillispie. Featured in the cast are Laraine Day as the understanding sweetheart of Ayres, Shepperd Strudwick, Samuel S. Hinds, Emma Dunn, Nat Pendleton, Walter Kingsford and Alma Kruger. Comedy highlights are supplied by Pendleton as the ambulance driver with a faculty for wielding a wrench and Marie Blake as the hospital telephone operator.

"Curtain Call" Romantic Drama

Romance, comedy and pathos is deftly woven throughout RKO Radio's sparkling comedy drama about the theatre, "Curtain Call" the companion feature attraction. Barbara Read, Alan Mowbray, Helen Vinson, Donald MacBride and John Archer are featured.

Jimmy Dorsey and orchestra presenting a smart musical revue will be exhibited on the same program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"RANGE WAR"

"Hopalong Cassidy" comes riding to the aid of despairing ranchers who are trying to build a railroad spur which will make it unnecessary for them to pay tolls for their cattle to cross the property of a greedy land baron on the way to market in the new action romance, "Range War," now showing at the Capitol with William Boyd cast again as the famed range hero. Called in by the banker who is backing the ranchers, "Hopalong" goes to work to find out who stole the payroll needed so badly to keep the construction crews at work. By means of a clever ruse, "Hopalong" pretends to be an outlaw joins up with the gang engaged by the outlaw to prevent the construction of the spur. "Hopalong's" daring moves lead to a climax which tops anything ever seen in a "Hopalong" film for action and thrills. Russell Hayden is seen again as "Lucky", "Hopalong's" saddlemate, Willard Robertson plays the land baron, Betty Moran provides romantic interest opposite Hayden, and Britt "Speedy" Wood, droll, harmonica-playing Clarence E. Mulford character joins "Hopalong" and "Lucky" for the first time in this picture. Harry (Pop) Sherman produced for Paramount, with Lesley Selander directing. And on the same programme:

"Free, Blonde and 21

Love, laughter and lots of drama—that's the formula for a typical night in the lives of the exciting new batch of lovelies at the Sherrington, swank metropolitan hotel for women in "Free, Blonde and 21."

Lynn Bari, Mary Beth Hughes, Katharine Aldridge and Helen Ericson are among the lovely guests, and things happen with an explosive rapidity when their paths cross those of Henry Wilcoxon, Robert Lowery and Alan Baxter.

Joan Davis as the comic maid and Chick Chandler as her taxi-driver boy friend provide plenty of comedy in this compelling film, ably directed by Ricardo Cortez. Sol M. Wurtzel was executive producer.

The 3rd chapter "The Phantom Creeps" and a cartoon complete the bill.

Lynn Bari, Mary Beth Hughes, Helen Ericson and Katharine Aldridge in "Free, Blonde and 21," the Century-Fox film now showing at the Capitol. On the same program "Range War" with "Hopalong Cassidy" Bill Boyd.

Invasion of Three Little Countries Signalled by Waves of German Bombers and Parachute Troops Dropped in Dark Hours Before Dawn — Crossed Belgian Frontier at Four Points—Population Ordered to Remain Calm — More Than 100 Planes Roared Over Brussels—General Mobilization Ordered

Brussels, May 10 (AP)—The German land forces have been stopped within a few hundred yards of the frontier after entering Belgium, the Foreign Ministry announced today.

Belgium met the German invasion by full mobilization and her King, Leopold III, assumed command of the nation's forces, as his father, Albert, did more than 25 years ago.

French and British liaison officers reached Brussels for contacts with the Belgian General Staff six hours after Belgium had asked her old Allies of 1914 for aid against the new German invasion.

Brussels was bombed this morning and had three air raid alarms in the early afternoon.

Stopped Close to Border

While the first wave of Nazi bombers took a toll of at least seven killed and 80 wounded throughout the country, the Foreign Ministry said the German land forces had been stopped no more than a few hundred yards over the Belgian frontier.

They were halted by Belgian troops entrenched behind the "demolition line," a first defence area of destroyed bridges and roads and other barriers.

King Leopold ordered complete mobilization and took active command of all the armed forces.

At the same time Foreign Minister Paul-Henri Spaak, in a note to the German Ambassador, announced "Belgium will defend herself with all means . . . and can not be vanquished."

Two children were killed and 50 persons wounded in an air raid on Brussels. The Brussels airport also was bombed.

Bombs fell on numerous railway stations in the heart of the country.

Complete Mobilization Ordered

King Leopold, taking active command of the armed forces as his father, King Albert, did in 1914, ordered complete mobilization against the invaders and appealed to the Allies for help.

Both Britain and France promised quick aid against the German blow, which came without warning in an attempt to clear a route into France and secure bases for attacking England.

The Belgian Foreign Minister, Paul-Henri Spaak, pleading for assistance "without delay," told the French and British Ambassadors that the Belgian government "has decided to resist with all its powers."

The King prepared to address a special session of the Chamber of Deputies.

A hospital for the insane at Mortsel was reported to have been set afire by bombs. (This report was denied in Germany.)

The German attack began without warning between 3 and 4 a.m. (10 p.m. and 11 p.m. EDT Thursday) and not until 7.30 a.m. did the German Ambassador, Vicco Von Buelow-Schwante, ask to see Foreign Minister Paul Henri Spaak to whom he presented 45 minutes later an ultimatum couched in terms similar to the historic demand that began the First Great War in 1914.

The Belgian Government flatly rejected the German demand for free passage for German troops through Belgium's territory.

Appeal Flashed

An appeal was flashed to London and Paris for aid against the invaders. Less than two hours after the German Ambassador's call on M. Spaak, French troops were reported across the border near Mons, scene of one of the greatest battles of the last war.

The Dutch Hotly Defend Rotterdam From Germans Landed From Planes

(By Max Harrelson, Associated Press Staff Writer)

Rotterdam, the Netherlands, May 10—(AP)—A German army of the air spanned the strong land and water-line defences of the Netherlands today and, landing by parachute and in huge seaplane transports at the western side of the nation, fought its way into part of this seaport city.

The troops occupied Rotterdam's Waalhaven airport, after first levelling it with a tremendous aerial bombardment; alighted on the Nieuwe Maas River in the centre of Rotterdam, occupied a big bridge across the river and captured the Maas railway station in the city.

Heavy fighting was going on in Rotterdam itself, with Dutch troops clinging tenaciously to the right bank of the Nieuwe Maas, which bisects the city.

On the other side of Holland, across the main water line now fed by wide open dykes, Netherland first-line defenders were resisting a German land army which entered the country along the Rhine and penetrated some 15 miles to the vicinity of the Ijssel River, near Arnhem

Rotterdam was taken completely by surprise at 4 a.m. (11.40 p.m. EDT) by the roar of hundreds of German planes over the city. Virtually the entire population streamed into the streets in nightclothes.

The Waalhaven airport, south of the city, was converted into a series of craters by air bombs and the hangars knocked to the ground. Although anti-aircraft batteries kept up a constant barrage, the German succeeded in landing their men by parachute and overwhelming the Dutch defenders.

Great German seaplanes alighted on the Nieuwe Maas, putting troops ashore in rubber boats, but the Germans were unable to penetrate the right bank of the river. German troops trying to advance along the left bank also were kept from crossing the stream by stubborn Dutch resistance.

The Dutch were entirely in control of the right bank early this afternoon. All drawbridges had been opened to prevent crossing.

Barricades were thrown up in the streets. The Germans were using abandoned street cars for shelters.

The Germans who landed in the river had both light and heavy machine guns. They easily disarmed the few Dutch soldiers guarding the big bridge and took the railway station on the left bank with little trouble.

A police inspector who was near the station drew a revolver and was shot down immediately. Other police were killed or wounded in trying to resist.

'HOUR HAS COME' SAYS HITLER TO GERMAN TROOPS

Claims Aim of Britain and France for 300 Years Has Been to Weaken Germany

CLAIMS NO HATRED

London, May 10 —(CP)— The Exchange Telegraph Agency said today Adolf Hitler in a message to the German troops told them: "Soldiers of the Western Front, the hour has come for the most decisive struggle of the German people."

The agency quoted the Nazi Fuehrer as saying:— .

"It has been the aim of Britain and France for 300 years to prevent any consolidation in Europe and especially to weaken Germany.

"France alone has declared war on Germany 31 times in the last two centuries to achieve this aim.

"It has been the aim of the British for many decades to divide Germany into many smaller states in order to rob her of her strength and of the necessities for 80,000,000 people.

Several Airdromes Attacked Unsuccessfully and Five Nazi Planes Shot Down

London, May 10 — (CP) — The Royal Air Force shot down five German planes in succession resisting Nazi attacks on British air bases in France, the Air Ministry announced today.

The communique announcing the action said:

"In the early hours of this morning enemy aircraft unsuccessfully attacked several airdromes occupied by the Royal Air Force in France. R.A.F. fighters engaged the enemy and it is already known that five enemy aircraft were shot down."

At Same Time French Air Force Beats Off Nazi Air Attacks Within Her Own Borders

CITIES ARE BOMBED

Nancy, Lille, Colmar, Pantoise and Luxeuil Raided and Many Civilians Killed

Paris, May 10—(CP) — British and French troops were authoritatively reported moving rapidly across the Belgian border today to meet the German army which has entered from the east and a Paris military spokesman said the "most gigantic battle of all time" may be near at hand.

The spokesman said that the Germans must have one of two military purposes in mind. Declaring it is difficult at the moment to determine the exact objectives, the spokesman said the Germans may be trying:

1. An operation to gain control of a long strip of coastline facing England, or

2. A vast strategical movement of invasion comparabe to and infinitely larger than that carried out by the German troops across Belgium in 1914.

In the latter case, he said, "We are at the beginning of the most gigantic battle of all time."

The Belgian army was reported to be busy mopping up small detachments of German parachutists who landed on Belgian territory.

Several German planes were shot down from the numerous squadrons which flew over Belgium.

The war department spokesman said there was as yet no precise information in Paris of the exact line of march of the Germans.

The Germans, he continued, are following the usual tactics of sending shock forces in advance, preceded by intense aerial bombardment of roads, bridges, railroads and air fields.

The bombardments, he stated, are on a vast scale in "Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg and France, those in France being notably in the eastern and northern areas."

Notes from Belgium and Luxembourg appealing for French and British aid were made public by the foreign ministry at noon.

The Belgian note said:

"The Belgian government is determined to resist the aggression with all its force.

"The government of the King is firmly confident that, as in the past, the joint efforts of France, England and Belgium will assure triumph of the right."

Premier Paul Reynaud, reporters said, was holding conferences with the idea of altering the makeup of his cabinet.

Statement Handed to German Minister Denies Berlin Allegation of Planned Invasion

For Parachute Landing of Nazi Troops it is Alleged They Were Dressed in Dutch Uniforms

(By Reilly O'Sullivan)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

The Hague, May 10.—(AP)—The Netherlands went to war with Germany today after Adolf Hitler's land and air forces had crossed the Dutch border.

She sought immediate contact with the Allied Command for strong assistance to hurl back the invader.

The first sign of Allied aid was British and French planes droning through the sky of the low country in search of the foe.

The nation, spurred by a proclamation by Queen Wilhelmina, placed its entire strength against the German spearheads and battled fiercely with the "suicide squads" of German machine-gunners landed by parachute in the Netherlands interior.

The Netherlands air force took to the skies joining patrols of British, French and Belgian planes, and it was reported that at least six German planes were shot down in the first hour of warfare.

Ministers Go to London

From The Hague flew The Netherlands Foreign Affairs and Colonial Ministers, seeking liaison with Allied leaders in London.

The Dutch Army, said to have been fully prepared for the invasion, was putting up strong resistance in the east despite one German thrust which was said to have carried the invasion 15 miles within the border.

At various points German transports dumped parachute shock troops who came billowing down to earth for rearguard assaults on the Dutch. Many of these men were shot.

Bridges Blown Up

Bridges over the Maas and the Waal rivers had been blown up to block that overland advance of the Germans. There were indications that the full force of the inundation defences in threatened areas was released.

Belgium Declares Brussels 'Open City' — Dutch Denial is Given to German Charges That Netherlands and Belgium Had Agreed With Foreign Powers for Use of Lowland Territory by Troops

London, May 10—(AP) — Nazi Germany unleashed lightning air and land attacks on Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg early today, adding a vast new lowland front to the titanic European struggle which already had directly embroiled six European nations.

Britain and France, responding to appeals from Brussels and Amsterdam, immediately pledged full Allied aid to the invaded nations as the day apparently dawned for Europe's long-dreaded total war on the west.

Flood Gates Opened

Holland opened her flood gates in hope of repelling the German invaders.

Belgium mustered her entire strength, hopeful of preventing a repititon of the 1914 German sweep which carried gray-clad German legions into France.

Adolf Hitler, addressing his troops, declared "Soldiers of the western front, the hour has come for the most decisive struggle of the German people." He then left for the front.

Britain Ready For Months For Sudden Blow on Low Countries

Battalion After Battalion of Tommies Billeted in Village Dotting Franco-Belgian Boundary

NOT SURPRISED

(By Sam Robertson)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 10.—(CP Cable)—Hundreds of thousands of British troops have been held in Northern France for several months to counter the sudden stroke the Nazi war machine has made into the low countries.

Battalion after battalion of Tommies have been billetting in little villages dotting the Franco-Belgian boundary.

I made a motor tour of Northern France only a week ago and gained a vivid impression of the extensive preparations made to meet the sensational turn this war of surprise has taken.

However, in this case the Allies have not been taken by surprise. Men and the awful armaments of destruction they employ have been poised to roll into Belgium the moment the Germans made a first attempt to outflank the Maginot fortresses.

General Gamelin in Command

General Gamelin of France is Commander-in-Chief of the Allied armies—British as well as French His orders to the British forces to shoulder arms would be given through General Viscount Gort, the British Commander-in-Chief.

While the exact strength of the British Expeditionary Force in France cannot be disclosed, it is known that there are several hundred thousand khaki-clad fighting men there. Dotting the area they occupy and farther back are scores of Royal Air Force fields.

The last day I was in France these fields were ringed with great bombing planes and comparatively tiny combat "wasps".

100 NORWAY MAPLES PLANTED IN CITY

The appearance of city parks and streets will benefit considerably as a result of the tree planting program just completed by the Parks Board. Over one hundred Norway maples, with mixed red and green foliage, have been planted about the city during the past week and yesterday Parks Board employees finished their task by setting out numerous trees in Riverside Park. Considerable trees were set out in the Exhibition Park and at the Memorial Park as well as about the streets of the city where householders were desirous of new trees being planted.

Norway maples are a species of fast growing maples, with a hardness midway between our Canadian sugar maple and the popular soft maple. The leaves are similar in appearance to the hard maple but are of two different colors, some red and some green.

Y. M. C. A. Offered Sports Equipment To H. & P. E. Regiment

May 10, 1940

To the Editor of the Ontario Intelligencer:

In your issue of May 9 under the "City and District News" there was an article headed "Regiment Needs Sports Equipment." This article referred to the lack of sports equipment among soldiers of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment stationed at Picton. "That in order to supply this lack the enlisted men from the Picton regiment were in Belleville in good numbers offering dance tickets for sale to the passersby. Thus hoping to obtain sufficient funds to purchase sports equipment."

May I say that two delegations from the local Y.M.C.A. have made two trips to Picton some time ago and interviewed Major Naylor and offered to supply the sports equipment for soldiers in Picton free and on both occasions were assured that the enlisted men were well supplied, with everything. On the last occasion the delegation was told that all they needed was some writing material and this was promptly forwarded to them from the Belleville Y.M.C.A.

The members of the delegation from Belleville also offered to provide entertainment for the Picton men at any time and were also informed that the town of Picton was supplying all the required entertainment.

May I add in conclusion that the Belleville Y.M.C.A. is still prepared to supply the sporting equipment the men need free of charge as this service is included in our War Service program. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for the valuable space in your paper for this letter as the War Service Committee is anxious to have the public informed regarding Y.M.C.A. work.

POLICE COURT

A charge of the the theft of scrap metal was dismissed against Ray Woods, of this city, after the accused lad pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., in today's local police court.

"I have no evidence to submit in this case. You will recall, that this boy's friend threw himself on the mercy of the County Court and received a jail term, when he admitted this offence earlier this week," revealed Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., who made reference to the 15-month reformatory sentence given Gordon Graves by His Honour Judge Cameron this week, after Graves had pleaded guilty to the theft of the said scrap metal. His Worship immediately dismissed the charge against Woods.

Convicted of Speeding

Harry Boyd paid $5.00 and costs after being convicted of speeding, while Keith Chambers did likewise.

Charged with reckless driving T. B. Watkins, Toronto plasterer, said he was not guilty. When Mr. Donnan asked for a week's enlargement in order to bring witnesses into the court, Watkins then intimated he desired to plead guilty. Mr. Donnan refused to accept the accused man's second consideration and the matter was enlarged for seven days.

A. M. Hogan, Hastings, appeared for sentence after pleading guilty to a charge of attempting to obtain the sum of $210.00 by fraud. He was given three months in the common jail to date from the date of his arrest on April 24th last.

Frank Cushing, local barrister appearing on Hogan's behalf, produced several letters of character reference on his client's behalf.

"I'm sorry I can't agree with Mr. Cushing, but suggest a mild jail term," interrupted Mr. Donnan as he produced Hogan's list of previous convictions, numbering four in all.

Two domestic cases concluded the proceedings, His Worship binding the parties concerned over to keep the peace.

Bumper Tourist Season Expected In This District

A bumper tourist season is expected for this district this year was the opinion of Mr. George Wilder, caretaker of the Belleville Tourist Camp, as he proceeded this morning to clear out the kitchens and wash rooms at the local camp to get them in readiness for the army of transient tourists, which will swarm through the city once the holiday season starts. The local camp has been open since one week ago last Thursday, with water and gas being turned on at that time. Already several tourists have registered with one or two parties having trailers and staying the night while others merely stayed for lunch.

War conditions in Europe were given by Mr. Wilder as the reason for his optimism regarding the extra number of American tourists expected this season. "It is too hot for them to stay in the Southern States and under present conditions they cannot be expected to go to Europe so the only natural conclusion is that United States holidayers will visit Canada." Mr. Wilder stated this morning that he expected the number of tourists registering at the Belleville camp this season would exceed the all time high of 1938 when over five thousand tourists registered at the local camp.

EN ROUTE TO FACE TRYING SESSION

Grim-faced, Prime Minister Chamberlain is pictured in this radiophoto as he left No. 10 Downing St. for the House of Commons to answer criticism for the failure of the Norwegian campaign. On a motion to adjourn the Prime Minister won a majority of 81, the since taking office nearly three years ago. Mr. Chamberlain, it is felt by British political experts, is now faced with the choice of recasting the government or resigning in the near future. It was reported he would try a general reconstruction of his cabinet before accepting the latter course.

PHANTOM-LIKE BURGLAR BAFFLES BELLEVILLE POLICE

Night Marauder Enters Private Homes, Ransacks Premises, but Steals Nothing

Belleville police are at their wits end of late, as a phantom-like burglar has been operating with success breaking and entering private dwelling houses, ransacking the premises and leaving the homes in general disorder during the absence of householders. The rather mystifying picture, that baffles the local police authorities, however, is the fact that nothing is ever reported stolen from the homes entered.

Again last night the intruder struck when he entered the home of Mrs. L. M. Howe, 311 Charles St., during the absence of the family and after ransacking the entire house, nonchalantly opened all doors and left without the theft of a single article of value. Chief Kidd announced today that several such breakins have been reported in the east hill area and in each incident the same procedure has taken place.

"The person responsible apparently enters the house selected and before he goes to work he opens all doors and sometimes a window in order to be assured of several exits if suddenly disturbed. He then ransacks all drawers and tables throughout the house, strewing the contents about with abandon, but strangely nothing of value is ever reported missing, and no great amount of damage is reported, only the inconvenience of replacing the articles that are thrown about the rooms," stated Chief Kidd today as he confessed the method employed by Belleville's latest phantom-burglar was becoming most puzzling.

During the absence of Mrs. Howe and her family Thursday evening, a neighbour's dog was heard to bark loudly and generally cause a disturbance shortly before 10.45 p.m. The owner of the dog finally quietened the animal, but it is now believed that it was giving an alarm as the burglar was forcing entrance. The breakin was discovered when Mrs. Howe returned home about 11.15 p.m.

Constables Ellis and Thomson investigated, but as has been the case in several previous such entrances into private dwelling houses, nothing of value was reported missing. At the Howe home, as in other similar incidents, the doors were left open to assure a hasty retreat in the event that the marauder was disturbed.

It is the belief of the police that cash is the sole object of the night-raider. Chief Kidd added that investigations in the matter were progressing and several suspects might be questioned over the week end.

OBITUARY

WILLIAM T. BELL
(Cherry Valley)

Picton—The death occurred suddenly Wednesday night of William T. Bell at his home near Cherry Valley. Though he had suffered from heart trouble, the end came unexpectedly.

The passing of Mr. Bell removes an esteemed and well known resident of Athol township. For many years he farmed on the south side of East Lake. He was a member of the township council several terms, and as a valued member of the United Church was a member of the official Board. He was a regular attendant and with Mrs. Bell was keenly interested in the missionary work of the church. He was in his 75th year.

The funeral is being held in Cherry Valley Church today (Friday) at two o'clock, Rev. O. R. Flindall officiating with interment in Cherry Valley cemetery.

Surviving are his wife and a son, Gordon, of Toronto.

LATE MRS. MARGARET F. RAY

The funeral of Mrs. Margaret F. Ray took place from the residence of her son, Mr. James Ray, in the 3rd concession of Sidney Township on Thursday afternoon, May 9th. The service in the home and at the graveside in Luke's Cemetery, West Huntingdon, was conducted by the Rev. J. Mercer, pastor of Bayside United Church.

The bearers were Messrs. Harry Roblin, Roy Thrasher, William Waterhouse, Harold Garrison, David Thrasher and Fred Aikens.

New York, May 10—(AP)— Formation of a Netherlands relief committee was announced by Hendrik Willem Van Loon, journalist, immediately after the German invasion of The Netherlands today.

Van Loon, who served as vice-chairman of the Finish relief fund and is acting in understanding with the Netherlands Consul General, sent telegrams to leading members of the Dutch colony here to meet with him at the earliest possible moment to discuss procedure.

RECKLESS DRIVING IN CITY MUST STOP COURT SAYS

Magistrate Butler States No Consideration Will be Shown to Those Who Are Apprehended

ACTION PROMISED

"This speeding and driving with abandon and wanton recklessness must be curbed on Belleville streets before a serious fatality occurs. Some of our streets are nothing better than speedways for racing motorists and this practice must stop, even if the authorities have to cancel driving rights," warned His Worship Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in police court here today when he openly attacked the manner in which automobiles are being driven over the streets of Belleville.

His Worship's attack was corroborated by Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., while Chief Kidd revealed the fact that the city motorcycle patrol would be put into operation commencing next week.

"Daily I see speeding motor vehicles being driven with recklessness on Victoria Avenue and Bridge Street, while I understand the same holds good on Dundas Street. Some streets have school zones, where signs of caution to motorists are clearly displayed. Personally, I have seen cars being driven at the 60 and 70-miles-per-hour rate on Victoria Avenue and I'm openly warning such delinquents that no consideration will be given such guilty parties when apprehended. They will have their driving privileges cancelled indefinitely when apprehended," added His Worship as he added a note of warning to parents who permit their chilren to play ball on city streets.

"The streets are no place on which to play ball and the courts will hold the parents responsible when such practices are permitted. Our city streets are no place for ball games and besides it endangers the lives of the children involved," concluded Magistrate Butler.

"Yes sir, I've also seen motor vehicles being driven at a very excessive rate of speed along our city streets, especially within the restricted school safety zones and it is a very dangerous practice, especially at the noon hour when the children are leaving and returning to school," added Mr. Donnan.

Chief Kidd promised immediate action and a thorough check-up in all such matters and warning is hereby given that no leniency will be afforded those apprehended of such practices in the future.

LOST CAT AND SUIT

GREAT BRITAIN MOVES SWIFTLY TO PROTECT ICELAND

Country Will Be Under British "Protective Custody" Until Conclusion of Hostilities

NO OPPOSITION

Northern Kingdom Especially Important in Allied Scheme as Submarine Base

London, May 10 (CP)—In a lightning-like move to bar Germany from a strategic base in the far north, Great Britain today took protective custody of Iceland.

The island, linked to German-occupied Denmark by its allegiance to King Christian X, will be under British protection only until the "conclusion of hostilities," it was announced.

It was not believed that the British force—of an undetermined size—encountered any opposition from German civilians who are known to have entered Iceland since the outbreak of the war.

Britain, in explaining the move, stressed that it had no intention of interfering with the existing administration and shortly after the occupation of the Foreign Office announced it already was negotiating a trade agreement.

Very Little Defence

The Foreign Office, in explaining the move, said that "it is clear that in the face of an attack even on a very small scale, the Icelandic government would be unable to prevent their country from falling completely into German hands." The island has a defence force of only about 70 police.

The little northern kingdom is especially important in the Allied scheme of things as an excellent submarine base—as well as an airplane and seaplane base.

Although the move was dramatically timed and enforced, it was not entirely unexpected by observers who recalled that on April 10 the Allies announced that they would prevent any German landing on Iceland, Greenland or Denmark's Faroe Islands.

Parliament Takes Control

With that announcement, Iceland's Parliament took full control of the nation's affairs.

A day later, the First Lord of the Admiralty, Winston Churchill, told the House of Commons that Britain was occupying the Faroe Islands and that "no German will be allowed to set his foot there with impunity."

Iceland, about the size of the Canadian province of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, has been a sovereign state since the signing of the Danish-Icelandic Union Pact of 1918. It lies in the North Atlantic about 200 miles off the coast of Greenland and its main industries are fishing and sheep farming. Its principal exports are fish, frozen mutton and wool.

One Fourth Habitable

Only about one-fourth of its 40,000 square miles is habitable, and its population of 118,000 is concentrated in the coastal lowlands. The capital, Reykjavik, has a population of 36,100.

Before the war, experts recalled, Germany sent frequent expeditions into Iceland, nominally for "scientific purposes" and in connection with projected air routes.

When the war broke out there was in Iceland a considerably larger number of Germans than was justified, the British felt, and since the outbreak, the number had been augmented by the crews of several ship-wrecked German vessels.

The British described the German consular official in Iceland, Herr Gerlach, as a notorious Nazi. His activities were regarded by the British as "extra-consular and political in nature."

Besides its strategic value for airplane and submarine bases Iceland is considered highly important for weather observation stations to guide shipping and aviation.

Full Aid to be Given Belgium, Netherlands By Allied Command

London, May 10—(CP)—Following is the text of the British announcement that the full aid of the Allies will be given to the invaded low countries:

His Majesty's Government and the French Government are taking immediate steps to come to the assistance of Holland and Belgium with all the means at their command.

At the same time it must be recognized that once again Germany has gained a military advantage by taking the initiative in attacking neutral countries.

The Germans have attempted to justify this act of aggression by alleging that Holland and Belgium have not preserved neutrality. This allegation is, of course, completely false.

On the contrary, as is well known both Holland and Belgium have deliberately elected to pursue a policy of strictest neutrality and have consistently declined even to concert with Allied military measures for their defence.

SWISS FORCES TO MOBILIZE

Precautionary 'State of War' Announced to Begin at Midnight

Berne, May 10—(AP)— The Swiss Government today ordered general mobilization beginning tomorrow at dawn and announced that a precautionary "state of war" begins at midnight tonight.

The official communique, which followed a series of bombings and sharp air battles over Swiss soil, said the mobilization was ordered "in view of the profound changes which have taken place on the western front."

The Swiss Army, it was said, is ready "for any eventuality, to face any menace from whatever side it may come, in conformity with the absolute desire of the federation for neutrality."

Air battles took place near Basel, Switzerland, at 12:30 a.m. today.

A German bomber crossed the frontier at Grenzach and flew over Basel en route to France. The German craft was immediately the target of anti-aircraft fire from guns at Altkirch and Belfort.

The plane returned to Germany at 4:15 a.m.

Soon afterwards, 20 bombers crossed the frontier at Loerrach, some of them passing over Swiss territory on their way to France.

A heavy fog prevented Swiss air defence from bringing any planes down. The Nazi aircraft were believed to be those which bombed Lyons this morning.

Dutch Defence Lines Only Broken in One Sector

New York, May 10 (AP)— The Dutch army high command in a communique broadcast in London and picked up by National Broadcasting Company said invading German troops had been able to break the Dutch defence lines in only one sector, where they penetrated to a depth of 10 miles.

The London broadcast also said large scale aerial bombing by German planes had started in the north and north-east of France.

"The Dutch air force is fighting gallantly," the announcer continued, adding that it already had given proof of its determination by successfully repelling an attack on Amsterdam.

Bridges over the Maas and Yssel Rivers are being blown up the Dutch communique said with precision and speed.

Belgian, Dutch Wealth in U. S. Ordered 'Frozen'

Washington, May 10 — (AP) — President Roosvelt "froze" all Dutch and Belgian wealth in the United States today to prevent its seizure by the Germans.

After consultation with financial officials who had been routed out of bed, the President signed about 9 a.m. EDT, an executive order extending the freezing decree on Danish and Norwegian assets to the Netherlands, Belgian and Luxembourg.

The emergency order, rushed through before the country's financial markets opened for the day, was the first precautionary step taken to cope with the new war situation which had arisen overnight.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a walk with pop for his health, and we took a extra long walk and came to a statue with a railing around it, being a iron statue of a man holding a book, and I said, Who's that suppose to be, pop?

I dont know, but you may rest assured that it was a man who unselfishly devoted his life to his fellow beans, pop said. Perhaps he was not fully appriciated during his lifetime, but if so I am sure that fact did not discourrage him, because he knew that sooner or later his work would speak for itself, and this monument proves that he was right he said, and I said, I wonder what kind of work it was?

I dont seem to reckonize his features, but you may be sure that thousands of people passing this statue are reminded of his great benefactions, pop said, and I said, Let's ask some of them.

Wich pop did, saying to some man going passed, Can you tell me whose statue this is?

Search me, it's proberly some gink that got rich robbing widows and orphans and then left a million dollers for a home for destitute canaries, the man said.

Being a little man with a pointy nose in the middle of a sispicious expression, and pop asked 3 other men and one lady, and the 3 men said they had no idea and the lady said she had walked by that spot 50 times but it was the first time she ever noticed the statue, and I said, G, pop, there's a name down at the bottom, maybe that's his name.

Of course it is, what does it say, Professer Rufus H. Bockius, pop said. Why, that's the man who created the famous Bockius memorizing system, and not a sole remembers him by his own statue, yee gods what's a use? he said.

And we kept on going, pop still shaking his head sad and me not caring much.

HITLER'S THRUST AT LOWLAND COUNTRIES

The expected has happened. Hitler, who knows no law but violence, has stabbed three more neutrals in his mad calculation of striking a blow at Britain and of subjecting the world. Belgium, the martyr of the war of 1914-18, has again been violated by the Germans. The Netherlands, which has sought in every way to preserve neutrality, has been invaded by the Nazi Germans without the slightest remorse and Luxembourg, a small principality, has also suffered in the thrust which have levelled at the Lowlands to obtain an opportunity to deal a blow at Britain and France.

The world, which is used to Nazi horror and shocks, expected sooner or later an attempt of the Germans in this direction. Yet the news came with a sense of shock but also of realization that the climax of the war with Germany is drawing closer.

With typical German fidelity to plan and system, the old trickery was used by Goebbels to try to show that the three neutral nations were hostile and Goebbels had even "found" a "document" to prove that the Lowland countries were hostile. Official denial was given this. But just as Norway spurned the German "protection," so the Lowland nations spurned it and invoked Allied aid which was immediately pledged. Already Allied forces are in Belgium and the Lowland nations are putting up a bitter struggle.

For a long time now no nation has doubted the malice and callousness of the modern Attila and his Huns. Neutrals have seen and again see what the Nazi menace is to mankind.

Up to the invasion of Denmark and Norway, Germany was largely protected by the fact that she was surrounded by neutrals, whom the Allies would not invade. Already Hitler has opened a wide new front on which the bitterest fighting of the war may be waged. The events of the coming days will have the greatest importance on the future course of the war. Some believe the greatest of battles of all time will be fought on the new front. Hitler will stop at nothing and the Allies will exert all their might there to crush forever the foulest attempt ever made on the liberty of nations. Intensification of the war has begun in earnest, for it is primarily the aim of the Germans to secure bases to operate by warplane and submarine against Britain and the Allied blockade. So he will throw all his weapons, submarines, armies, air force, into repeated blows to try and stagger the Allies.

Hitler has opened up the war to fight on familiar ground. Allies here are taken at no disadvantage, for they have prepared against surprises. Hitler will be faced by the full might of the Allies on every inch of territory.

Will Hitler be content to leave the Balkan issue in the balance or will he make this the year in which he will exert all the power of which he is possessed? That element of surprise rests with him but again the Allies are prepared against Nazi surprises.

The British and French, the Norwegians and their new Allies the Netherlanders and Belgians, bear civilization's burden against the devilish and fiendish machinations of the German pagans. Civilization rests with the Allies and it fights against one of the most sinister powers in human history. But as in the past, mankind has progressed despite the darkening influences in other ages as in the days of Attila, so the world will come out of the cloud with which Hitler and his Nazis try to darken the world.

BRITAIN A UNIT

A united Britain, despite all that has been said over the Norwegian campaign, faces the enemy as he makes his assault upon Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg. France, too, is united. The foe can have no hope, no belief that the Allies are divided among their own people. These free peoples stand united against the millions of Germans whom Hitler uses as slaves to further his wild dream.

In their democratic rights the Allies are strong. Hitler has attained unity by suppression. Britain has attained unity by expression.

THE WARPLANE AND THE WARSHIP

It is pointed out by the Hamilton Spectator that United States observers are more firmly than ever of the opinion, as a consequence of the Norwegian campaign, that the airplane cannot destroy sea-power. It is pointed out that while the Nazis did everything possible to sink warships in the hazardous task of protecting troops, while embarking and disembarking and while in convoying them on the high seas, their planes did little effective damage with these intense bombardments from the air, which achieved destruction of only smaller, unarmoured craft.

The Allies have a mighty power on the seas. Germany has not, her navy is badly crippled as a result of the Norwegian campaign. Reference was made in speeches in the British Commons to the superiority of German air strength in Norway which, joined with the lack of bases for the Allies, created a situation which had much to do with the withdrawal from the Trondheim area.

Allied airmen have given a noble account of themselves from the beginning of the war and are held to be superior to the Nazi airmen in the qualities which make good military aviators. It has, however, been a question for a long time as to the actual strength of the Allies and the Germans in the air.

Allied air development is not yet near its full measure. Steadily it will keep increasing until the end of the war, which means in the long run, victory. The Allied air development since Munich has grown by immense strides. Numerically the Allied air forces will extend with a relentless steadiness.

Akin to Quisling

Now and again—and quite too often for comfort—the newly named "fifth column" members get busy Otherwise seemingly sensible they make curious comments during casual conversations held in public places. Even if an armchair-occupant thinks he could personally improve upon tactics employed by the Allied High Command, he need not lose all reticence in expressing his feeling of superiority. Fortunately, all possessed of individual sure-fire plans to start the Boche upon his inevitable trek to oblivion do not find it necessary to dilate upon the possible effect of their amateur strategy. But among the inexpert there are always enough eager talkers to threaten the morale of friends and give encouragement to enemies.

During the present upheaval life would be more endurable if tyros left the conduct of the war to those who have to bear the responsibility. Fearless and confident of the outcome as these leaders may be, it would hearten them in their task to know that non-combatants throughout the Empire were not only loyal in action but also in thought and word. Back up the experts is advice all may follow with advantage.

In this war game onlookers have many obligations. One is to keep silent rather than disturb the players with uncalled for comment. It should not be too great a strain to extend the ordinary courtesy of the links to the battlefield. Assistance to the enemy is the last thing any loyal Britisher would give, and yet daily, hourly it is being done. Thoughtlessness, not lack of patriotism is the cause of the trouble, but the effect is the same whatever the reason.

"Quisling" is a word but newly added to our language, and not yet in general circulation. The fact that one's own indescretion may result in making one akin to the much discussed traitor whose name now stand for disloyalty seems severe punishment for uttering heedless words. Quislings are traitors in fact. But too much ego and too little sense is a combination that any day may place the indiscreet in the same bracket.—Ottawa Journal.

Well, Why Not?

A reader has been wondering how "Boche" came to be a name for a German, a speculation which in itself recalls the story of the inquirer who asked: "Why are the Germans called 'Boches'?" only to receive the shattering but somehow conclusive answer, "Well, what else could you call them?"

Actually, in French soldier's slang of the last war "Boche" was a shortening of "Alboche", which presumably had some connection with "Allemand". The "boche" part of the longer word is said to be a shortening of "caboche", which means a head or noddle. In that case an "Alboche" would be a German noddle, another name, perhaps, for a square-head. One work says that a "tete de boche" is a block-head, but some French dictionaries do not mention that term. In France during the last war one could sometimes hear the longer form of "Alboche" used, but the form "Boche" was long ago firmly established.

It is not a complimentary term and should not be used in conversation wtih, for example. Von Ribbentrop, though by all accounts he seems to be an almost classical example of the "tete de boche'. —Manchester Guardian.

Those Bluenoses

The return of good motoring weather, bringing thoughts of coming vacations calls to mind the reason one Ontario motorist gives for spending his holiday each year in the Maritime Provinces. It is because he likes the people, and in illustration of the fact that his liking is well-founded, he tells of an incident of his first visit, the Printed Word says.

The holiday took the form of a fishing trip with a congenial companion and included with the provisions were several bottles of fine Jamaica rum, for which Nova Scotia is as famous as she is for salmon.

Whether it was due to an overmeticulous sampling of the provisions, or to the rather narrow highway, it was not long after they had left the eastern Canada port where they had outfitted the expedition before they were in difficulty. Rounding a hairpin turn on a country road, they met a farmer leading a heifer. The farmer jumped, but the heifer collided with the car, landing in the ditch.

The motorists, thankful that the farmer had escaped injury, hastened to negotiate a settlement for the damage. They were delighted to find him not too angry, considering the surprise and shock. After a little discussion he said that he was pretty sure that the heifer's leg was broken and that $20 would be a fair settlement.

Without argument, the motorists handed over the money and then, desirous of leaving no hard feelings over the bargain, suggested that the farmer might like a drink of rum.

The invitation was accepted, and the three sat down beside the injured heifer, who was by this time chewing her cud with her accustomed calm. Aided by the bottle, the conversation grew more and more friendly, and the recent contretemps gradually sank into oblivion. The climax came when the farmer reached into his pocket and handed back to his new friends the two ten-dollar bills.

"Here", he said jerking his thumb at the heifer, "I won't take this from you. I don't think her leg's broken, and if it is it doesn't matter. She's no darn good anyway".

The Worm Within

Another drive is said to be in full force throughout what remains of neutral or non-belligerent Europe.

This is the drive against Fifth Columns, composed of Nazi or pro-Nazi traitors who subtly worm their way through the inner defences of any country open to German attack.

It has taken the example of Norway, thus worm-eaten, to arouse the unsuspicious to the fatal operations of these Fifth Columnists or puppets whose strings are pulled by the Nazis.

Yet the "foul enemy mouth" (as the Australian Minister for External Affairs has put it in reference to agents of the reactionary Stalin) has muttered for years past, and lots of fine folk have swallowed its lies as though lies were quite reasonable arguments. "A fellow must hear both sides, what?"

And also "Hitler's a genius, dash it all; done a lot for Germany. Bit of a blackguard, Goering; but not a dirty blackguard. Wonderful chap, Musso, makes the trains arrive in time."

Thus spake—or also sprach—our own Fifth Column, in years before Hitler became quite too impossible, don't you know.

They are silent now. But are they converted?

Or do they still think that you can make a good peace with blackguards—so long as they are not dirty blackguards?—London Daily Mirror.

Dog Lovers

No sooner do lawns begin to green and plant life start to send up its shoots, than dogs get into the news. Intelligent as most of them are, they take no stock in the calendar and simply cannot comprehend either the wisdom or the necessity of the ban that is imposed on April 1 every year and dooms them to a long summer of leashed confinement.

Some of them accept their lot like true philosophers and, apart from a few querulous whimpers the first day or so, settle down to make the best of their bondage. Others, the undisciplined rebels, know all the knots that man ever devised and neither leash nor fence can hold them. Then there is the lucky minority, whose masters don't believe in calendars either; these continue to roam at large as usual.

Lawns suffer, sprouting tulips are snapped off and havoc is done in general. The "good neighbor" principle is strained to the utmost and there is much muttering. Dogs again get a bad name and there are garden enthusiasts who would urge harsh punishment for the canine trespassers. On the whole, however the dogs are not to blame; their masters are the real offenders. Every dog will roam at large and probably go right to the most carefully-tended flower bed to bury his bone if he has the chance. The owners are the ones who should observe the summer ban on unleashed dogs and until all of them do so there will be cause for complaint from the garden-lovers.

In fairness to the dog himself, his owner should not let him run at large either in summer or winter. The hazards of traffic are so prevalent that the wisest dog is almost certain to be maimed or killed if the roaming continues. The kind master saves his dog from the dangers that exist in the streets and takes his pet for an enjoyable walk every day. This breaks the monotony of life for the dog, brings a master and his pal closer together, and is a lot easier on the lawns and flower beds. —Hamilton Spectator.

Dardanelles Was Worse

Those who regard Norway as a major set-back for the Allies spreading gloom over it, forget Antwerp and the Dardanelles. In both these historic episodes of the Great War the Allies suffered reverses of magnitude, yet they did not prevent final victory.

Withdrawal from Norway, whether regarded from a strategic standpoint, or from loss of life and sea units, is in no way comparable to the tremendous losses involved in the Dardanelles failure.

The Allied naval attack on the Dardanelles, carried out under Admiral De Roebeck and with four of Britain's greatest battleships —"Inflexible", "Queen Elizabeth", "Lord Nelson" and "Agamemnon"—as its spearhead, resulted in three battleships sunk, three heavy warships badly damaged and others severely handled.

This was March 18, 1915. The Allies, defeated in their attempt to force the Straits, decided on landing of an army on the Turkish Peninsula. On April 25 a landing was effected. It was supported by 18 battleships (French and British), 12 cruisers, 29 destroyers, 8 submarines and a host of other war craft. A number of first class ships were either sunk by mines or torpedoed, and when forces on land suffered heavily Lord Fisher and Mr. Churchill both went from the Admiralty. By the end of October, after a disastrous military campaign, the Allies withdrew from Gallipoli under cover of the fleet. The Allies had suffered what was termed a "major disaster".

Nothing like this, nor even remotely approaching it, has happened in Norway. Apparently without much loss of life, and with no loss of naval units, the Allies have changed their Norwegian strategy. They have not abandoned Norway. On the contrary, they still dominate the North; hold the iron ore port of Narvik; are in a position to harass German forces in the South. Meanwhile nearly one-half of the German fleet lies at the bottom of the sea.

To regard this with extreme pessimism, is nonsense. — Ottawa Journal.

Berry Wall

Evander Berry Wall, whose death took place at Monte Carlo on Sunday at the age of 80, was one of the most colorful figures on this continent up to and during the gay nineties. The New York Times, in its obituary, said:

A yellowed card in a newspaper morgue bears the name "Wall, Evander Berry", and adds these all-inclusive words in faded penmanship: "fin de siecle dandy" ("End of the century dandy").

Mr. Wall was a figure in the city in the days before Louis Sherry had moved to Forty-fourth street. He dined at the St. James' Hotel and the Brunswick, and went broke a million and a half dollars' worth after opening a brokerage office in the old Waldorf-Astoria, when that hotel was "way up town".

He owned a racing stable and a Kentucky breeding farm and was a handsome, bemoustached fellow in the latest London clothes, as he drove his coach-and-four up Fifth Avenue in the premonoxide age. His family for two generations had owned real estate throughout the city and so Berry Wall never really had to work for a living. It left him plenty of time to enjoy life, and he did, in that fabulous age of lobster and champagne.

Irreverent newspapermen called him the "king of the dudes". He wore waistcoats that dazzled the eye. He wore violet spats. His spread-eagle collars and startling cravats kept New York agog. His canes were a caution, and his whiskers were once as familiar an appendage as Diamond Jim Brady's paunch.

He loved thoroughbred horses and pedigreed dogs and owned both. Berry Wall walking in the Tuilleries or on Fifth Avenue without his red chow-chow is an unrecorded sight. Dining was as they said, an art with him both in his native New York and his adopted Paris or at any of the resorts which were never considered properly opened for the season if Berry Wall were not there. He followed the solstices of society with the fidelity of an almanac.

Berry Wall, in 1888, had a great "battle for dress' with Bob Hilliard the actor. Each attempted to eclipse the other in the matter of sartorial extreme. Wall won when, at the very height of the great March blizzard of that year, he strode into the Hoffman House bar clad in costly, gleaming boots of black patent leather that went all the way to his hips.

His famous collars, stiff and straight, cut him under the ears and thrust out on two points so high that his head was always pushed back at an angle. But they did not interfere with his inordinate ability to toss off champaigne. Later in life he boasted often:

"In sixty years I've never had a drink of water."

Morning noon night — champagne was his only drink.

Some years ago a friend, watching him alight from a taxicab at a Paris race track, sighed and said: "There goes Berry Wall. He has his own niche in society. When he dies there will be nobody to take his place."

He was the last of an almost forgotten era, who fled the raucous noise, the pushing mobs, the bleating cabs, and the careless manners of New York to live out his days in Paris, at the Hotel Maurice, still wearing his stand-up collars, still sporting his magnificent moustaches, and still wearing his violet spats.

Berry Wall, was born in New York in 1860. He started out to be a business man and was briefly in the brokerage business. His was the first up-town brokerage office, but he did not hold the distinction long. A panic wiped him out and he decided thereafter to devote himself to less hectic gambling, mainly at the race tracks.

He was one of the founders of the Turf Club. His entry, in 1884, won the first prize ever offered by the New York horse show. He used to drive tandem along Fifth Avenue, to the enjoyment of the crowds. He was active in promoting racing at Saratoga, and other clubs.

The society of which he was so much a part was leisurely. There were, as he recalled in years later, only three or four good hotels in New York in those days, when, as he sighed, "people were charming and society delightful".

Everybody knew everybody else, and everybody dressed for dinner and the theatre, and afterwards "they would walk the streets at 2 o'clock in the morning in a sort of promenade."

"It was, too, the day of bare-knuckle fights. I attended all the ring events," he said.

Berry Wall and Mrs. Wall, who was the former Lomie Belbourn of Washington, D.C., and who died some years ago, always went to Europe in the summer. About 1912 they decided that New York was no longer their New York so they went to Paris. The war caught them at Aix-les-Bains and so they returned to the capital, where they sat out the war. Afterwards they resumed their rounds of Deauville, Aix-les-Bains, Biarritz and Monte Carlo.

When, during the war, it looked as if the Germans might take Paris, they left for San Sebastian, Spain. There they met King Alfonso XIII, with whom they became fast friends. After America's entrance they returned to Paris and later both Mr. and Mrs. Wall became very much interested in Phare de France (The Lighthouse), an institution for the benefit of blind veterans.

Berry Wall often said he did not like society, except for its races, polo games and other sports events. He went daily to the tracks. One of the reasons he disliked New York was the tedious train rides to the tracks. In Paris he could jump into a taxicab.

He was a friend of many royal personages, among them the King of Sweden, the Prince of Monaco, the Aga Khan, the Duke of Connaught and the Duchess of Vendome.

To the end he was the fabulous and eccentric dresser of his earlier days—stiff shirts, tailcoats Byron collars—and he never went to Longchamps in season without his silk hat, even if, as he complained, valets no longer knew how to "keep the gloss on your topper".

Steps on Bomb To Save Others

By standing on a bomb a lance-corporal saved five companions and himself from death.

For this heroic act in France Lance-Corporal Jack Gallagher, thirty-three, of the Lancashire Fusiliers, has been awarded the Military Medal.

At about 4.30 in the morning of March 14 Lance-Corporal Gallagher and his section were in an advanced outpost watching for any sign of the enemy in No Man's Land.

Slightly Wounded

Suddenly, one Fusilier, convinced that he could hear Germans approaching, pulled the safety pin from his grenade and attempted to throw.

The grenade, however, caught against his leg, slipped out of his hand, fell into the trench, and rolled under a duckboard into thick mud.

Lance-Corporal Gallagher groped for the bomb with his hand and struck it with his foot. In the words of the official account of the incident: "As by then there was no time to pick it up he pushed it hard down into the mud under a duckboard with his foot at the same time leaning away."

The grenade expoded. The duckboard was smashed, and nearby sandbags were blown to pieces.

But Lance-Corporal Gallagher was only slightly wounded in the leg.

Never Told Mother

In letters home to his mother, Mrs. Gallagher, of St. Annes-road, Chorley, Lancs, Jack never mentioned his bravery.

All she knew was that he had been in hospital. On Wednesday she had a letter from him saying he had just left his bed with nothing worse than a stiff leg.

Gallagher joined the Army several years ago and was three and a half years in China.

He served his last year in the South of England, then left the Army as a reservist.

He had been home only a week when he was called up again and shortly afterwards went to France.

Mrs. Gallagher said: "I am very proud of him. He is a brave lad. I knew that in an emergency he would always think of others before himself."—London Daily Mirror.

Proud Papa

The colonel of a battalion billeted in the country was invited to a neighboring farm for lunch.

He astounded the farmer by eating two small roasted fowls. Later, while walking in the farmyard, he noticed a cock strutting about, and remarked, "That's a proud bird".

"So he should be", answered the farmer; "he has two sons in the army now".

Goat Farm in London

How many people know that there is a goat farm in the heart of London? It is in Chelsea and is owned by William Wright.

"If you'd been in the King's Road one day", said Mr. Wright, "you would have seen one of my billy-goats doing a sort of song and dance. He was chasing a man through the traffic—a harness-maker who had annoyed the billy by coming into the stable with a saddle and bridle on his head. For some reason this got the goat's goat. Wasn't there a scene in the King's Road! A No. 11 bus nearly ran over both of them and a No. 19 nearly ran over me when I was trying to catch the billy. I did catch him at last, but not before he'd strayed into a fruiterer's shop and golloped up strawberries, tomatoes and six bananas.

"It's quite an exciting job, keeping goats. You've got to watch them. There was the famous Piccadilly goat, for example, who was insulted by a painter. The painter had just finished his tea and threw the last few drops of it into the face of the goat, who had gone astray. The goat didn't like this and ran like the devil for the painter, who ran up his ladder as fast as he could to get away, and the goat followed him. It was a funny sight—the goat and the frightened painter at the top of the ladder. The crowd roared, and so did I, but the goat came down tame enough all right when I spoke to him sharply.

"I've been handling goats for 40 years, like my father and grandfather before me. My family has had a goat farm in Chelsea since 1796. I used to have 25; now there's only seven in the herd, but goats' milk is so precious and good for the human body that I could sell every one of them for at least a tenner each. In fact I sold one to a Wimpole street specialist recently at 10 quid. The milk is very rich and contains far more cream than cows' milk. That's why the hospitals buy it from me, and why I could sell far more at a shilling a pint than I can get although the goats give six or seven pints a day.

"My father sold goats' milk to Thomas Carlyle and Whistler. Whistler owed my father a couple of pounds for goats' milk and I was sent to collect the debt. Whistler said he couldn't pay but offered me two of his pictures to pay for the milk, and believe me——I refused. . . . "—London Listener.

Bishops Serve With Canadians

Two Canadian bishops are serving as colonels with Canada's expeditionary force in this country.

One is a Protestant, the other Roman Catholic; together they have produced joint rules for Canadian chaplains.

Bishop Wells, until recently Anglican bishop of gold-mining Cariboo, claims descent from Devon pirates. He went to sea at the age of 12 as a deckhand on his father's schooner, trading between his home town in Newfoundland and Labrador. He left the sea six years later after seal-hunting on Shackleton's famous Nimrod.

As Sergeant George Wells, of the Second Garrison Artillery, in the Boer War he rode the same horse throughout the campaign. In 1914 he organized the Fort Garry Horse and went to France with General Currie.

Canadians of the last war will remember "Bishop Wells" at Shorncliffe camp and at Passchendaele, where he served as Second Division senior chaplain.

After six years as Bishop of Cariboo, he is now Lieut.-Colonel George Anderson Wells, in charge of all Protestant chaplain with the Canadian forces.

His opposite number is Bishop Leo Nelligan, youngest Roman Catholic bishop in Canada.

Bishop Nelligan has the five most famous parishioners in the world in his Pembroke diocese. He is the quints' bishop.

He visits them regularly. British cinema-goers will have seen him in a short film which was made, showing the quints at home. He hopes to officiate at their confirmation when they are old enough.

Canadian forces are almost exactly 50 per cent. Anglican, 50 per cent. Roman Catholic. Bishop Wells plans one Protestant chaplain to every 1,000 men. Lieut.-Colonel Charles Leo Nelligan, as chief Roman Catholic chaplain, plans the same.—London Exchange.

Vacation

A young engineer got a job last week with one of those big, efficient industrial plants where matters concerning the personnel are figured out with stopwatch and slide rule. He was puzzled as well as gratified, therefore, to receive in his first pay envelope a notice saying that it was time for him to go on his vacation, and that he was to report to his immediate superior so that arrangements could be made to replace him during his absence.

He popped into his superior's office, and the executive explained that the vacation had come so early in his term of service because he was simply a dot on a chart; his predecessor, evidently, had left just before his vacation fell due. It was also explained to him that the length of the vacation was determined by a number of factors—length of service, number of weekly work hours initiative, company spirit, etc.

"And so, Johnson", the boss concluded, "you have ten minutes coming to you with pay, starting immediately. Why don't you step outside and have a smoke?"—New Yorker,

Child "Catches" Love Of Good Literature

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

It is distressing to some of us that so few youths after graduating from high school, even from college, read good books, or ever read again the classics which they had to read at school. It's a rare youth who really enjoys the good literature he is required to read in high school or college.

— one comes across a group of them occasionally. They are students of a teacher who radiates enthusiasm over certain literary gems. If my observations are correct, this inspiring teacher doesn't have her students look at a poem or choice bit of prose through a microscope. She lets them use their own eyes, hoping they will have favorable emotions as they read. She doesn't hamper them with minute analyses. She explains just enough to help them get the general sense and beauty of it. Most of all, she reads to them with feeling and enthusiasm, knowing that most of her students will 'catch' appreciation as a youngster 'catches' measles.

Inspiring Reader

If I were employing a teacher of English literature, I would look for one who can read aloud in such a way as to stir youth with enthusiasm over excerpts from the classics. Some teachers can do it. Some, indeed, can inspire boys and girls to read with eloquence.

I should like to have eloquent readers as teachers in every grade from kindergarten to college. In different parts of the country I have come upon an occasional teacher who has read inspiringly to her class. I vividly recall some instances, once in a kindergarten, once in a second grade, twice in an upper grade, and several times in a junior or senior high school, when the class was so rapt in attention as the teacher read that my entering the classroom was hardly noticed at all. I have always observed such teachers with strong enthusiasm. They create a love of good literature, often a lasting love.

But oral reading is a lost art. The average high school youth, even college student, seems almost illiterate when he is asked to read. So encumbered is he with the mechanics he has never mastered that he can't read with feeling and appreciation.

Few Teachers Read Well

Relatively few young men and women now in our teacher training colleges, the teachers of our children tomorrow, can read aloud well. Relatively few of their teachers of English can read aloud inspringly. The art of reading aloud needs to be revived.

Why should we parents wait? Many a parent with limited formal education can read eloquently aloud. See the good any adult or older child can do by reading to a younger child or any other person in the family. Read aloud at home if you would instil in the growing child a strong and lasting love of good literature.

Fashion Flashes

The Spotlights shines on the profile as those profile framing hats emerge. A beauty is in a crescent shaped hat of deep burnt rough, shiny straw, exposing one entire side of the head and framing the half-face. A sweep of green and burnt color coq feathers falls over the hair.

Be bold in your choice of plaid or check wool travel coat, for smartness. A grand model, made with a full, swinging back and rounded yoke is in purple, yellow and gray block checks.

Plenty of outings come late Spring and Summer for a three-quarters length coat of wide whale corduroy in deep geranium pink. Made with big saddle pockets and collarless neckline with just a suspicion of revers, it is grand for afternoon or informal evening wear and over sports frocks.

Nothing yet to equal the telling charm of black with a dash of white. A handsome dinner ensemble in black crepe has a wide fluffy, lace-edged white organdie ruffle at the hem and a similar ruffle edges the rounded bolero to form a collar and continue to the waist.

Straws in the wind will be large, for the large straw will be definitely the hat come summer. A beauty in burnt toast Milan has its crown filled with tiny apricot and peach colored velvet roses with streamers and band of green velvet ribbon.

Horrors of Hip Swinging

By HELEN FOLLETT

HIP-SWINGERS get a big black mark in this beauty class. If one is going to attend our school of pulchritude, one must step light and step pretty, cut out all that monkey business.

The plumpies who carry too much adipose freight are the worst offenders. One sometimes suspects that they love their curves, sway and wiggle to call attention to their shapes. Or are we wrong? Mebbe so. One sees them every day. We wish they wouldn't. T'aint cute and t'aint purty.

When posture is correct, which means a tall, stretched spinal column, a tummy as flat as a flounder, chest high and head on the level, it is well nigh impossible to swing that portion of the body which is south of the waistline. Correct posture is necessary for well-being and good appearance. It seems to be a subject to which the modern Young Lovely gives not even a passing thought. The time will come, when physical education has advanced and claimed attention, when the slouchy walker will be completely out of the good looks picture.

In the meantime, will the beauty scholars please use their back bones as Nature intended, keep them erect so the muscles of the sides and back will be strong and resilient? They will then wear their clothes splendidly and with chic even if the little models were snaked off the bargain counters.

ANNE GWYNNE. . . . .no hip-swinger is this lady of the screen.

Red heads are in luck this season. Stunningest duds seen are combinations of black and white, which bring out the titian glory of the hair and flatter the delicate, fair complexion.

New copper shades are safe for her only when her locks carry a coppery cast. While she can't wear red, the laws of color harmony forbidding, she can indulge to her heart's content in some of the rich, deep wine shades.

She must be fussy about her lipstick. If she chucks away the rouge pad she'll look just as well. The less batik on her face the better. Her lovely crown is her chief ornament; nothing in the way of synthetic aids should catch the eye first.

Fighting Freckles

PHYLLIS BROOKS . . arms herself well for the war on freckles.

By HELEN FOLLETT

ARM YOURSELF now for the freckle war, if you have the kind of skin that takes on the yellery polka dots. Your best weapons are a bottle or peroxide a jar of foundation cream and a powder with an oily base that will act as a protective agent.

One rule: Never use soap and water just before going out-of-doors, or directly after subjecting the precious complexion to winds or strong sunlight. Have your soapy scouring at bedtime. Half an hour later sponge the surface of the skin with peroxide. If you will add an equal amount of strained lemon juice, the bleach will work faster. No harm will come from this treatment.

In the morning lave with clear tepid water, dry and apply a foundation cosmetic. These toilet table goodies come in colors to match the complexion so be cagey in making your selection. Fluff powder on lightly. The two combined form a light film that reduces the speckling effects of the rays of the sun.

Broad-brimmed hats are a help. Keep the arms covered as much as you can and don't fail to slip on your gloves when you go out-of-doors. While freckles are stubborn, won't budge if they are of long standing, one can keep from adding to one's collection.

Luminous nail polishes are snaking money out of shoppers' purses. They make the talons glitter like sea shells. Very elegant. They're a sort of iridescent lacquer that is particularly effective for evening wear.

And there's more yet to come. These toiletries come in the colors of jewels. Agate is suggested for practical daytime use. White pearl walks away with all the honors when worn with gowns of pastel shades. Emerald is the dish for the red-headed girl; sapphire will be the favorite of the blonde ducky. Onyx is nice, and, if you are the dashing type, you can use silver or gold. You pays your money and you takes your choice.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Hope She Gets A Dose of Her Own Medicine

Dear Miss Fairfax:

It seems to me that a girl who comes between an engaged couple is just about as despicable as one who comes between husband and wife.

A very dear friend of mine was engaged to a man for the past two years and suddenly out of a clear sky, he broke the engagement. Three days later he married someone else whom he hadn't seen for almost a year. It may not be charitable, but I hope that during her married life this girl gets a dose of her own medicine. She knew this couple were engaged, and left no stone unturned to get him.

I think my friend is better off for being rid of a man who would behave the way this one has done. Men of his type are apt to change their minds again.

A Friend.

I am inclined to agree with you that it's no great loss when a girl loses one of these weather-vane fiances. It argues more for the girl's happiness when an engagement of this type is broken than if it were to result in marriage. Help your friend to make new contracts and show that this experience has not hurt her.

Mistake for a Girl to be a Doormat

Dear Miss Fairfax:

It was a case of love at first sight with me, and I thought he cared as much. We went together steadily for five months. However, he told me that he had taken out several other girls so I decided to go out too; but I was miserable all evening. Meantime he took out another girl several times.

He says he likes me tremendously and this may turn to love later on.

During the time he has taken me out, he has broken appointments steadily. Says he is coming and doesn't show up. We both have telephones.

My parents and older brothers feel he's giving me the run-around and they've actually forbidden me to go out with him. But I miss him so terribly if I don't see him at least twice a week. On Sundays we usually have a special date, but he says "I have to see what the boys are doing first." This burns me up.

S.

I should think it would burn you up, and his continual breaking of engagements which you tell me about in your letter but which there isn't room to print. Be more independent. Have dates with other boys and try to forget this one who is not only selfish but to my way of thinking has very bad manners.

x x x

Sounds Like a Poor Risk

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a girl of 17, and get a lot of help from your column.

I've been going out with a young man, who after I had known him a few months asked me to marry him. I promised I would when I became of age. He gave me nice gifts at Christmas and for my birthday. I love him very much and he says he loves me.

Our problem is that we are always quarreling; each one wants his own way. He's so jealous of me that he won't allow me to dance with other boys, and he fights anyone who asks me for a date. Don't you think it's best we break up now? Whenever I mention it, he becomes angry.

L. M. G.

I agree with you thoroughly that it would be well for you to break off now with a young man who is so jealous that he wants to fight anyone who asks for a date with you. How could you possibly go through life with such a person? At 17, with all the world before you, don't mortgage your future with such an unhappy prospect.

Entertaining the Boy Friend at Home

Today space is at such a premium in the average home, especially where everyone works for a living, that young people have fallen into the habit of seeing their friends somewhere else.

Naturally, mother worries over Mary being whisked away in an automobile by some young man whose name she doesn't even know, and about Jane, dancing at a public dance hall or a night club which hasn't too good a reputation.

Bob, the son of the house, mother doesn't worry so much about. He's taking some other woman's daughter to just those places, and, it's up to that girl's mother to do her own worrying.

Of course, modern youngsters, to keep up with the crowd, feel they must go out in automobiles and clubs to dance, but it would be well for all parties concerned if they didn't do this seven nights a week. Occasionally they might stay home and give their parents an introduction to their girl and boy friends.

Mother may be old-fashioned, and father's neckties subdued, and he may not be up on the latest words in slang But mother has almost a clairvoyant instinct in sizing up girls beneath their make-up, and father knows a good dependable boy when he meets one. After the introduction, and even a few words about the weather, mother and dad, if they're tactful, will disappear and leave the youngsters to entertain themselves.

"Be it ever so humble", most apartments or bungalows boast convertible rooms. If the kitchen is sizable it can be transformed into something attractive with a good looking linoleum on the floor, chintz curtains at the windows, and the china closet glistening and attractive, even though its contents have come from the five-and-ten.

But if your apartment has only a kitchenette, where "three is a crowd", you'll have to give up the idea of having even the simplest get-together in this restricted space. How about the dining-room, even granting that one member of the family has to sleep on a convertible couch, which does duty as a bed after hours? The dining-room table will be large enough too, for those electrical gadgets which make entertaining so easy: Toasters, percolators, chafing dish, will furnish a delicious after-movie meal and it's ever so much more cosy and appetizing than going to the soda counter in a drug-store.

Amazing letters come to this column from young men who say they go "steady" with girls and have never been invited to their homes. They wonder why. Is there a chained lunatic kept in the closet? Is father (or mother) such a toss pot that he can't be seen? As they write to me: "I know the family hasn't any money, but why can't I see what kind of folks she's got? I want to know what kind of a family I'm marrying into. I don't care if it's shabby, and Mom and Dad haven't had advantages, but I want to see what the outfit is like."

To youngsters who like to take the bit in their teeth, and go the limit while the flash of youth lasts, the foregoing doesn't apply. But if you're normal and want a little home of your own—husband children — don't meet the boy friend on the curbstone week after week, month after month. Naturally, if his intentions are serious, he wants to know what kind of a family you come from. He'd like to meet mother and dad, and see how they compare with his own family.

N.B.: Dad! please don't utilize the occasion to hand out what you feel should be done about the war in Europe, conditions here at home, or even the weather, to Mary Jane's young man. Give the young people a chance!

Wedding Expenses

The bride and her family, who bear the expenses of the wedding, must decide just on the budget that can be spent on this important occasion. Then, with the list of expenses in mind, they decide what kind of wedding they can afford, what features they consider most important to be emphasized, and what they think is the wisest apportioning of the sum that can be spent.

Happily for most budgets, it is not so much the amount of money spent as how it is expended that determines the charm of a wedding. The secret is in careful planning of time, in wise forethought, in intelligent attention to every detail in the arrangements.

It is most important that the ones most concerned with the wedding plans should be thoroughly familiar with the financial responsibilities of a wedding.

Here are the expenses paid by the bride's family:

The bride's trousseau and household linens.

The bride's wedding dress.

All expenses connected with the wedding invitations, reception cards, announcements — the engraving, addressing, mailing.

All expenses connected with the church or wherever else the ceremony is to be performed; floral decorations, music, fees.

All expenses connected with the reception or wedding breakfast or dinner, wherever it takes place; floral decorations, music, food, service, the bride's cake, boxes of wedding cake, and so forth.

Bouquets for the bridal attendants; maid of honor, bridesmaids, flower girls.

Presents to the bridal attendants.

Bridal photographs.

Cars for the bridal party, to church and to the reception.

x x x

The bridegroom's expenses are:

The wedding ring.

The marriage license.

The bride's bouquet (usually).

A wedding gift to the bride.

A corsage for the bride's mother, and a corsage for his mother.

The gift or fee to the minister.

Gifts to his best man and ushers, and also their ties, gloves, and boutonnieres.

The car in which he and his best man come to the church.

The expenses of the wedding trip.

Sometimes the bride's family buys the bouquet for the bride as well as those for her attendants, but usually (and I like this custom best) the bridegroom abides by the romantic idea of buying his bride her bouquet. Sometimes the bridegroom asks for the privilege of paying for the flowers for the bridal attendants, consulting with the bride about her choice for these flowers. And the thoughtful bridegroom remembers to send his bride a corsage for her to wear with her travelling costume.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Septicaemia

Childbed fever, puerperal fever, septicaemia, are all names for the cause of more deaths of mothers in childbirth than any other single cause. It used to be that it would suddenly make its appearance in the maternity ward of a hospital, and carry off half a dozen mothers before it could be checked. For years and years it baffled medical men. I remember myself hearing it referred to as "milk fever" because it was thought by some that the disease had something to do with the formation of milk in the mother's breasts.

Then, a Vienna doctor, Philip Semmelweiss, published one of the most revolutionary medical papers of all time. In it he showed that the cause of childbed fever was insufficient cleanliness. It was just old-fashioned blood poisoning induced by using sheets, or instruments, or hands that were not sterile. Since this discovery the deaths from the disease have been reduced considerably, particularly in hospitals, where it is comparatively easy to make and keep things sterile.

This need for scrupulous cleanliness in obstetrics is dramatized in the movie, "The Fight for Life" to which I referred here last week. It shows the routine the maternity "crew" goes through invariably, whether in the slum home or the most modern hospital. One point it brings out is that in poor homes it's a good idea to have plenty of newspapers on hand to put under and around things during a delivery. This is because newspapers are likely to be much more sterile than most of the things in the home.

In my practise here, I couldn't depend on the newspaper supply. The persons out in the country just didn't have papers. I had to put the sheets and other things I was going to use in the oven and bake them to make them sterile. Sometimes I had to take these to the home myself.

In my country practise the doctor had an added handicap in obstetrics; he often wasn't called until the woman was already in trouble. Up here they have large families, births are regarded as quite a normal thing and they may not have a doctor unless the midwife runs into trouble.

Of course, these midwives had no real understanding of the urgent need for 100 per cent cleanliness and so puerperal fever was always fairly common in my practise. I often used to wonder why it wasn't a great deal more common than it was, for many of the homes were none too clean, and keeping things sterile in the sick room and the bed where the baby was being born was difficult even if you were trying. Probaby what saved many mothers from death from septicaemia was the fact that they had built up an immunity to the germs in their own homes, and only when some bacteria was brought in from outside that there was trouble.

We know now that many a woman has died of septicaemia because someone with an infection of the throat was around when she was in labor. Hospitals discovered this many years ago and put an end to most of the epidemics of childbed fever in those institutions.

Today we know how to prevent septicaemia and how to fight it when it does break out, with drugs allied to those we use in combatting throats infected by streptococcus.

A Famous Crime

The stealing of the Ascot Gold Cup remained for years one of the most remarkable crime mysteries which Scotland Yard, or anybody else failed to solve. A policeman was guarding the trophy on a table beside the grandstand. Thousands of people were around, and just as the race started and the crowd shouted "They're off", the policeman took his gaze off the cup for a few seconds and when he looked back it was gone.

For years the mystery remained a mystery, then a dying crook told how it was done in those days (1907) photographers used black cloths over their cameras when taking pictures. A man with a dummy camera was standing near the table, and when the policeman looked away he whipped up the cup, shoved it inside the hood and, having supposedly taken the picture, casually strolled away.

The trophy, worth a large amount of money, was subsequently melted down and sold as gold.—Stratford Beacon Herald.

CHAPTER TWELVE

Sondra could see nothing to watch except a low, trunk-cabined cruiser tied next to Kemp's dispatch boat—a craft painted a faded green that blended so deceptively with the water that she had overlooked it before. Then, tardily, she recognized it—the Forest Man's own cruiser, Cedar Cone.

She remembered, too, that it was Jean who had tagged Winthrop with the name "Forest Man". There had been a close bond in those days between the boy and the gentle-voiced hand-logger who taught him the secrets of the forest and its wild things. Was it by accident or design that the Forest Man had returned so close on the heels of Jean's arrival?

Sondra had long ago ceased being greatly surprised at the woodsman's uncanny knowledge of what went on all over Alaska. His roving occupation took him the full length of the coast from Dixon's Entrance to the Aleutians. Often Sitka did not see him for several years at a time; yet on his return he was familiar with all that had happened during his absence.

Sondra was jolted back to the present by the opening of the door behind her.

'Hi-ya, darling! Surprised you, didn't I?" Liane was entering, dressed for the day in a scarlet knit sports outfit.

"Well, ra-ther!" Sondra was more than surprised at the girl's early appearance. Since Liane had left word she would not breakfast until noon, Sondra had taken it for granted the coast would be clear when Jean came. Now, with Liane on the loose, how ever would she get a chance to see Jean alone?

"I'm a little early worm about to go prowling for my bird!" brightly declared Liane. "I woke up thinking of Jean Reynall and our school days—so I decided to run down early to his ship to renew old times."

"Before you do any visiting, Liane, we'll have breakfast here and hop my cruiser and run down to the Indian village to see about the special music for your dance."

x x x

Sondra was still groping for some stratagem which would keep Liane from attaching herself to Jean both before he reached Echo House, and after he arrived. Halfway through breakfast she hit upon a plan.

"Look here, Liane! You're going to need something to wear at the party, besides your beads and war bonnet. How about going up to the attic as soon as we finish our coffee, to look over my old costumes?"

"Ah-h-h, my fran'! You're actually going to let me wear a gown that once graced the form of an aristocratic Karmanova?"

"Of course, silly. Any one, except my great-grandmother's wedding gown. Alexander!" she hailed that sturdy youth as he came in with fresh coffee. "When you come for the trays, please bring Polena's keys to the chests in the attic."

x x x

It was Polena who came with the keys.

"You'll not need them, Miss Sondra," she explained. "I finished cleaning the attic yesterday. The chests I leave unlocked so you can inspect. Everything is laid away again in tissue papers—nice and clean."

"Thank you, Polena. I know you've done a perfect job, but I'll look them over and lock them to save you a trip up the stairs. That will be all, now."

The old Creole housekeeper lingered, her squat figure swaying from one foot to the other. "I—I must tell you, Miss Sondra. This time I did hear it."

"Hear what, Polena?"

"Last night, when everyone is asleep. Something walking. Soft footsteps like — like little slippers without heels."

"Oh, for heaven's sake!" Liane broke in impatiently. "She's just trying to scare me."

The old woman turned on her violently. "You — you — but I know what I hear. My ears are keen, like a fox. This time I do not make a story. This time, I tell you, I hear it. My room, it opens onto the reception room close by the foot of the stairs, so I always hear, plain, anyone on the stairs. Last night, I am all at once wide awake. I do not know why. The clock strikes three. Then—squeek . . . squeek, soft on the stairs. I think maybe it is you, Miss Sondra, coming down to the library. But, somehow, I don't feel right. I jump up, open my door, and look out into the reception room. It is dim. I see no one. I run out and stand in the middle of the room. Still I see nothing. But, Miss Sondra, I feel, I smell, that which I cannot see. It is cool." Her voice softened to a dramatic whisper. "It is damp. It is—it is like a breath from under the ground."

Liane whooped derisively. "Sondra you goose! You look as if you believed her."

Polena faced Liane, chin shoved out, narrowed eyes drawn down at the corners. She snarled. "You—you, who know nothing! I tell you, last night something came from a cool, damp place to walk in the dark through Echo House!"

Before Sondra could say a word, the old housekeeper had spun about and stamped out of the room.

Liane flapped a hand toward the closing door. "Coocoo as a loft full of pigeons."

Sondra, after adroitly prolonging breakfast until half an hour before Jean was due, suggested they move to the attic.

Drawn out toward the centre of the floor stood the great copper-bound chest of carved ebony which contained the finest of the Karmanova costumes.

"Give me a hand with this heavy lid, Liane. . . . There!"

Sondra glanced down into the open chest and smothered an exclamation of dismay. She was gazing at a rag-bag jumble of torn tissue, blue and crimson velvet wraps, perlines, fans, little white satin slippers and silken shawls. Most incredible of all, her great-grandmother's wedding gown was carelessly wadded in one corner.

Liane sniffed. "Huh! If this is the way your peerless Polena lays away your heirlooms, you'd better hire a stevedore for the job."

For some reason Sondra did not want to discuss the matter with Liane. After a moment's silence she said, "Never mind. I'll have it all straightened out in a jiffy." She held up a lavender watered silk. "Try this, first. There's an old pier glass in the corner."

"What a honey!" Liane held the garment up against her with her chin and ran her hands over the rich fabric. She started to get into the gown.

Sondra, with affected casualness, went about lifting the lids of other receptacles. Her dismay deepened. Each trunk and chest looked as if a hurried, searching hand had gone through it, leaving the contents in a turmoil.

"Hey, keed! How do I look?" Liane, lost in admiration of herself, was dancing slowly before the pier glass.

"Lovely. Really lovely." Sondra answered absently. She went back to the ebony chest and began restoring the contents to order. But, while she lifted out one garment after the other for Liane to try on, she was deaf to the other girl's chatter. Last night — someone unknown, prowling through the house, searching for something, likewise unknown! There was something indefinably creepy and terrifying in the thought. It disturbed her so she forgot al lelse until an accidental glance at her wrist-watch reminded her that Jean Reynall was due any minute.

She spoke hurriedly: "Liane, here is a rose crinoline, and a pale blue moire with a gorgeous bustle. They'll keep you busy for a few minutes while I run downstairs." She started for the door.

"Wait, Sondra. Help me out of this thing."

Precious seconds were consumed while she fumbled with the buttons on Liane's dress. Finally she got them open and with a sigh of relief said, "There! You're unfastened. Now I must fly!"

Sondra dashed down the attic stairs, hoping against hope that Jean would be just a little late. But the sound o voices behind the closed door of her grandfather's sitting room stopped her in the hall outside. She had missed him. Sick with disappointment, she leaned there against the wall, unable to think of anything to do, except wait until Jean came out, and then explain why she had failed to meet him.

She could not escape hearing what went on inside; the rising voices chilled her hopes for peace.

"But—confound it, captain! I tell you the money is there to meet this cheque the moment the bank's open!"

Dynamite's growl was grimly triumphant. "Aye. But your cheque's not certified."

"How could I get it certified today, with the bank closed and Tom Jarvis out of town?"

"That's your problem, Reynall. Ye boasted yesterday that ye'd hold me to the letter of this contract. The contract calls for payment from you in either cash or certified cheque. Ye'll fulfill those terms to the letter, or at one minute past eleven I'll tear up these papers and order ye off me premises. Is that clear?"

"Plenty clear. So is the reason for the bank's being closed on Monday, a business day, while your friend Jarvis ducks out on one of your trawlers for a day's fishing. But in framing that little trick, you overlooked—"

'Hold! Is it collusion and conspiracy ye're hintin' at?"

"I'm not hinting. I'm reminding you that when a option falls due on a holiday, the law holds it binding until a corresponding hour of the next banking day thereafter."

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

'Holiday? But yourself's just insinuated that this is no legal holiday." There was a cruckling note in Dynamite's brogue.

"Legal or not," came Jean's hot retort, "the bank is closed. In such case, any court would hold—"

"Then take your case to Juneau, me fine sea-lawyer, and get the court to rule on it. I'll warrant this fishin' season will be over by the time ye get a decision!"

Silence dragged before Jean admitted tersely, "Right. You've caught me napping. I must pay for it. What are your terms, O'Moore?"

"Ye heard 'em yesterday. Do your cannin' ashore; sell me the hull of the Glory. Then ye'll get every fish the O'Moore fleet nets this season."

"Impossible. Every cent Aunt Jack has is tied up in this. We'd lose the first of the season, and—"

"Your aunt's losses are no concern of mine," rasped Dynamite. "She—and you—made a dirty gurry-scow of my Glory—"

"Listen, captain! I don't know a thing about the ancient row between you and Aunt Jack; but in the present instance you've got us all wrong. Our plans for the Glory—"

"Belay!" The hall clock began slowly to strike eleven. I'll give ye one more chance, Reynall. Will ye sell the Glory's hull—today?"

"I will not."

The clock ceased striking. A long pause. Then the sound of heavy paper being deliberately torn into shreds. "That ends your contract, Reynall. And all business between us."

"Not quite, captain. You're still pledged to supply my company with fish during the next twenty-four days."

"Wha — what d'ye mean, young fella?"

"Just this—among the assets of the Bates Company, now owned by Baranov Packers, is a certain contract made last year. It binds Bates to buy fish only from you. But it also binds you to keep his plant supplied to the limit of capacity at all times while fish are running. I mean to hold you to that contract."

Dynamite's laugh boomed out a little too loudly. "Ho! Ho! That contract died last fall when the herring season ended."

"Morally, perhaps it did. But we're adhering strictly to the letter, not the spirit. That contract was filled in on a printed form which reads 'until one year from date'. That date is the middle of next month. Legally, you're stuck with it, O'-Moore."

"Um-m-m-m. I suppose, now, ye have a legal copy of that agreement, all signed and witnessed, Reynall?"

"You know I haven't. Bates trusted you, and left the only signed copy in your hands. But I have the unsigned carbon, with a notation in Bates' handwriting to confirm the existence of the signed document. Do you deny that it exists?"

"Divil a bit. 'Tis in me safe at the moment. But there it stays, Reynall, till the administrator of the Bates estate calls for it. I recognize no right of yours to demand it."

"I can get an order from the Federal Court in Juneau forcing you to produce it."

"So ye can!" Dynamite's cheerful exclamation hinted at sly, secret knowledge. "But—could you get it inside of twenty-four days? Try it, Reynall."

Again silence. Then Dynamite's voice, uncompromising but not unkindly, "Ye're licked, Reynall. Be man enough to admit it and make the best of it. Set up your plant ashore, turn me old ship back to me—and pack fish. Ye have the name of bein' lucky in a tight spot. With luck, and me helpin', ye have a good chance of makin' your pack. But—try to buck me, and all the luck in the world won't save your bacon. I'm warnin', and I'm advisin' ye fair, me lad."

"Fair!" Jean's tone was one of suppressed fury. "You trick your way out of one just contract, and repudiate another. You offer me aid, but only on ruinous conditions; and you threaten me with ruin if I refuse. The devil with such 'fair' methods! They do credit to your early training as a high-handed thief and seal pirate—"

"Belay!" A fist banged an accompaniment to Dynamite's angry roar. "I gave ye a fair chance, and ye flung it back into me teeth. Now, ye insultin' young fool, ye've got a fish war on your hands. A fish war—d'ye know what that means? A fight with no rules, and no quarter. Once in it, neither law nor luck will save ye."

"Save your breath, O'Moore. You can't scare me with your fish war."

"But I can break ye—and I will! I'll block ye from buyin' fish anywhere in Alaskan waters. I'll smash ye flat, and take the Glory for—"

"Before you do either, you'll know you've been in a fight, O'Moore. I'm putting up my pack—aboard the Glory. What's more, I'll collect, somehow, a just payment on the contract you refuse to honor. Good day, sir."

Sondra had barely time to step aside before Jean strode through the door and slammed it behind him. She darted forward, overtaking him at the head of the stairs.

"Jean! I—I—" Words died at the sight of his blazing eyes, his white set face.

"Well?" he demanded, harshly. "Is it necessary that you tell me, as well as show me how little regard you have for—" He checked himself, and then, with the air of one grasping at a forlorn hope, went on eagerly, "But maybe you didn't go to the cupola last night, so you didn't hear me explain—"

"I went. I was there, Jean, but —"

"That's enough!" She shrang from his cold vehemence. "Your grandfather has just called me a fool. I seem to have been one—about you. But I've learned plenty today about O'Moore tactics, and O'Moore trickery."

He brushed past her and went running down the stairs.

Sondra turned and flung herself into the sitting room where her grandfather sat sliding his small, scarred hands over the model of the Glory. He grinned up at her from under the puckish slant of his white brows.

"Hoh, darlin'! Ye missed the fireworks. I've just sent the Reynall cub scuddin' off with his boilers rumblin' and pitch fair boilin' from his deck seams. Faith, Sondy, ye should have seen the face of him when I tore up that villainous contract he thought he had me stuck with. 'Cash or certified cheque', says I. And he helpless to get either with the bank closed!" He threw back his silvery head and roared with laughter.

Sondra, saying nothing, regarded him with mingled admiration and disapproval.

"Fit to be tied, he was, Sondy; and hollerin' 'foul tactics'! As if I could help it if Jarvis decided to board the Tanya and go strip-fishin' on the birthday of Alexander Baranov."

Sondra's innate honesty rose above her rage at Reynall. "But this isn't Baranov's birthday, Dynamite." Then, she pointed an accusing finger at her exuberant grandsire. "Look here, lamb! I just remembered—I heard you phoning Mr. Jarvis yesterday about going fishing. Do you think that was quite—well, ethical?"

"Ethical be darned! Have they been ethical with me? Look down there at the thing they've made of the Glory. Do ye call that—" He slumped suddenly in his chair, his violence gone, and passed a hand wearily over his eyes. When he spoke again his voice was husky with emotion. "She's me old ship, Sondy. And she has a soul — the soul of a fine, high-strung woman. 'Twould tear the old heart out of me to leave her there, soiled and mishandled, the summer through. And I'd break some Commandments—aye, and some heads—rather than pile more shame on her with the catch of me nets."

"I know how it is, lamb." In quick sympathy Sondra reached over and patted his shoulder; then her arm dropped listlessly. All at once she felt depressed and helpless, caught up in an impossible situation. "But—how will a fish war help? Won't they just go ahead getting herring from some other—"

"From where?" The frosty light had come back to the captain's eyes. "From Swanson or Thomas? No. From the few independent boats scattered along the coast? No—not after word goes out that Dynamite Danny O'Moore wouldn't like it. Where then—and they with no fleet of their own?"

"There's the Indian fleet, lamb."

He snorted. "A bunch of leaky old crates! Not one dares stick its nose into anything rougher than a millpond. Besides, the natives never did learn how to fish herring by modern methods. And 'tis only when a big school works into some sheltered gunk-hole that they're able to do anything with their out-of-date gear and methods."

"But suppose a lot of fish did gather in such places this season—"

"They won't. Our boats working offshore will see to that! However, to block even that small chance, I'll arrange to buy the entire native catch this year, meself. I'll have Alexander go down to the village this mornin' and bring back that young headman Katlean."

"I'll do it, Dynamite. Liane and I are leaving in about five minutes for a run to the village. We'll bring Katlean home with us."

"Good! Then we'll have that lily-fingered yachtsman—" he extended one hand, palm up, and closed it with a squeezing motion—"like that! Be off, now, darlin', and get me Katlean."

CHANCELLOR HITLER GOES TO FRONT

FLIMSY EXCUSE GIVEN BY HITLER FOR INVASION

Der Fuehrer Claims Germany's Ruhr Valley Threatened by Allied Attack and Invasion Necessary

PRESS SUMMONED

Joachim von Ribbentrop Imparts Belief of Hitler That Neutrality of Countries Should be Under His "Protection"

Berlin, May 10 (AP).—Adolf Hitler sent his troops into Belgium and Holland shortly before dawn today. Duplicating his tactics with Norway and Denmark, he demanded that they accept his "protection" of their neutrality without resistance.

Germany's Ruhr Valley was threatened by an Allied attack, he informed the governments of Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg through his foreign minister, and the Dutch and Belgian governments were conniving at it.

Wherefore, Germany was declared compelled to act to anticipate the blow.

The German government solemnly assured Holland and Belgium that their territorial sovereignty would be restored to them, unchanged and that their overseas possessions would go untouched.

To Luxembourg likewise was assured territorial and political integrity.

The pre-condition to these assurances was that these countries accept Germany's "protection" without resistance.

Any resistance, Germany warned, will be broken resolutely.

The guilt for any bloodshed will fall on Britain and France, as well as the Belgian and Dutch governments, Germany declared.

Press Is Summoned.

Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop summoned foreign press representatives to the foreign office for a 7 a.m. conference, but apparently his talks with the Belgian ambassador, Vicomte Jacques Davignon, and the Netherlands minister, Jonkheer H. M. van Haersma, and the Luxembourg charge d'affaires, Dr. Albert Wehrer—to whom the situation was imparted—took longer than the mere handing over of the memoranda.

Not until 8:25 a.m. (3:25 a.m. EDT) did Ribbentrop, pale, sleepless and with a voice husky and deep in bitterness, address the foreign correspondents.

"England and France at last dropped the mask," he declared. "The attack on the Ruhr Valley was definitely planned. It was to come via Belgium and Holland.

"This attack was planned with the knowledge and connivance of the Belgian and Dutch governments. Our Fuehrer was not willing to have this important region submitted to new aggression.

Fuehrer Makes Decision.

"The Fuehrer therefore has decided to take the neutrality of Belgium and Holland under his protection."

"Germany now will talk only the language which the English and French governments seem to understand, and settle scores once and for all with them," von Ribbentrop declared.

The foreign minister then read the text of the memorandum to the three governments which began with a reiteration of the German standpoint that "the main object of the British and French is to extend the war to other countries."

The first reports indicated that fighting was in progress at many points in the Netherlands—some of it by troops parachuted to Dutch soil—but the extent of operations in other sectors was not at once made known in Berlin.

Parachute Troops Shower Down.

Correspondents heard reports that parachute troops had showered down at many points in the Netherlands.

An early morning conference of correspondents was called by the foreign office to make the announcement of the German government's decision to "safeguard the neutrality" of the three neighboring countries.

D.N.B., German news agency, claimed the German action was precipitated by plans of the Allies themselves for an invasion of the low countries to gain a base in Germany's industrial Ruhr valley.

At the time of the invasion of Denmark and Norway, Germany declared that Adolf Hitler's legions had anticipated an Allied expedition only by a few hours.

The Belgian and Netherlands ministers and the Luxembourg charge d'affaires were summoned to the foreign office early this morning to be advised of the situation. Germany had been prepared for the move several weeks.

Claims Neutrality Not Respected.

In the text of the memorandum directed by the German government to the Belgian and Netherlands governments it was stated, "Germany has respected and recognised the integrity of Belgium and the Netherlands under the self-evident precondition that these two countries, in case of war between Germany and England and France, would observe the strictest neutrality.

"Belgium and the Netherlands have not fulfilled these requirements. Hitherto, they sought to maintain the outer appearance of neutrality. In reality, however, both countries completely and one-sidedly favored the war opponents of Germany, and fostered their intentions."

Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels personally informed the German population of the latest developments in the war.

In a nationwide radio broadcast, Goebbels read the memorandum to the Belgian and Netherlands governments to his listeners.

3 NEUTRAL

His air force was striking at strategic points in Belgium and the Netherlands, raiding far behind the French lines and making forays as far as the British coast, seeking to carry out frequently-voiced German threats of "total war" at the proper time.

German parachute troops plummeted to earth from Nazi transport planes behind the Belgian and Dutch lines, German bombers raided the Brussels airport and other points, while land forces struck at the frontiers of the two nations.

King Leopold Heads Belgians

King Leopold III of the Belgians immediately took command of his nation's fighting forces, numbering about 600 000 men who have strong fortifications prepared against such an invasion as came today.

Holland has 400,000 men, but her major hope was founded on a complex system of water defences with which she flooded her lowlands to bog down the German war machine.

Both Holland and Belgium were hopelessly outnumbered unless the British and French bring their weight into balance with aid that was quickly promised by Paris and London. French troops were reported to have reached Mons.

The British government ominously warned, however, that "it must be recognized that once again Germany has gained a military advantage by taking the initiative in attacking neutral countries."

The Allies said they were taking "immediate steps" to help Belgium and Holland.

French Military Strength

France has several million men under arms most of them manning the Maginot Line where the war has been stalemated since it started Sept. 1 with Germany's invasion of Poland.

Britain has about 200,000 soldiers on the continent, concentrated principally on the French-Belgium frontier in positions for a quick drive to succor Belgium. This is the sector where the British saw a large part of their first activity in the first Great War.

Initial reports from Luxembourg, the Grand Duchy wedged among Germany, France and Belgium, told of no military developments but the government was said to have fled in anticipation of German attack.

Brussels 'Open City'

The Belgian Government declared its capital, Brussels, was an "open city"—unfortified—and thus not subject to attack although German bombers already had raided the Brussels airport.

British dispatches said 400 dead and wounded resulted from the raid.

The Belgians asserted no troops would be allowed to pass through the capital. They hoped to save it from the ravages of war.

Civilians streamed out of Amsterdam fearful of imminent attack. Highways were clogged with autos and other vehicles piled high with bedding and other household goods.

Synchronized with the German blitzkrieg, attempting to repeat the lightning attack formula which already has given Germany half of Poland—Russia took the other half—all of Denmark, and about two-thirds of Norway, the Nazis sent their far-ranging planes into Britain and France.

Hun Raiders Driven Off Dover

German raiders were driven off Dover, English Channel port, other points on the southeast coast and the Thames Estuary.

An authoritative source said one raider was hit.

The British Ministry of Home Defence warned all civilian air raid units to be on the alert for attack.

Paris was under air raid alarm for one hour and 48 minutes. German planes bombed the De Bron airport at Lyon in south central France and one invader was shot down. All French fighting forces were called to the alert. British fighters shot down five German planes in France.

Householders were told to overhaul their domestic arrangements against air attack.

Plans For Evacuation

The Home Office said, however, that subway stations were not to be used as shelters, since they are needed for traffic.

Arrangements were made at once to assist in evacuating British subjects from Belgium and Holland.

The War Cabinet met at No. 10 Downing Street with the Chiefs of the air land and sea forces for 35 minutes.

Some sources said it was likely parliament, which adjourned yesterday for the Whitsuntide recess, would be recalled before the May 21 date set for its next session.

Volunteers, mostly Belgians residing in Britain, flocked to the Belgian Embassy, but were told their services were not needed yet.

Holland Rejects Nazi Assumption

The Dutch radio announced that the German Ambassador had been informed "Her Majesty's government unconditionally rejects the assumption that any understanding had been concluded with any foreign power against Germany."

The statement replied to Germany's charges that the Netherlands and Belgium had agreed with France and Britain for Allied troops to use lowland territory for an attack on Germany.

The radio said the Ambassador, Count Von Burkersroda, had been told that "in the face of the unexampled German attack, delivered without warning against the Netherlands, the Netherlands government regards itself at war with the Reich."

It was reported Germany likewise made no diplomatic approach in Brussels before the attack was launched.

The Brussels radio said that when Foreign Minister Paul Henri Spaak received German Ambassador Von Bulow-Schwante he said:-

"The German army has just assaulted Belgium. This is the second time that neutral and loyal Belgium has been invaded.

"This time the crime is even greater since no ultimatum, no protest was presented to the Belgium government which learned only by the assault itself that pacts between Germany and Belgium had been broken.

"This crime will rouse the general conscience and the Reich will have to justify herself before history.

"Belgium is determined to defend herself knowing that her cause is the cause of right and therefore invincible."

In response to the Belgian-Dutch appeals for help, Foreign Minister Viscount Halifax pledged that "we shall stand firmly by the side of the Belgian people and the people of the Netherlands in the struggle so wantonly forced upon them."

The Belgian and Netherlands Envoys conferred with Lord Halifax and later the Belgian Ambassador, Baron Cartier de Marchienne, proclaimed "they shall not pass this time."

"We have been invaded and when we fight we fight like blazes," the Ambassador said. "You can depend on that."

'HOUR HAS COME'

"Britain and France followed this policy without considering what government was in power in Germany.

"Their plans were always directed against the German people themselves.

"Their responsible leaders have admitted openly that Germany is to be smashed.

"This is why all my attempts for peace have failed and why war was declared on us on September 3rd last year.

"The German people, however, have no hatred against the British and French people but we are today faced with a question of life or destruction.

"In a few weeks our brave German troops defeated Poland which had been incited against us by the Western Powers.

"The danger from the east was thus eliminated.

"Then the enemy tried to attack from the north. From April 9th this year this danger also was ended by German troops.

"Now the danger that we had expected all the time has actually come."

Communique Issued

The high command communique, issued daily, was datelined this time from the "Fuehrer's headquarters" and said:-

"In view of the immediately impending extension of the war area by evening onto Belgian and Dutch territory and the, threat to the Ruhr territory connected therewith, the German western army at daybreak May 10 started over the German western borders along the broadest front for attack.

"Simultaneously, the air force attacked an enemy airport with great success and strong units have taken a hand in land fighting in support of ground troops.

"To conduct general operations of the defence force, the Fueherer and supreme commander has gone to the front."

FRANCE ASSURES

France, beating off Nazi air attacks within her own borders, assured Belgium and the Netherlands today of all possible assistance against German invasion and placed her armed forces on the alert for whatever tests were to come.

The French promise of aid was made in answer to appeals from the Belgian and Netherlands governments, which notified France of the invasion early this morning.

This morning's French communique said:—

"In the early morning hours of May 10th German troops started to penetrate Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg.

"The French armies were placed on the alert during the night. The governments concerned appealed to the Allied governments.

"The enemy also undertook air bombing operations in northern and eastern France. And as yet unestimated number of enemy planes were shot down, either by anti-aircraft guns or by pursuit aircraft."

No Comment Necessary

Minister of Information Louis Frossard, personally reading news of war developments over the radio, declared: "No comment is necessary. The hour has come for every Frenchman to do his duty silently and resolutely."

Frossard pledged that news of all further developments would be given out by the French "with scrupulous exactitude."

The news was confirmed officially in France that Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg were invaded early today.

The invasion was accompanied by extensive flights of German warplanes over France and the bombing of De Bron airport at Lyon, on the Rhone River in southeast central France.

Plane Shot Down in Lyon

One German plane was shot down in the Lyon raid. No advice on damage to the airport was received.

The cities of Nancy, Lille, Colmar, Pontoise and Luxeuil also were bombed. A number of casualties were reported.

Forty persons were killed and 150 were injured near Hazebrouck when a German bomb, forced down by Allied planes, exploded.

Several civilians were among the injured.

The plane came down with one of its motors ablaze. Two Germans managed to escape from the ship and were captured.

The plane grounded at 5.15 a.m., at 6 a.m. a tremendous explosion occurred, opening up a crater 18 feet deep and hurling parts of the plane in all directions.

Blacked-out Paris had its second longest air raid alarm since the war started.

All French troops were placed on the alert. The order was construed that necessary military measures had been taken to protect the French frontier with Belgium.

All officers of the air force on leave were recalled by the Air Ministry.

All army officers on leave also were ordered to join their companies at once. Officers attached to troops in the army zone as well as in Maginot Line posts were affected.

Defences Against Flank Attack

Strong defences to meet a possible German flanking attack through the Low Countries have been built during the last four years and have been reinforced since the Netherlands and Belgium experienced their first war scare early last November.

The Allied command had been keeping a close watch on the massed German divisions concentrated along the borders of the Low Countries and preparations were completed to meet any sudden emergency.

The neutral barriers along France's "Little Maginot Line", extending from the Maginot Line proper to the Channel coast have been effectively bolstered by a system of fortifications believed to be at least as powerful as those of the German Westwall.

French engineers also have thrown up a series of dams along the Meuse and Sambre River which if opened, would unleash a flood capable of trapping an invading army.

Work on these fortifications was intensively started in 1936, when King Leopold's proclamation of absolute Belgian neutrality nullified the Franco-Belgian staff agreements providing for joint defence of their German borders against invasion. In 1937 both Britain and France pledged respect of Belgian territory and promised to go to her aid should she be invaded. Similar promises were subsequently made by Germany.

Concentrated on Route

Defence preparations along the Northern French border were first concentrated on the traditional route of invasion—the so-called "Trouee" of the Sambre and Meuse Rivers.

France's original Maginot Line extended northwestward only as far as Longwy the first town on the Belgian Frontier. The border zone later fortified, facing Belgium offered two different problems.

The Ardennes, or southern half, from Longwy to the outskirts of Maubeuge, on the Sambre, is blanketed by thick forests offering an impenetrable barrier for large-scale operations. Mines, barbed wire entanglements and concrete-reinforced pillboxes were strategically placed along their entire length to add to the natural hazards.

The valleys of the Meuse and its tributary, the Sambre, offer the only two major channels of penetration along the Ardennes sector of the border. The Meuse enters Belgium at Mazieres, Fumay and Givet. The Sambre, which meets the Meuse at Namur, crosses the border north of Maubeuge.

Ready to Dynamite

French fortifications at Mezieres and Maubeuge, both famous in military history as the scene of seiges have been modernized and reinforced by ultra-modern heavy artillery which cover both valleys. Extensive dams, ready to be dynamited at a moment's notice, offer another threat to an invader.

The northern half of the Franco-Belgian frontier is comparatively flat terrain criss-crossed by canals and rivers. The soil is spongy and the sluice gates of the Dunkerque drainage plant hold back a potential flood which can be cascaded against an enemy whenever the order is given. Heavy fortifications also have been thrown up along the entire length of this sector, often concealed within or behind an otherwise innocent looking building.

WINSTON CHURCHILL—Britain's Man of Mars

The Kaiser and Churchill—1912

Lord Gort, British commander-in-chief and Churchill—1940

As secretary for war—1918 As first lord of admiralty—1914 As first lord of admiralty—1939 Winston Churchill—today

Whenever Great Britain finds herself in a war she turns, it would appear, to Winston Churchill. He was first lord of the admiralty when the World war broke out in 1914. In 1917 he became minister of munitions; in 1918 he was appointed secretary of state for war and also for air. A critic of the Chamberlain government before hostilities began last September he was again made first lord of the admiralty at the outbreak of war. Later, major responsibility for Great Britain's conduct of the war was placed in his hands. The photos above depict some of the highlights of his career. He is a descendant of John Churchill, first Duke of Marlborough.

BARBED WIRE ENTANGLEMENTS FOR THE NAZIS

While the official communiques still have "nothing to report" on the Western Front, there is no lack of activity. For no matter how good defences are, they are always subject to improvement. These poilus are busily engaged in weaving a web of barbed wire in an "army zone," which covers a lot of territory in France these days.

KING LEOPOLD

One hundred German planes attacked the Belgian capital at 5 a.m. dropping tons of high explosives on the centre of the city and on the Evere airdrome.

Some of the planes flew daringly low over the city as warning sirens shrieked and anti-aircraft batteries banged away. Fire brigades and ambulances raced through the city as the population was brought

TOMMIES BACK FROM NORWAY

British Tommies are shown aboard a transport ship as they arrived at a Scottish port after their unsuccessful attempt to stem the Nazi push in Norway. Operating under extreme difficulties and hampered by spies everywhere, who betrayed their position to the Nazis, the Tommies fought a gallant rear-guard action as they withdrew from their untenable positions.

Steady Stream of Bulletins

The Belgian radio kept up a steady stream of announcements, ordering all soldiers on leave back to their units and issuing instructions to the civilian population concerning their conduct during the air raid. At 6 a.m. when the planes disappeared, the all-clear signal was given and the people of Brussels poured out into the streets.

(The Exchange Telegraph News Agency said in a dispatch to London that first reports showed 400 persons had been killed in the Brussels bombing.)

The memorandum handed to M. Spaak at 8:15 a.m. by the German Ambassador promised that Belgium would be allowed to maintain her independence and territorial integrity if she permitted Nazi troops to traverse the country.

Strongly Protest

M. Spaak protested strongly to the Nazi envoy, declaring that this second violation of Belgian territory in 25 year was even more "odious" than that of 1914, because the attack had been preceded by "no warning, no note, and no ultimatum'. He told the Ambassador that Belgium would resist the aggression with all the forces at its disposal.

King Leopold immediately assumed personal command of the armed forces of his country, following the example set by his father, King Albert, in 1914.

During the air attack on the capital this morning several bombs fell in Rue Belliard, close to the German embassy. Bombs fell in several of the main arteries of the city.

A heavy military guard was thrown around the Royal Palace, the Parliament, and the ministries and main public buildings. Passage was forbidden, even to Belgian civilians.

No Sign of Panic

It was 7 a.m. before the news was generally known that Holland and Luxembourg had also been invaded. There was no sign of panic among the population, the passive defence machinery slipped smoothly into gear and was at work while the raid was still in progress.

The radio broadcast instructions to all mayors to establish centres to help those wounded by aerial bombs.

John E. Cudahy, United States ambassador to Belgium, called at the foreign office 45 minutes before the German diplomats arrived.

The Tournai region, near the German border, was attacked between 4 a.m. and 5.30 a.m. by scores of German planes and a big air battle was reported under way in that region.

Brussels Declared Open City

Brussels was declared an open city by the Belgian government and measures were taken to have troops skirt the capital en route to the front. All Germans in Belgium immediately were arrested to prevent any attempt at "fifth column" tactics.

The German invasion of Belgium violated the German pledge of 1937 when both the Allies and the Reich promised to respect Belgium's territorial integrity.

A note containing Germany's pledge was presented to the Belgian minister in Berlin on Oct. 13, 1937 by Baron Constantin Von Neurath, then Reich Foreign Minister.

In that document Germany promised to respect Belgian territory at all times, unless Belgium co-operated in military action against the Reich. Germany pledged itself, as had Britain and France, to go to Belgium's assistance should she be attacked.

It was reported that the Germans, invading Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg in the dark hours early today, had dropped leaflets on the Netherlands capital, The Hague, saying Germany was attacking Great Britain and that the population must abstain from attacking the Germans.

The radio said that no diplomatic approach had been made by Germany to Belgium before the invasion.

Watch for Parachutists

The radio called on the Belgian people to watch for parachutists descending singly and in numbers and to be on guard for saboteurs. The populace was asked to aid the police in capturing parachutists.

Amid high excitement in the Belgian capital, official offices were crammed with callers. Communications were temporarily disrupted by a storm of official messages.

The invasion of the three little countries was signalled by waves of German bombers and parachute troops dropped in the dark hours before dawn.

The Brussels radio announced that German troops crossed the frontier of Belgium at four points.

Appeal Made to Allies

Parachute troops, said the Brussels radio, dropped from German planes at Nivelles, less than 20 miles directly south of Brussels and at St. Trond 40 miles due East.

By a broadcast proclamation the government told the Belgian people it had appealed to Britain and France for aid and that King Leopold had instructed his diplomatic representative at Berlin to lodge a protest against the invasion.

Violent explosions of anti-aircraft fire were heard over the city where the cabinet had been sitting in extraordinary session since 1 a.m. (8 p.m. EDT Thursday).

In a communique the Belgian government urged the population to remain calm, ordered schools closed and the nation blacked out at night.

Everyone was advised to take cover from air bombs.

Cabinet in Session

The cabinet remained in permanent session after Premier Hubert Pierlot conferred with the King.

Antwerp was bombed early this morning.

The railway station at Jemelle, in the southeast corner of Belgium not far from the Luxembourg frontier, was reported in flames.

Ambulances clanged by continuously in Brussels, apparently bearing persons wounded by the bombs.

Anti-aircraft fire was halted shortly before seven o'clock.

Street cars ran uninterruptedly and military dispatch riders dashed through the streets on motorcycles.

Launched Before Dawn

Waves of German bombers and transport planes launched the newest Nazi blitzkrieg in the dark hours before dawn, realizing Belgium's worst fears since the war started Sept. 1.

More than 100 German planes roared over Brussels, the Capital. The Brussels airport was subjected to heavy bombing.

German troops were landed by parachute at Hasselt, in eastern Belgium, while reports of other troops landing could not be confirmed immediately.

The situation still was unclear at 9 a.m. (3 a.m. EDT) and it was not known whether Belgium was at war.

The sound of anti-aircraft fire made it appear war had begun.

Ordered to Join Units

Official notices were plastered over walls telling military men to join their units at once.

A state of alarm was declared officially as planes attacked the airdrome at Brussels at 5 a.m. (midnight EDT Thursday).

Soldiers were called back to their units urgently by a proclamation.

The radio reported parachute troops had landed in the north.

Communications were tied up by a rush of official messages.

The cabinet met early this morning after a report was received that the Netherlands also was invaded.

The Antwerp airport also was attacked with bombs.

Artillery fire was reported on the German-Belgian frontier.

It was reported that after an interview with King Leopold, Premier Hubert Pierlot declared to the press that Belgium had been attacked.

Bombard Brussels Airport

The Belgain Foreign Ministry said the invasion was launched by bombardment of the Brussels airport.

Great clouds of smoke could be seen rising from the airport while anti-aircraft batteries kept up a continual pounding against the invaders.

The Defence Ministry immediately declared a "state of alarm" throughout the nation which in the First Great War learned the tragic cost of a German invasion.

Unconfirmed reports said that the neighboring grand duchy of Luxembourg, wedged between the warring powers, also had been invaded by parachute troops which landed at Hasselt in eastern Belgium.

The Belgian cabinet went into emergency session as soon as the first news came through that the Netherlands was invaded.

Reports from the Netherlands said the Dutch quartermaster general had announced German troops crossed the Netherlands frontier at 3 a.m. (10 p.m. EDT, Thursday).

Several houses around the Brussels airport were destroyed.

Stood in Night Clothes

Belgians stood in the streets of Brussels in their night clothes watching blobs of anti-aircraft in the sky as military cars and motorcycles dashed through the streets.

Troop recall posters were posted throughout the city.

The German invasion of Belgium in violation of a treaty of non-aggression led to Britain's declaration of war in 1914 and to the full fury of the First Great War.

Today's invasion of the little country whose forces held up the German advance in the first days of the last war came eight months after the outbreak of the Second Great War. It followed months of threatening moves on the part of the German military machine along the borders of Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg.

Both Germany and the Allies pledged respect of Belgian inviolability in 1937 and promised to come to her assistance if attacked.

A note giving Germany's pledge was presented to the Belgian Minister in Berlin on October 13, 1937, by Baron Constantin Von Neurath, then Reich Foreign Minister.

In that document Germany promised to respect Belgian territory at all times, unless Belgium co-operated in military action against the Reich.

40 Killed, 150 Injured When Grounded Nazi Plane Explodes

Hazebrouck, France, May 10 (CP-Havas)—Forty persons were killed and 150 were injured when a grounded German bombing plane exploded near here early today.

Several civilians were among the injured.

The plane was a German bomber which was forced to land under the machine-gun fire of an Allied pursuit craft. It came down at the village of Boore with one of its motors ablaze. Two Germans managed to escape from the ship and were captured.

WALL STREET

New York, May 10—(AP) —"War Babies" bounded up and then tumbled with the rest of the stock market today as nervous traders tried vainly to assay the results of Germany's overnight blitzkrieg on the Low Countries. Losses of 1 to more than 5 points were widely distributed, but recoveries were in evidence near the fourth hour and activity tapered.

Steels, aircrafts, coppers and sugars were among the early climbers. After being pushed down around mid-day, some of these again edged forward. Rubbers, motors and rails were in supply throughout.

Canadian issues fell back in a body. Hiram Walker led the trend with a loss of 1 1-8 points with Canadian Pacific, Dome and Lake Shore Mines and Distillers showing fractional losses. Canada 4s, among bonds, dipped three points.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 10.—(CP)—Following moderate selling on Toronto Exchange today the market developed a dull tempo. Recessions were limited to about 1 3-4 points for Industrials and Golds were also down slightly. Turnover totalled 346,000 shares.

After the first selling rush, brought on by Germany's invasion the big metal issues recovered part of their losses. Smelters and Nickel were off small fractions and Noranda lost a point. Steep Rock fell about 15 cents. Losses were limited to about 10 cents for the secondary Golds.

Utilities, Foods, Papers and Liquors fell back fractions and the Senior Oils were off slightly. Steels were irregular.

Stronger Prices For Toronto Butter

Toronto, May 10—Prices fluctuated erratically for butter during yesterday's session of the Toronto open produce market. The product eased 1-4 cent to 1-2 cent in early dealings, and then jumped a full cent in afternoon trading. Eggs continued easy.

After selling off in the morning, the butter market rallied strongly when selling pressure dried up and more aggressive buying appeared. No. 1 grade Ontario creamery solids sold down to 22c per pound and closed firm at 23c. Good volume of business was reported. Offerings were light at the close, although receipts are now showing the seasonal increase. Prints to the retail trade lost 1c, a reflection of the previous weakness in solids. Top grades moved at 23 1-2c to 24c per pound.

Increased receipts without a corresponding pick-up in demand depressed the graded section of the egg market. The retail division maintained previous levels.

HOLLAND SERVES

Despite the stubborn resistance of the Dutch air force and anti-aircraft batteries German planes were said to have landed troops at some interior points while Hitler's power-diving bombers blasted at strategic airdromes.

The Germans heavily bombed Amsterdam's airport at Schiphol but were blocked from landing there by a screening barrage of anti-aircraft fire.

The explosion of bombs could be heard clearly in Amsterdam but the people there went about their business much as usual. The only other outward indications of a departure from normal were queues in front of Amsterdam banks.

The Government immediately put into force plans for civil defence. A blackout was ordered starting tonight. Civil militia in Amsterdam was mobilized and efforts were made to frustrate any "fifth column" activities within the nation.

The Dutch had before them the recent lesson of Germany's invasion of Norway in which confusion of orders, sabotage and treachery within Norway aided the German advance.

Germans Ordered Inside

All Germans in The Netherlands were ordered to remain in their houses.

"Persons arousing suspicion that they violate this order expose themselves to serious danger for their lives", said a Dutch broadcast.

The military advised newspaper correspondents that telegrams for dispatch abroad would be handled as usual, but subject to severe censorship of anything considered "alarmist". No telephone calls to foreign countries were permitted.

At 5.50 a.m. (1.30 a.m. E.D.T.) 24 German planes flew over Rotterdam, dropping down to an altitude of only about 1,500 feet. It was announced parachute troops had been captured there and imprisoned.

Parachute troops also were reported to have landed at the Waalhaven Airport, near Rotterdam. One crossing of the Dutch frontier was said to have occurred near Lobith, where the Rhine enters the Netherlands.

A statement handed to the German Minister here denied the Berlin allegation that the Netherlands had knowledge of any British-French plan to invade the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg for an attack on Germany.

The invasion came during the night while most of the Netherlands slept. The Germans stabbed at the border by land and at the interior by air.

Indignantly Rejected Demand

The Government indignantly rejected a German demand for surrender to the invading forces and Queen Wilhelmina, now 59 years old, went on the air to proclaim a "flaming protest" against the German blow.

The Queen called upon all citizens to do their duty and accused Germany of breaking a "solemn promise" to respect Dutch neutrality.

Netherlands' Army forces took stands behind the nation's elaborate water defences and fortifications to meet the frontier thrusts and, in the interior, fought fiercely with parachute-landed German machine-gunners.

Airports and other strategic centres were bombed, but the results of these attacks were not known.

The first German troops struck at the Netherland's border at 3 a.m. (10:40 p.m. Thursday E.D.T.) and at 9 a.m. today were reported to have advanced as far as Ijsel.

Wore Dutch Uniforms

For the parachute landing of troops some of the invaders, according to the Dutch, wore Netherlands uniforms. (Germany denied this charge immediately—it would be a violation of the conventions of war. A London report said British uniforms also were used.)

The Germans said to have worn their enemy's uniform were reported to have been surrounded and destroyed.

At various places German planes dropped pamphlets which presented the German case for the invasion and urged the Dutch to lay down their arms.

The High Command broadcast a warning to the people to disbelieve any German announcements of Armistice.

A Dutch High Command communique said—

"German troops passed through the Dutch border during the night and our border troops fulfilled their tasks.

"They succeeded in carrying out their trust. Bridges over the Maas and Waal have been demolished by them.

"East of Arnhem, 15 miles from the German-Dutch border Germans have advanced to Ijsel.

"In the interior enemy planes tried to land and in some places dropped parachutes and planes landed.

"These landings were partly unsuccessful and parachutists who dressed in Netherlands uniforms have been surrounded and destroyed.

Pamphlets Untrue

"Over various places Germans dropped pamphlets which are untrue and threats against the Dutch.

The high command urged the population not to believe such utterances which are only intended to create disorders.

"The Dutch are executing measures imposed by the acts and words of the Queen for the defence of the Netherlands soil."

Another communique said: "Air attacks have been tried on some airports. The army and the defence are ready. Inundations are going on as scheduled. As far as is known at least six German planes have been shot down."

—Observers northeast of the Hague reported at 5.55 a.m. that 22 dive bombers (Sturzkampf bombers) were seen headed toward the seat of the government where Queen Wilhelmina and the remainder of the royal family live.

A still later announcement by the general headquarters declared that the Netherlands government would never negotiate with the enemy and elaborated on the warning against any "false" German reports.

Distrust Radio News

"Distrust all radio news and pamphlets telling you about stopping our resistance, about negotiations with the aggressor or about assistance from the German side against an attack by the Allies," this communique said.

"No matter how reliable and official these may sound they can only come from the enemy.

"Never will the commander-in-chief and the government negotiate with the enemy."

Close upon the heels of Allied offers of aid against the Germans Foreign Minister Eelco Van Kleffens and Colonial Minister Charles Welter left for London to make contact with British and French leaders, it was announced by radio.

The semi-official news service said it had learned advance approaches to the Allies had been made by the regular envoys via London and Paris.

Proclamation Broadcast

Within a few short hours after the first German troops crossed the border and the Netherlands inundated strategic areas for defence Queen Wilhelmina broadcast a proclamation over the Hilversum radio. It started:

"To my people:

"Despite the fact that our country all these months has maintained strict neutrality with the utmost conscientiousness and whereas it had no other intention than to maintain this neutrality strictly and in all its consequences, German troops last night made without any warning a sudden attack upon our territory and that despite a solemn promise that the neutrality of our country would be respected so long as we maintained it ourselves.

"I am making herewith a flaming protest against this unexampled violation of good faith and what is considered decent between civilized nations.

"I and my government will do our duty now too. Do yours everywhere and under all circumstances, everyone in the place to which he is assigned, with utmost watchfulness, and with inner calmness and devotion to which a pure conscience entitles us."

A broadcast to air defence units said British, French and Belgian planes which were flying over the Netherlands were to be regarded as "Our Allies."

This was the first indication that the British and French had sent their aircraft to oppose the Germans. The announcement was made about 7.45 a.m. Up to that time the Dutch had had no assistance against German planes.

BRITAIN READY

"The forward March" that presumably has been given must have been received by the Tommies with whoops of delight. Those with whom I spoke were long sufferers from boredom due to inactivity.

The only troops who found relief from boredoom were those engaged in constructing fortifications to buttress the defensive works thrown up earlier along the Belgian border.

The cement walls of the giant blockhouses and smaller pillboxes are three and more feet thick. They are ribbed with heavy rods of steel. The Britons manning them today must have very itchy trigger fingers.

SATURDAY ENDS RACE MEETINGS IN GREAT BRITAIN

Early Reports Indicate Germans Following Schlieffen Plan of 1914

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 10—(CP Cable) — Preliminary reports from Holland and Belgium indicate the German High Command has adopted the famous Schlieffen plan of 1914.

The German objective is the North Sea, then to turn south, always holding the sea on the flank of the advancing army. By this manoeuvre the Germans hope to secure sea bases 120 miles from Harwich, England, and turn the flank of the Maginot Line.

In 1914 the German Commander-in-Chief, General Von Moltke, pursuing the same plan, lost his nerve and refused to take in Holland in his sweep to the west. German strategists always have declared that this error cost Germany the first Great War.

Hitler apparently has taken note of this criticism of Von Moltke's tactics and is resolved to secure his right flank on the North Sea.

The Dutch troops are well equipped as a defensive force. Their tactics probably will be to retire beyond the "water line," letting the German thrust continue toward Belgium. The likeliest tactics will be to harry the Germans from the flank to protect the coastal area of the country.

The Belgians have nearly 1,000,000 men under arms but everything points to Allied troops reinforcing them from northern France.

A great deal may depend on the speed with which the Allied armies are able to advance north and east through Belgium to forestall the German thrust at the entrenchments running west from Antwerp to Ostend.

If the German army cannot be held there it may push through Belgium, perhaps even reach the fortifications in France behind the Belgian frontier which the Allies have spent the last eight months constructing.

It is quite possible that within the next few days a battle of the Marne of 1940 will be fought to check Hitler in his drive to the west.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Thunderstorms! Now is about the beginning of the thunderstorm season, although such storms may occur in any month of the year. For the year as a whole they are most numerous in the United States in Central Florida, northern New Mexico, and in Canada in Ontario and the St. Lawrence Valley. In Florida there are about 90 a year, New Mexico, 65, in Ontario, 5, and at Quebec, 8. In the thunderstorm season the distribution is about the same as for the year except there are more over the Rockies and their eastern slope. In late fall, winter and early spring, thunderstorms are more numerous in the southern half of the Mississippi valley than elsewhere in North America.

Accuses Germany of Violating "Solemn Promise" to Respect Dutch Neutrality

VEHEMENTLY PROTESTS

Dutch Advised They Are Forbidden to Listen to the German Radio

Hilversum, the Netherlands, (By radio to London) May 10—(AP) — Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands broadcast today to her people that "I and my Government will do our duty". She accused Germany of violating a "solemn promise" to respect Dutch neutrality.

"During the past night German armed forces, without the slightest warning made a sudden attack on our territory", the Queen said.

"This has been done despite a solemn promise that the neutrality of our country would be respected so long as we ourselves maintained it.

"I hereby address a burning protest against this unexampled breach of good faith and disregard of decency between civilized nations.

"We appeal to you everywhere and in all circumstanecs, each of you wherever you are stationed, with the utmost vigilance, calm and devotion to do your duty towards the State."

The Dutch people were advised that Holland considers herself at war with Germany. They were warned to disbelieve any German radio messages suggesting an armistice pending negotiations between Holland and Germany.

Forbidden to Listen

The Dutch also were advised that it now is forbidden to listen to German radio.

Reports gave incomplete descriptions of the fighting in invaded Netherlands and Belgium.

An air battle was fought over Amsterdam at 4.20 a.m. Fighter planes dived on bombers believed to be German and columns of smoke rose from Schiphol Airdrome near Amsterdam.

Throughout all the Netherlands intense air activity was reported, with squadrons of foreign planes circling Denhelder naval base. Six German planes were reported over Ijmuiden. Parachutists landed at Maarden Sliedrecht and near Delft, only 13 miles from the Hague. A hundred parachutists landed at Dodrecht.

Six German planes bombed the Airdrome at Welschap near Eidhoven. Three German planes attempted to land at Souburg in Zeeland and were fired on by defenders.

Hundred of parachutists landed at Hooge and Zwaluwe where a bridge forms the principal link between North and South Holland. Others landed on Rosenburg Island near Rotterdam.

Eyewitnesses said Heinkel bombers inflicted heavy damage on the Schiphol Airdrome.

PRIME MINISTER CALLS MEETING CABINET COUNCIL

Action Taken After Mr. King Studies Latest Reports of German Invasion of Holland and Belgium

GUARD ASSETS

Ottawa, May 10—(CP)—After studying latest reports of the German invasion of Holland and Belgium Prime Minister Mackenzie King today called a meeting of cabinet council for 12:30 o'clock.

At the same time the Prime Minister's office announced that a press conference, scheduled several days ago for 2.30 p.m. had been postponed until four o'clock.

From the early morning hours Mr. King was busy with conferences and telephone conversations with his colleagues and diplomatic representatives in the capital.

Hon. C. G. Power, Acting Defence Minister in the absence of Hon. Norman Rogers who is in England, was one of those in consultation with the Prime Minister, after which he called a meeting of the defence council.

Mr. Power also sent out a call for a meeting of the air supervisory council. This is a body set up to assist in carrying out the commonwealth air training plan.

The supervisory air council consists of the Defence Minister, Finance Minister Ralston, Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions and Supply, Sir Gerald Campbell, British High Commissioner; Sir William Glasgow, Australian High Commissioner, Group Captain A. Izitt, representing New Zealand, the chief of the general staff and the three Deputy Ministers of Defence (army, navy and air).

Anticipate Cabinet Meeting

No emergency cabinet council was called immediately but it was anticipated this would be done when it became apparent what action would be necessary to meet latest war developments.

Steps will be taken at once to safeguard all Canadian assets of Holland and Belgium to prevent their withdrawal and possible German seizure. This was done in the case of Denmark and Norway when Germany invaded those countries.

Because of the rigid control exercised over all foreign exchange in Canada, by the Wartime Foreign Exchange Control Board, the speedy action taken this morning by the United States government, "freezing" all assets of Holland and Belgium in the United States, in advance of market openings, is not necessary in Canada. An order will be issued, however, supplementing action by the Board.

Telephones Busy

Telephones at Laurier House, home of the Prime Minister, were busy constantly throughout the morning while visitors came and went. It was understood the Prime Minister had conferred with Baron Silvercruys, the Belgian Minister, and others in the diplomatic service.

A constant stream of cables reached the decoding branch of the external affairs department from Canadian representatives in the Netherlands, France and England, and were rushed to the Prime Minister.

A formal statement from the Prime Minister was not anticipated before cabinet council and at the afternoon press conference it was thought he likely would have some comment on war developments to make to Ottawa correspondents.

H.M.C.S. ASSINIBOINE ASSISTS IN CAPTURE OF GERMAN FREIGHTER

Assisted by a British cruiser the new Canadian flotilla leader H.M.C.S. Assiniboine overhauled the German freighter Hannover in the Caribbean Sea as the Nazi ship tried to run the blockade with 6,000 tons of ore and lumber. When capture appeared inevitable the crew of the Hannover set the ship afire and abandoned it. Quick work by crews of the Assiniboine and the British cruiser subdued the flames, as shown ABOVE. After battling heavy seas for four days, the Hannover was towed into port.

Brussels, May 10—(AP)— Belgium is "resolved to defend herself by all means and can not be vanquished." Germany was told today in a note handed to German Ambassador Von Bulow-Schwante by Paul Henri Spaak, the Belgian Foreign Minister.

The text of the note:—

"Germany for the second time has invaded neutral and loyal Belgium. The present invasion is even worse than that of 1914.

"No ultimatum was given. No official notification. No protests.

"Instead, a direct attack violating the neutrality of the country.

"This attitude deprived Germany of any justification. This violation will hurt the conscience of the entire world abroad.

"Belgium is resolved to defend herself by all means. She has the right with her and can not be vankuished."

PRIME MINISTER CALLS MEETING CABINET COUNCIL

Action Taken After Mr. King Studies Latest Reports of German Invasion of Holland and Belgium

GUARD ASSETS

Ottawa, May 10—(CP)—After studying latest reports of the German invasion of Holland and Belgium Prime Minister Mackenzie King today called a meeting of cabinet council for 12:30 o'clock.

At the same time the Prime Minister's office announced that a press conference, scheduled several days ago for 2.30 p.m. had been postponed until four o'clock.

From the early morning hours Mr. King was busy with conferences and telephone conversations with his colleagues and diplomatic representatives in the capital.

Hon. C. G. Power, Acting Defence Minister in the absence of Hon. Norman Rogers who is in England, was one of those in consultation with the Prime Minister, after which he called a meeting of the defence council.

Mr. Power also sent out a call for a meeting of the air supervisory council. This is a body set up to assist in carrying out the commonwealth air training plan.

The supervisory air council consists of the Defence Minister, Finance Minister Ralston, Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions and Supply, Sir Gerald Campbell, British High Commissioner; Sir William Glasgow, Australian High Commissioner, Group Captain A. Izitt, representing New Zealand, the chief of the general staff and the three Deputy Ministers of Defence (army, navy and air).

Anticipate Cabinet Meeting

No emergency cabinet council was called immediately but it was anticipated this would be done when it became apparent what action would be necessary to meet latest war developments.

Steps will be taken at once to safeguard all Canadian assets of Holland and Belgium to prevent their withdrawal and possible German seizure. This was done in the case of Denmark and Norway when Germany invaded those countries.

Because of the rigid control exercised over all foreign exchange in Canada, by the Wartime Foreign Exchange Control Board, the speedy action taken this morning by the United States government, "freezing" all assets of Holland and Belgium in the United States, in advance of market openings, is not necessary in Canada. An order will be issued, however, supplementing action by the Board.

Telephones Busy

Telephones at Laurier House, home of the Prime Minister, were busy constantly throughout the morning while visitors came and went. It was understood the Prime Minister had conferred with Baron Silvercruys, the Belgian Minister, and others in the diplomatic service.

A constant stream of cables reached the decoding branch of the external affairs department from Canadian representatives in the Netherlands, France and England, and were rushed to the Prime Minister.

A formal statement from the Prime Minister was not anticipated before cabinet council and at the afternoon press conference it was thought he likely would have some comment on war developments to make to Ottawa correspondents.

GOEBBELS FINDS WAR EXCUSES

Alleges He Found 'Document' Charges 'Hostile Utterances'

New York, May 10 — (AP)—Dr. Paul Goebbels, Nazi propaganda minster, said in a broadcast early today that the German Government accused the Netherlands and Belgium of conniving "in a plot to start a revolution in Germany."

Goebbels, in an address picked up here, said the Nazi Government based its accusation on a document later March 29 and a high command document dated May 4.

"As is known, there are organizations in Holland and Belgium, to which high personages of the general staffs of both countries belong which have been plotting the elimination of the Fuehrer and the Reich Government, and to put into power a government in Germany which would mean the creation of a helpless Germah Reich again," Goebbels claimed.

"The government," Goebbels went on, "accused the low countries of making hostile utterance against Germany and above all they did absolutely nothing against the hostile utterances against Germany in the Press and by persons in public life."

'German Lies and Cowardly Means Of Warfare'

New York, May 10—(AP) — Dr. Alexander Loudon, Netherlands Minister to the United States, said early today that in invading his country "Germany has outdone itself once again as a civilized nation."

"There is nothing much to say," the weary minister said emotionally. "The American public is intelligent enough to draw its own conclusions and will not be taken in by the usual German lies and these cowardly means of warfare."

FISHERMEN REPORT LIGHT CATCHES OF TROUT AND WHITEFISH

South Bay, May 10 (Special) — Main Duck Island commercial fishermen report very light catches of both trout and whitefish. Fishermen of the island colony are of the opinion that ciscoe catches will be heavier than last season, as prospects now give evidence of a better harvest.

Shipments of fish are being taken to Cape Vincent by the fishing craft Ormond K.

South Bay, May 9—The sinking of the ill-fated steamer Arlington with the loss of her skipper Captain Fred Burke, recalls vivid recollections of her seafaring career to local seamen.

The Arlington was well known upon the Great Lakes, and especially to Captain Jack Buchanan, first mate Wm Wright and Harry Palen, Waupoos, and wheelsman Earl Lobb, Milford, who shipped on board the veteran vessel in 1931.

The Arlington saw service in the North Atlantic during the Great War, 1914-18.

Today's Well-Furnished Home Must Harmonize In and Out

By Milton John Maw

The interior of the well furnished home of today should be at all times in complete harmony with the architectural design of the exterior. There is, in reality, no hard and fast rule as to what is in style this year or will be in style next year and each individual room should be treated from its architectural background without any regard as to the so called latest trend of interior decoration.

By this we mean, that with so many well designed houses now being built, one has little trouble when considering the purchase of a home in making a selection to suit their individual tastes, reflecting when completely furnished their own true personality.

In order to make this point clear, let us take for example a home recently furnished by a prominent firm.

The design was created by a recognized and successful architect and originated from Early American influence closely resembling the houses built during the first part of the 18th century. The construction is of grey stone with woodwork painted white and is gracefully offset by shutters of dark blue. So much for the outside because after all, we are discussing interior decorations.

As we enter the front door we realize at once this home will prove worthy of our most minute inspection. The first impression one gains of an interior is formed by the furnishing of the hall.

This hall is truly one that reflects the true meaning of interior decorating. The walls are treated with a very interesting wallpaper depicting a series of hunting scenes. The red of the huntsmen's coats is exemplified by the rich red broadloom carpet completely covering the hall and stairs and gives a pleasing contrast to the knotty pine woodwork. Just inside the door we find a genuine old pine chest of drawers on which is displayed choice pieces of early English pewter. Over the chest, to complet this well balanced grouping, is an old map showing Canada before Confederation.

After carefully observing the decorative merits of this interesting hallway we descend into the living room. Here we find the same good taste and careful selection of period furnishings we experienced on first entering the house. Th walls of this room are treated in pine panelling, the rich mellow color of which could not be surpassed by old pine itself. Covering the floor ,anl leaving a slight margin of hardwood we find a most unique carpet resembling in design the old fashioned hook rug combining the subtle colors of delf blue and rich mahogany.

Practically all the furniture has been reproduced from original museum pieces by skilled craftsmen and cannot be identified from genuine antiques. The drapery treatment is simple; cornice boxes have been made with the same pine used in the panelling. The draperies, which draw a night, are of a hand woven honey beige homespun picking up the ground color of the hooked Saxony carpet.

The dining room, library and bedrooms are furnished in complete accord with the general scheme previously described in the hall and living room and possess the same restful dignified charm.

Perhaps this home would not suit you; perhaps your taste may lean towards 18th Century English mahogany productions with hand blocklinen drapes and plain carpets, or even the sophisticated modern trend may appeal, with furniture in bleached mahogany, picked oak or some of the more unusual styles.

However, one point we wish to emphasize when furnishing a house or even one room, is that you consult someone whose professional experience will be beneficial to you in making your home a happier, more artistic and comfortable place in which to live.

Now's the Time to Re-Paint Garden Seats, Tables, Chairs

Garden seats, tables and chairs will soon be needed, and so that they will not detract from the appearance of the garden some attention should be given to them now. Deck chairs should be dusted thoroughly and a coat of clear varnish applied to woodwork. Joints and screws need a little grease, but this must be applied only where it will not get on someone's clothes. The canvas seats do not last for ever and if there is any doubt about their strength, it is advisable to scrap them and fit new ones. The detachable type fitted with slots and wooden rods are particularly useful, as they can be removed and stored in the house during winter.

Formay wooden seats which are kept out of doors all the year, need extra paint. Before commencing to paint them, the woodwork should be thoroughly cleaned. All old paint that is loose or has scaled should be removed. The bottoms of the legs will benefit by a coat of tar. Oil paint or enamel is suitable for these seats; the latter gives a better finish and is more durable. Green, brown, and white are usually chosen, but there is no reason why an experiment should not be made with the brighter colors.

Rustic seats are more likely to suffer from exposure to the weather, and signs of rotting, and insects which attack woodwork must be looked for closely. After cleansing, they should be varnished. Where this has not been done previously, extra protection can be given by using creosote under the varnish. Bark should not be left on rustic work, because, although attractive, it harbors insects and encourages rot. Tables and any other wooden furniture should be treated similarly always remembering that paint and varnish not only decorate but act as preservatives.

If tents have been stored carefully during winter, they will need nothing more than a good cleaning. Faded or dirty canvas can be renewed or washed with soap and water. A vacuum cleaner will be useful if it is not desired to wet the material. Metal work needs the protection of paint, but any rust should first be removed.

Body is Found Sprawled Over Seat Of a Cultivator

Campbellford, Ont., May 10—(CP)—The body of Harry Campbell, 52, well-known Seymour Township farmer, was discovered last night sprawled over the seat of a cultivator in a field on his farm. The man's skull was fractured and his face bruised and scratched.

Police said they believed Campbell either had been kicked by one of a team of horses attached to the cultivator or had fallen from the machine, clambered back on it and collapsed.

The body was discovered by Garnet Grills, a neighbor. He said he saw the team standing in front of the cultivator in the field at noon and when he saw them in the same spot at night he investigated. An inquest will be held.

Text of Appeal Of Belgium For Allied Aid

Brussels, May 10—(CP—Havas)—Text of the Belgian appeal for aid handed to the French and British Ambassadors in Brussels and to the French and British Governments in Paris and London:—

His Majesty's Government regrets to inform the French Republic and the United Kingdom that German troops have just invaded Belgian territory in defiance of engagements signed by the Reich on Dec. 13, 1937, which were renewed once more at the beginning of the present conflict. The Belgian Government is determined to resist with all its strength the aggression of which the country is once more the object.

Appeal Under Treaties

It appeals to the Governments of the Republic and the United Kingdom that the aid provided by treaties and confirmed by the common declaration of April 24, 1937, be extended to it in the shortest possible time.

It is also convinced that France and Great Britain will desire to renew with it the engagements previously signed on Feb. 14, 1916, engagements extending to the Congo, as well as those resulting from the letters exchanged on Sept. 19, 1914, and April 29, 1916, and the declaration of Great Britain and the Republic on April 19, 1916.

His Majesty's Government is firmly confident that, as in the past, the united efforts of France, Great Britain, and Belgium will assure the triumph of the right. The Belgian Government would be glad to obtain from the Government of the French Republic and the United Kingdom a reply as promptly as possible.

CANADIAN TROOPS APPLY SELVES WITH GREAT VIGOR

News of Invasion Sweeps Through Aldershot Camp Like Wildfire

CROWD ABOUT RADIOS

By EDWIN JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Aldershot, England, May 10—(CP Cable)—The rugged, sun-tanned men of the Canadian 1st Division applied themselves to their training task today with greater vigor than ever.

News that Germany had launched an attack on the Low Countries and Luxembourg spread through the area like wildfire.

Before the day's round of duties began officers and other ranks of every unit crowded round radios in their messes to hear reports of the German invasion.

At headquarters Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton General Officer commanding the 1st Division, and other staff officers paused to listen before starting out on a routine inspection tour.

Despite the tense and serious faces, there was a feeling of general relief. "At last it has come; now we can get on with the job we came over here to do," one officer remarked. Those nearby nodded in agreement. Everywhere throughout the Canadian area the units were full out on their set programs.

With the G.O.C. I visited the first anti-tank regiment on the tractor ranges firing on moving targets.

The marksmanship displayed gave ample warning of what is in store for the Jerrys' tanks if they come within range of guns manned by these sharpshooters. Several times the crews scored four out of five direct targets as they crawled over the uneven terrain in the distance.

'Appropriate' Action Will be Taken by Britain if Civilian Populations Are Bombed

London, May 10—(AP)— Great Britain and France today warned Germany of possible "appropriate" action in the event of bombings of civil populations by her.

The British Government "publicly proclaimed that they reserve to themselves the right to take any action which they consider appropriate in the event of bombings of civil populations" by Germany.

A similar announcement was issued by the French Government in Paris.

Britain's proclamation followed a reported bombing of Chilham in rural Kent, 40 miles southeast of London, and raids on various towns in the Netherlands and Belgium.

A bulletin issued by the Foreign Office said:—

"His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom who, in their reply of Sept. 1 to the appeal of the President of the United States, gave assurance that their air forces had received orders prohibiting the bombing of civilian populations in limiting bombings to strictly military objectives, now publicly proclaim that they reserve to themselves the right to take any action which they consider appropriate in the event of bombing by the enemy of civil populations whether in the United Kingdom, France or in countries assisted by the United Kingdom."

ITALY TO RESERVE NEUTRALITY, VIEW

Diplomatic Circles Expect Italy Will Await Repercussions of Invasion of Lowlands

Rome, May 10—(AP) — Italian newspapers announced the German invasion of Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg today with streamer headlines.

"Allies beaten once again in swiftness," was one comment.

Rome was criss-crossed by a network of feverish diplomatic activity as ambassadors exchanger views, some of them calling at the foreign ministry.

The Belgian Ambassador, Count Adre De Kerchove, saw Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano, presumably to inform him of Belgium's reaction to the invasion.

It was assumed the British and French ambassadors also would seek interviews for a similar purpose.

The almost unanimous impression in diplomatic circles was that Premier Mussolini would keep Italy out of the war until its repercussions become apparent.

Many speculated on the possible influence King Victor Emmanuel might exert since Italy's Princess Marie Jose is a sister of King Leopold of Belgium. Marie Jose is the wife of Crown Prince Umberto of Italy, who commands half the Italian army.

Three Nazi Planes Shot Down by Belgian Pilots

Brussels, May 10—(CP—Havas)—Three German planes were shot down today by Belgian pilots operating Italian-made planes, the Defence Ministry announced tonight, while five or six Messerschmitts were downed by anti-aircraft fire.

The communique:—

"One of our pilots shot down a Messerschmitt 109. He was on board an Italian plane, CR-42 Caproni. Another of our pilots, in an identical machine, shot down during the same flight two German planes.

"Our batteries shot down five or six German Messerschmitt planes."

"Little Maginot Line" Will Stop Nazi Hordes Passing Luxembourg

By FRED BACKHOUSE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 10—(CP Cable) — If the German hordes sweep through unarmed, undefended Luxembourg as they did in 1914 they will meet no "weak spot" this time but the fully fortified Ardennes section of Belgium's "Little Maginot Line."

Strategists here envisage one of the auxiliary thrusts of the Nazi attack will be through the Grand Duchy in an effort to outflank the French Maginot Line. The Ardennes wooded hills, which extend along a great part of the Luxembourg frontier, today are fortfied by impressive defence works calculated to uphold the German advance until Allied aid arrives.

A few months ago, when I was privileged to see something of these fortifications, the Belgian expert who accompanied me said "with this stuff we can hold back any tank attack." With a sweep of his arm, he indicated a large area of camouflaged minefields, cement and steel fortifications and artillery emplacements.

Behind these defences I saw some of the thousands of Belgium's rough, tough little "Chasseurs Ardennais." They were well-armed, principally with anti-tank guns, and appeared to be well-trained. Their reminiscences of the four-year German occupation of 25 years ago were sufficient indication of the high fighting spirit they possess today.

Of Belgium's magnificent army of 7[illegible]0,000 they number only one division but they are considered to be the "fightingest," most devoted soldiers.

William Boyd starred as the famous "Hopalong" Cassidy, in "Range War," now showing at the Capitol with the added attraction "Free, White and 21."

FORGOTTEN MAN OF BRITISH POLITICS

With a storm of criticism raging around the head of Prime Minister Chamberlain, debonair Anthony Eden, RIGHT, former foreign secretary, who resigned his post because he was unable to agree with Mr. Chamberlain's foreign policy, appears to be the forgotten man of British politics. At one time prominently mentioneed as the possible next prime minister of England, Mr. Eden's name so far has not been put forward in the present bitter debates. At the outbreak of the war he accepted the post of Secretary for the Dominions in the Chamberlain cabinet.

2,000 PLANES ORDERED IN U. S.

This or Even Larger Number Reported Placed on Order by Allies in Last Few Days

Washington, May 10—(AP)—Aviation authorities said today that the British and French governments have ordered 2,000 or more additional American-made warplanes in the last few days.

The new contracts, for the latest type fighting planes and bombers developed for the United States Army Air Corps, were said to have boosted the Allies' purchases within the last month to 4,000 or more military aircraft.

At the same time, it was disclosed that the War Department intends to recommend to President Roosevelt that Congress be asked for funds immediately to build 200 long-range, four-motor bombers to reinforce western \ hemisphere defences.

The additional bombers would be a part of the 6,000-plane quota which Congress authorized for the air corps last year. Fifty-two of the big bombers are in service and 200 others are on orders.

The latest Allied plane purchases coincided with authoritative reports that the Anglo-French purchasing mission contemplated relying more heavily on the United States for aerial reinforcements than originally planned, in view of the war's new turn.

The latest orders included an undisclosed number of Martin Bombers and of a fast new pursuit plane.

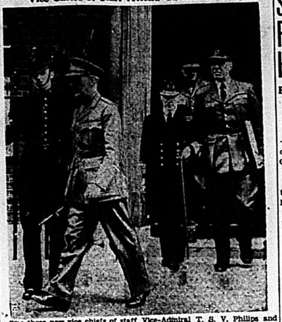
Vice Chiefs of Staff Attend Cabinet Meeting



The three new vice chiefs of staff are pictured leaving 10 Downing St. after attending their first cabinet meeting. At the LEFT is Gen. John C. Dill. He is followed by Vice-Admiral T. S. V. Philips and Air Marshal R. E. C. Pierse. The vice chiefs were named to take some of the overflow of work and responsibility from the shoulders of the regular chiefs of staff.

Careful Consideration is Required in Building

One of the most serious questions which you should consider before starting to build your house, is whether or not you can afford "extras". Most of us cannot. It is important, therefore, that the price cited in the original contract be the final price; and that the specifications include everything which you have planned for, and that no items be forgotten to pop up later and become "extras".

Most of us who plan to build have set a definite maximum budget; and usually that maximum is reached in the original contract. "Extras" upset the budget, and take the joy out of what should be one of life's most pleasant experiences.

"Extras" develop from many sources: The inability of the owners themselves to confine their desires to their pocketbook limits, neighbors, friends, and the builder.

Owners very often continue "looking around" after their building contract has been signed, and in their visits to various models they see various items which they desire to have included in the plans and specifications of the home they are about to build. Most of these added items are not essential; if they are, the proposed home was not properly planned before the contract was signed. And no non-essential item should be added to the home, unless the money so spent can be well afforded.

Th best and most effective precaution against "extras" is the selection of an experienced, reliable builder, to whom you can give your complete confidence. You will find this confidence rarely misplaced, if your builder selection has been made with care.

Having made your selection, discuss the entire matter of your proposed home, freely and without reservation. Outline the immediate and future requirements of the home with reference to space and living requirements; the total amount which you can commit yourself to pay; and—most important—the total monthly limit—taxes, insurance, upkeep, principal and interest—which you can afford to pay.

With this information the builder can make an intelligent beginning in the job of outlining a home to suit your specific requirements. And it might be well to remember that you can at some later date replace or change the electric fixtures, the wall paper, paint, the cabinets, the fireplace, electrictl equipment, tile, doors, roof, and even your heating plant or interior trim but you cannot, without a geat deal of expense, change or replace the basic structural parts of the house.

Popular Annuals are Listed For Every Garden Purpose

It would be difficult to state a garden purpose for which a quick growing annual flower is not available. These accommodating flowers should be used wherever they create a desired effect. Here are suggested solutions for planting problems which are frequently met in gardening:

For edges and borders — Sweet alyssum, dwarf nasturtiums, lobelia, dwarf marigold (tagetes signata pumula), ageratum, Virginia stocks, forget-me-nots, nieremburgia.

Long stems for cutting — Asters, calliopsis, mourning bride or scabiosa, cosmos, salvia farinacea.

Short stems for cutting — Marigolds, snapdragons, calendulas, sweet peas, annual chrysanthemums, bachelor buttons, sweet sultans, ten weeks' stocks and gypsophila.

For color masses—Petunia, zinnia, marigolds, calendulas, phlox, Drummondi, verbena, stock aster salvia and poppies.

For light or poor soil — Nasturtiums, Clarkia, godetia, poppy, portulaca and zinnias.

For fragrance—Mignonette, heliotrope, nasturtiums, alyssum, matthiola bicornic, nicotiana, datura, ten weeks' stocks and sweet peas.

For shady places—Pansies, torenias or wishbone plane, godetia, forget-me-not, nemophila ampatiens, musk plant and other varieties of the handsome monkey flower (mimulus).

For hot situations — Sunflowers, heliotrope, portulaca, ice plant, petunias, balsam and annual gaillardia.

To grow after frost—Sweet alyssum, bachelor's buttons, petunias, marigolds, calendulas, candytuft, stocks and phylox Drummondi.

Vines — Morning glories, moonflowers, Japanese hop, climbing nasturtium, cardinal climbers, cobaea, cypress vine, baloon vine, scarlet runner and hyacinth beans.

Color harmonies—For yellow and deep blues: white cosmos, annual sunflower, centaureas, blue larkspurs, Swan river daisies, lobelia tenuoir and the dwarf forms, burnt orange shades in the zinnias and the California poppies.

Lavender, violet and orange—Ageratum, African marigolds, asters, lilac, larkspur, heliotrope and dwarf marigolds.

FIT FOR A FIGHT

In the French capital, May 4, Gen. Paul Frederic Rollet, ABOVE, 71, the "fightingest man in all France," turned twinkling eyes on army doctors and demanded war duty. He was retired in 1937, after 46 years of service, fighting in every war or border skirmish where the French flag flew. He's a year younger than Gen. Maxime Weygand, recalled from retirement to head the Allied armies in the Near East.

SETTLE HISTORY FOR 1,000 YEARS, HITLER ORDERS

Fuehrer's Proclamation Makes Old Charge of British, French Aim

SAYS PEACE REJECTED

Berlin, May 10—(AP)—The text of Adolf Hitler's proclamation to the German army:—

Soldiers of the west front!

The hour of the deciding fight for the future of the German nation has come.

For 300 years it was the aim of the English and French rulers to prevent every real consolidation of Europe and, above all, to hold Germany in weakness and potency.

For this purpose France alone has declared war on Germany 31 times in 200 years.

For decades it has been the aim of British world rulers to keep Germany from unity, to deny the Reich every earthly possession which is necessary to the preservation of a nation of 80,000,000 people.

England and France have carried through this policy of theirs without worrying about the regime which happened to rule in Germany at the time.

Alleges Hatred For German People

What they wanted to strike was always the German people.

Their responsible men admit this goal quite openly.

Germany shall be dashed to pieces and reduced to small states. With that the Reich will lose its political power and with it the possibility of securing for the German people their living rights on this earth.

For this reason all my peace overtures have been rejected and war was declared on us September 3rd of last year.

The German people has no hatred, no inimical feeling toward the English or French people.

It stands, however, before the question whether it will live or perish.

In a few weeks the brave troops of our armies have crushed the Polish opponent pushed forward by England and France, thereby eliminating danger from the east.

Thereupon England and France decide to attack Germany from the north.

From April 9th the German armed forces have nipped this attempt in the bud.

Says 'The Hour For You Has Come'

Now what we have seen for many months as a threatening danger for us has happened. England and France are attempting, by employment of a gigantic manoeuvre of distraction in southeast Europe, to thrust forward into the Ruhr district over Holland and Belgium.

Soldiers of the west front!

The hour for you has now come.

The fight beginning today decides the fate of the German nation for the next 1,000 years.

Do your duty now!

The German people, with its best wishes, is with you.

Adolf Hitler.

BALKANS SEE SELVES SPARED

Budapest, May 10—(By telephone to New York)—(AP)—The German invasion of Belgium and the Netherlands today was taken in Balkan capitals as a reprieve for Southeastern Europe.

The belief was expressed that Germany would be so occupied with extension of the western front that the southeast would be spared war, at least for the present.

AT THE BELLE

"Virginia City"

With Errol Flynn in the type of dashing role that had "Dodge City" breaking records, and Miriam Hopkins awarded the important leading role on the strength of her fine performance in "The Old Maid," Warner Bros.' "Virginia City" promises to be one of the Belle theatre's major attractions of the season, when it opens as the next attraction.

The background of the film is a page out of America's most gripping historical era, the West during the Civil War. The setting is the colorful, lawless "mushroom" mining town, Virginia City, during its rowdiest days. The theme recounts an authentic episode which Robert Buckner adeptly wove into the moving screen play. Michael Curtiz, one of Hollywood's most skillful directors, filmed the production.

As a Union Intelligence officer, Kerry Bradford, portrayed by Errol Flynn, is sent to the new Virginia City to track down a gold shipment intended for the Confederacy, sent by Southern sympathizers in Nevada. His romance with the Queen of Nevada's dance halls, Julia Haynes, Miss Hopkins' role, is short lived when the girl has him kidnapped and he learns she is a confederate spy.

Bradford is taken prisoner on the Southern gold caravan, led by a notorious guerilla, portrayed by Humphrey Bogart, it is Bradford who outwits the band and saves the caravan. He refuses to surrender the gold, claiming it belongs to the men who mined it. Held for court martial, it is news of the world's end that exonerates him in the eyes of the North, the South and Miss Julia Haynes.

The impressive supporting cast includes such seasoned players as Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Guinn "Big Boy" Williams and John Litel.

A funny Popeye cartoon, and the popular Belle British newsreel will be exhibited on the same program, on the week-end matinee a new chapter of "S.O.S. Coastguard" will be shown.

"Dr. Kildare's Strange Case"

"Dr. Kildare's Strange Case", fourth in the popular "Kildare" series, is now closing at the Belle. Again Lew Ayres, as young Dr. Jimmy Kildare, and Lionel Barrymore, as the great diagnostician, Dr. Leonard Gillespie, enact the leading roles. The story centres within a hospital, this time young Dr. Kildare attacking and winning a case of what was believed to be incurable insanity. The film tells of Ayres' dramatic battle to prove that his surgeon-friend did not perform a bungled brain operation. Players include Laraine Day, Shepperd Studwick, Samuel S. Hinds, Emma Dunn, Nat Pendleton, Walter Kingsford and Alma Kruger.

Love, Career Conflict

Love versus career. This age-old problem which women have faced so many times reappears in the theme of RKO radio's "Certain Call," announced as the companion feature with Barbara Read, Alan Mowbray and Helen Vinson are featured in this comedy drama about an aspiring girl-author.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Tropic Fury" "Timber Stampede"

Comedian Andy Devine and popular Richard Arlen, head the excellent cast seen in the exciting adventure drama "Tropic Fury" which is now showing at the McCarthy theatre, along with the new George O'Brien western "Timber Stampede". The program also includes another new and thrilling chapter of "The Shadow" the screen's new sensation in entertainment.

"Slightly Honorable"

Rated one of the season's most amusing film stories, Walter Wanger's production "Slightly Honorable" with a cast headed by Pat O'Brien, Edward Arnold, Ruth Terry and Broderick Crawford, is due to open next at the McCarthy theatre directly after a two weeks' showing at Loews theatre, Toronto.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Range War"

William Boyd, as the dauntless "Hopalong Cassidy," and Russell Hayden, as his old saddlemate, "Lucky," ride into action again in Clarence E. Mulford's "Range War," now showing at the Capitol to bring to justice a crooked landowner who is making trouble for ranchers building a railroad spur which will enable them to get their cattle to market without paying exorbitant tolls for crossing his property. "Hopalong," in order to discover who is stealing the railroad's payrolls and delaying the building of the railroad by dynamiting tracks, holds up the next stagecoach delivering a payroll himself. In turn, the outlaws hold up "Hopalong" and thus "Hopalong" is able to work from the "inside" to thwart the crooked landowner and his gang. Willard Robertson is cast as the crooked landowner, Betty Moran in a romantic role opposite Hayden, and slow-talking, harmonica-playing Britt Wood, known as "Speedy," is a new saddlemate for "Hopalong." Lesley Selander directed with Harry (Pop) Sherman, producing the picture for Paramount.

"Free, Blonde and 21."

The second hit on the same programme — "Free, Blonde and 21." Girls, girls and more girls—all on their own and all in a dither about love.

That's the pleasant situation that meets the eye in "Free, Blonde and 21."

Lynn Bari, Mary Beth Hughes, Katharine Aldridge and Helen Ericson are among the gorgeous new batch of guests at the Sherrington, swank metropolitan hotel for women, sharing their joys, troubles, stockings and lipsticks—but not their men, prominent among whom are Henry Wilcoxon, Robert Lowery and Alan Baxter.

That matchless comedienne, Joan Davis, supplies plenty of laughs as the hotel maid who loves taxi-driver Chick Chandler, and the pair help solve a murder mystery— that involves the leading lovelies and their boy friends.

Ricardo Cortez did a grand job of directing from an original screen play by Frances Hyland. Sol M. Wurtzel was executive producer.

The third chapter of the thrilling serial "The Phantom Creeps" with Bela Lugosi and a cartoon complete a well rounded bill.

IF IT'S ABOUT YOUR EYES . . . SEE McFEE

Perennials Aid Most Plans In Beautification of Home

Perennials are plants which grow year after year in the garden and are adapted to many uses. They may be planted in conjunction with shrubs and make a good edging for beds of these plants.

Some varieties are at their best in the water garden; others do well if naturalized in the wild garden; but the increasingly popular perennial border is where these plants are seen at their best, according to a bulletin issued by the Dominion Experimental Station at Harrow.

Alpine and rock garden plants are of course perennial in habit, but as many varieties suitable for this type of gardening will grow only under the special conditions provided in the rock garden ,they will not be treated in detail here.

Many perennials thrive quite well under adverse conditions, but if best results are to be obtained, their likes and dislikes must be studied and proper conditions provided. Feeding, cultivating, watering, and protection from extreme weather conditions must be attended to at the proper times, and anyone intending to plant a perennial bed or border might do well to consider how much time will be available, and plant accordingly.

This is not said to discourage extensive planting, but rather to encourage care of such planting as may be done; and the satisfaction which will surely result from the smaller original planting will lead to a more extensive program later.

If it is decided to plant the perennials in a border, it may be of any desired width, preferably from four to ten or more feet, and so situated that it may be extended in length as circumstances warrant. A background is a valuable asset, and may be provided either by a hedge, shrubs, or a vine-covered fence or wall.

Exposure is not so important, provided there is no heavy shade to the south, and usually the farther away the nearest trees are from the perennial border, the surer the plants will be of succeeding.

Plants set in rows with the tall plants at the back, followed by those of medium and dwarf height at the front give a very monotonous appearance to the border, and a much better effect is provided when the groups are made of different varieties and heights. It is not necessary to keep the tall plants to the back in this case. In fact, some of the tallest plants may be planted right at the front, provided they do not bloom at a similar period to smaller-growing varieties immediately behind them.

A great many perennials bloom in early spring, and although these are usually of low-growing habit, they may be planted in almost any situation in the border, as their flowering period is over in most cases before the tall plants are high enough to hide them. For those who are not very sure of their gardening ability, the iris, baby's breath, beebalm, phlox and speedwell will be found satisfactory. The above-mentioned plants are especially hardy, and, while many more could be included in the list, there are enough different varieties of the kinds mentioned to fill as large a perennial border as most people would care to pay for.

Gardening is More Enjoyable If Tools Are in Good Shape

Gardening is made much more enjoyable and the results are usually more satisfactory if one's tools are in good condition.

Each tool should have a definite place in the tool-shed, being hung on a nail or hook fixed next the roof. Under no circumstances should they be left out of doors, even in summer, for dew has a corroding effect on steel. After use, they should always be thoroughly cleaned before being put away.

At intervals, the steel parts should be rubbed with an oily rag. This is particularly important if any tool is going to be put out of action for any length of time. The wooden handles will also benefit from an occasional rub with the oil rag, which will preserve the wood and make the tools more pleasant to handle. Linseed oil is admirable for these purposes.

The spade should be kept sharp and free from rust. A file will go a long way towards making a knife-like edge, and the sharpening can be finished off on a grindstone if one is available. Much the same applies to the hoe, and in addition the angle of the cutting edge and the handle needs careful setting if backache is to be avoided.

The usefulness of a rake is increased if it has a long handle, while if this handle is made heavier than usual, more delicate raking will be possible. Garden shears can be sharpened with a file, care taken to keep the file at the same slope as that of the blade edges. Another way of sharpening this tool is to use a steel knitting needle, and move the blades as though one were trying to cut the needle.

Remember that the nut which keeps the blades together must be oiled often, and kept screwed up to the most satisfactory degree of tightness. If this nut has a tendency to work loose, a second one should be put on the same bolt, when the two nuts will lock together.

Roller, mower, and barrow should be oiled or greased at regular intervals, and the spanner run over the nuts and bolts occasionally. All adjustments must be kept just ight. A little oil now and then on the rubber piston of the syringe is advisable. The watering-can should always be stored upside down to prevent odd drops of water starting rust on the bottom of the can.

GIVEN MONTH FOR WILFUL DAMAGE

Magistrate Lloyd Warns Sentence Will be Stiffer if Offence is Repeated

"This practice of the malicious destruction of property is becoming more of a problem in this community and has reached the stage where it is becoming beyond the control of the authorities. Therefore I am giving full warning here and now that any repetition of the destruction of property that is brought into this court will be most severely dealt with," warned His Worship Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in yesterday's session of County Police Court held at Tweed when two persons appeared on charges of the wilful damage of property.

Sanford Johnson, Tweed, was given one month in the common jail after being convicted of causing wilful damage to windows in the Presbyterian Church in that village. Johnson was also convicted of breaking street electric light bulbs, which brought about a concurrent sentence with that of the former charge.

A juvenile accomplice of Johnson's was bound over to keep the peace after being convicted of the same two charges. "I hope this will be a lesson to you. People can't go around throwing stones and generally damaging property, you must realize," Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., added in warning.

Charles Henderson appeared in the same court charged with operating a motor vehicle during the time when his personal driver's permit was under suspension, as ordered by the Highway Department. Henderson was convicted as charged and fined $20. and costs.

Several other minor cases concluded the proceedings.

Canadian Wartime Fliers

Wing Commander T. A. Lawrence Director of Plans and Operations, R.C.A.F.

By The Canadian Press

Canada's northeastern gateway, Hudson Strait, is an open book to Wing Commander Thomas A. Lawrence, director of plans and operations for the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Lawrence is the man responsible for planning Canada's home air defences. He spent 14 months at the head of an air epedition surveying Hudson Strait in preparation for the opening of regular navigation during the summer into Hudson Bay.

So in the event of enemy raiders attempting to strike at central Canada from ships which enter through Hudson Strait Wing Commander Lawrence will know how to deal with the menace.

He regards his service in the north as the highlight in his flying career and would like nothing better than to spend another winter in the wide open spaces and bracing atmosphere of the north. That opportunity is not likely to come until war clouds roll away and he is in common with other senior air officers released from the duties which tie them to office desks.

"Tommy" Lawrence, as he is known to old-timers in the air force, learned his flying in the latter part of the First Great War when he transferred to the air force from the infantry with which he saw front line service. He got his wings in the last few months of the war and flew on the western front when the Germans were in full retreat under the final smashing blows of the allied armies.

A native of Barrie, Ont., he enlisted in the ranks in 1914, went overseas with the 76th Battalion and went to France with the 4th Battalion. He was in the thick of the fighting at Ypres and on the Somme in 1917.

His brief experience in war flying settled his course for life and on returning to Canada he joined the staff of the Air Board, the first civil aviation authority established in Canada. When the Royal Canadian Air Force was established he transferred to it with a commission and so is one of the chartered members of the force.

Peace-time duties with the force took him to all parts of Canada on every type of flying assignment and to the air ministry in London where he served for three years as liaison to Canada in 1935 to assume command of the school of army co-operation at Trenton, Ont., and when war loomed in 1938 at the time of the Munich crisis he led a squadron to the Atlantic coast for defence duties.

Adventures in Peace

The Hudson Strait Expedition came in 1927 when Lawrence headed a party of 40 whose duty was to study ice, weather and general navigation conditions in the northern stretch of water which leads from the Atlantic Ocean into Hudson Bay.

From three bases members of the party flew over the whole area under all weather conditions and at all seasons of the year and covered a good part of the coast-line by dog-team. On each flight and each ground journey members of the party were accompanied by Eskimos and Lawrence found the natives of the north took readily to flying.

Not a man was lost in the 14-month survey and only two aircraft out of seven taken in were lost. The most anxious time was when one officer was lost for 14 days. He made a forced landing on an ice-floe 40 miles out in the Atlantic. Fortunately the floe drifted towards the Labrador coast and the officer and his Eskimo companion were able to make shore.

They ran short of food but were able to kill a walrus, and, tattered and hungry, reached camp after an arduous walk while their comrades conducted a futile aerial search over the waters of the strait.

Wing Commander T. A. Lawrence, who was known as "Tommy" to his associates at the Trenton R.C.A.F base, was instrumental in garnering together one of the strongest hockey teams in the history of the Air Force. Playing at the Belleville Arena, "Tommy" Lawrence's R. C. A. F. "Flyers" won the intermediate "A" championship of the O. H. A. in 1937 and continued in the Allan Cup playdowns, to bring to Belleville first Allan Cup competition in the history of the Bay of Quinte area. A born leader of men, Wing Commander Lawrence whipped together a team, composed of players from all parts of the Dominion, that rose to hockey heights to win the 1937 intermediate "A" O. H. A. title. The team was finally eliminated by the strong Port Colborne "Sailors" in the Allan Cup play-

Latest War Bulletins Keenly Scanned by News Hungry Public

A more or less lethargic Belleville public accustomed to the ordinary mill-run of war news, awakened sharply today as the sensational story of the Nazi invasion of The Netherlands and Belgium flashed over the wires.

As early as five o'clock this morning when the teletype brought bulletin after bulletin telling of the invasion, editorial room telephones maintained a consistent ringing. People clamored for the latest developments and a bulletin-board writer was kept continuously busy posting the latest news as a large crowd gathered in front of the Ontario Intelligencer.

It was a crossroads of the life of the city and district that grouped anxiously about the boards. Carefully scrutinizing every wisp of news that was posted, they talked in low undertones one to another. The anxiety and eager appetite for news was a common bond, that drew total strangers into conversation.

Over-all clad farmers discussed the crisis with well-dressed business executives. Trim stenographers who usually give the bulletin boards scarcely more than a passing glance paused on their way to offices to scan the boards.

Want Instant Action

And while the comments at times were many and aried, the general consensus of opinion of the bulletin readers was to the effect, that instant action against the enemy should be launched.

"Blimey," a cockney returned soldier "muttered," right back again in the old stampin' grounds. Hazebrouk, Mons, I wonder 'ow Madeline is? Strike me pink, if I wouldn't like to be back over there again."

"The comedy and educational shorts are over" said another "the main feature is about to commence."

All morning and afternoon to the time of going to press, a transient crowd gathered about the boards eagerly awaiting fresh developments.

Crowd About Boards

From nearby offices and restaurants the news-hungry crowd at intervals. They crowded about the boards some reading the bulletins audibly, others quietly scanning the news with eager eyes.

Two old ladies, paused during their morning walk to read the news. "It's terrible," one said, "but there is nothing to be done but fight this terrible man with his own weapons."

Two returned soldiers, growled aloud. "I wish I was twenty years younger. I'd love to have another crack at those blasted Fritzies. I only hope the Allies finish the job properly this time, instead of leaving it half done as we did twenty-five years ago."

During the afternoon, telephones in the editorial rooms maintained a steady clamor as anxious residents sought the latest news.

Attempt to Scuttle Three German Ships Frustrated by Dutch

Willemstad, Netherlands West Indies, May 10 —(AP)—Attempts of the crews of three German vessels to burn or scuttle their ships here were frustrated today and one German who resisted Netherlands authorities was reported killed.

Soon after word was received that Germany and Holland were at war the Patricia and Alemania were set afire by their crews, but quick action by firefighters controlled the flames.

Sea cocks were opened by the crew on the Henry Horn but the authorities closed them. The vessel was left listing.

Other German vessels in the harbor were safe. German crews were picked up and sent to Bonaire.

Pope Pius "Shocked And Deeply Grieved" By Germany's Invasion

Vatican City, May 10.—(AP)— Pope Pius is "shocked and deeply grieved" by Germany's invasion of Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg, high Vatican quarters said today and L'Osservatore Romano strongly condemned the Nazi action, saying civilization would "sorrowfully" protest.

The reproof in the Vatican City newspaper was written by its editor-in-chief, Count De La Torre.

Challenging the German explanation for the invasion, the newspaper said "Belgium and Holland always have preserved their neutrality with scrupulous vigilance and vigorous loyalty."

Of Luxembourg, it said, "There never was any question."

"It is horrible," the newspaper said of the invasion of Belgium because "King Leopold is one of the most devoutedly Catholic of modern rulers."

British and French Again March With Belgian Defenders

French Troops Reach Mons, Famous in History as Scene of First Action of 'Old Contemptibles' in 1914 and of Reoccupation by Canadians in November, 1918

IN FAMILIAR SCENES

(By The Canadian Press)

Allied troops today were reported crossing the border into Belgium to stem a gathering tide of German invaders. Exact position and numbers of the British and French troops naturally could not be told.

Brussels reported early today that the Allies had crossed the frontier to help the Belgians and that French troops had reached Mons, scene of the British expeditionary corps first battle in August 1914, and of a dramatic reoccupation by Canadians in November, 1918.

Presumably the Allied troops were marching to battle through towns of northwestern France still marked by scars of the first Great War. This is the territory where the name "Canadian Corps" became immortal almost a quarter-century ago.

Only 10 days ago, Hon. Norman Rogers, Canadian Minister of Defence returned to London from a two-day trip to this area. One of his purposes was to see conditions under which Canadian troops might operate, but he said that the ultimate disposition of the Canadians would depend on developments and that "Canadian troops have always served where they could make the great contribution".

In January, Major General A. G. L. McNaughton, General Officer Commanding the 1st Canadian Division, met Viscount Gort, British Commander, for conferences in this historic territory.

NAZIS CLAIM SPY ACTIVITIES ARE UNCOVERED

Frick Charges Netherlands Collaborated With Britain in Espionage Against Germany Since 1914

Berlin, May 10—(AP)—The Nazi high command and Interior Minister Wilhelm Frick today claimed that startling espionage activities had been uncovered in the Reich. The announcement coincided with Germany's swoop into Belgium and The Netherlands.

The government made public purported documents which allegedly demonstrated that the low countries were already associates at arms and in spirit with the Allies.

Frick charged The Netherlands had maintained the closest collaboration with Britain in espionage activities against Germany since 1914.

Frick asserted these facts mould be brought out in the early trial of British Captains Richard Henry Stevens and Sigismund Payne Best who were seized by Gestapo agents on the Dutch side of The Netherlands-German border last Nov. 9 in connection with the Munich beer cellar explosion.

Frick asserted these facts would and Stevens would "unravel the dark plans of obscure homo-sexual and anti-social elements" to bring about a revolution in Germany, overthrow Hitler and make peace with Britain.

London Press Calls for More Vigorous Government Direction

(By Sam Robertson)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 10.—(CP Cable) — Behind the front pages that chronicled Germany's lightning strokes through the low countries in heavy type London evening newspapers issued an editorial call for more vigorous government direction.

The Evening News and The Star demanded that Prime Minister Chamberlain step aside and make way for a National Government, showing that the day's sensational events had not caused them to forget the Allied evacuation of Central Norway and the criticism of the government that followed.

The Evening Standard joined in the chorus with these words:—

"Germany has staked all on an immediate grapple with the Allies in every theatre of war. The blow is delivered when Britain, in effect, is without a government. Not a moments delay can be tolerated in settlement of that issue".

"Action Now"

In an editorial entitled "Action Now" The Star said:—

"There are men available who can bring their burning spirits to bear upon the situation. They are the kind of men who can act together —(David) Lloyd George and (Winston) Churchill have worked together before. The prime demand is for men of action".

The News called for a redoubling of British efforts and suggested this as a start:—

"Our political differences will be composed quickly and calmly and a real National Government will come into being under the leadership of the Prime Minister supported by all parties".

In calling for acceleration of the war effort the press underscored the seriousness of the latest developments. The Standard dramatically summed up the situation in this way:—

"It is a blow directed against the heart of France, and the jugular veins of England. The strike against Belgium foreshadows an attempt to follow once again the same blood-soaked trail blazed by a previous Germany army. The stroke against Holland aims, by seizure of the air bases to secure ground from which attacks may be delivered against our ports and our shipping, the long lines of commerce upon which the life of this nation depends. No shred of illusion is left. It is their life or ours".

Committee of Safety

The Standard called for "a committee of public safety".

"Either we fight back as even Britons have never fought before, or all our institutions, all the life that we love, will perish for generations from the earth.

"In such an hour institutional issues evaporate, and England demands only a committee of public safety which can ensure that the spirit of the people shall be matched by their power to deal blow for blow and inflict awful vengeance.

"As illusion ends, a genuine and superb confidence fills our soul. By our exertions we shall dictate that Great Britain still stands unconquerable when this beast is driven back to its lair and finished, robbed of all capacity to slay and destroy the lives of free men."

F. D. R. AGREES WITH WILHELMINA OF NETHERLANDS

President Stated He Was in Full Sympathy With Opinion Expressed

RECOUNTS PLEDGE

Washington, May 10—(AP)—President Roosevelt said today he saw no change with respect to the possibilities of the United States keeping out of the war.

At a Press conference he told reporters that there was not much he could say about the situation abroad now and that it spoke for itself.

"I think I can say personally," he declared, authorizing direct quotation, "I am in full sympathy with the very excellent statement that was given out, the proclamation by the Queen of The Netherlands, and let it go at that. It is worth reading."

(In her proclamation read to the Dutch people over the radio, the Queen addressed "A flaming protest against this unexampled violation of good faith and what is considered decent between civilized nations.")

With reference to possible effects of Germany's invasion of Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg on this country, the President asserted a great many things were being studied. He did not give details.

But in response to a question, he said that a German pledge, at the outbreak of the current war, not to bomb "open", unfortified towns was being considered in the light of reports of the bombing of such cities.

With regard to possible extension of the zone of dangerous waters around northern Europe from which American shipping is barred under the Neutrality Act, Mr. Roosevelt said that no change is contemplated in the status of the zone at the present time.

He had been asked whether it might be expanded to take in the Dutch West or East Indies.

At an earlier conference with key advisers on neutrality problems, the President said no conclusions were reached with reference to any immediate steps that might be taken.

London, Ont., May 10 (CP) — Ross Hill, 13-year-old public school pupil, died in hospital today as a result of injuries received Wednesday when he was accidentally struck on the head by a baseball bat in the hands of a girl pupil. Coroner P. J. Sweeney said no inquest will be held.

Nazi Attempt to Kidnap Holland's Queen Ends in Death for Perpetrators

New York, May 10 (CP). — Two squadrons of Nazi planes, loaded with soldiers, were said today by Edwin Hartrich, Amsterdam correspondent for the Columbia Broadcasting System, to have made a "daring attempt to capture Queen Wilhelmina", which apparently "has met with failure and sudden death for the perpetrators."

In a cable to the broadcasting system he said that sixteen Junkers and possibly more landed at the airport of Valkenburg, five miles from the Queen's summer villa at Ruydenhoek and about seven miles from her residence in the outskirts of The Hague.

Other contingents of "aerial kidnappers" the correspondent said, landed at Delft about four miles south of The Hague. The strategy was to cut off the city from the rest of the country, and take the government by storm.

The correspondent said he came upon a hot pitched battle on the outskirts of Valkenburg.

"Driving behind some military lorries on the Amsterdam-Hague road, our chauffeur was along with the lorries by a sudden burst of machine-gun fire," he stated. "Across the road in the ditches and at the bridge heads, Dutch soldiers were replying with short bursts aimed at a small group of farm houses.

In this battle, 10 of the 16 planes had been set on fire by the Dutch snipers, Hartrich said. Tracer bullets ripped through the aluminum fuselages, setting the gas tanks on fire.

Three Heinkel bombers methodically dumped their cargoes on the tiny battlefield below.

"In the Hague area, Messerschmitt planes were strafing the Dutch mobilized columns on the roads," he said. "Hundreds of soldiers were sent out as flying squadrons in high powered cars equipped with machine guns and automatic rifles. They are taking care of German parachutists and receive their orders from couriers in motor cars.

"And from what I saw this morning, this new type of aerial Blitzkrieg was being effectively handled by the mobile defence of the Dutch rolling around the countryside on wheels."

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

WAALHAVEN BASE TAKEN BY NAZIS

Despite Intense Fire of Dutch Batteries Enemy Landed Troops in Parachutes

Rotterdam, May 10 —(AP) — German troops occupied Waalhaven Airport here today after destroying the flying field and hangars in a heavy bombardment.

Despite the intense fire of anti-aircraft batteries enemy troops succeeded in landing by parachute from large transport planes. They overcame the Dutch soldiers there.

Germans also alighted on the Nieuwe Maas River in the centre of Rotterdam and occupied a big bridge over the river. They captured Maas Station.

Heavy fighting is now going on in Rotterdam. The Germans on the left bank of the Maas so far have been unable to cross because of the stubborn Dutch resistance.

Troops trying to advance along the left bank of the river from Waalhaven Airport also were said to have been checked.

Bob Feller Limits Yankees To Three Hits, None Coming Until One Out in Seventh

Win by Cleveland Puts World Champions Further in the Cellar

TEX CARLETON WINS

After Pitching No-Hitter, Hurler Wins Ten Inning Struggle From the Cubs

(By Judson Bailey)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Bob Feller is just the kind of a feller whos liable to keep rapping at that no-hit door long enough for it to open again.

You could count on the fingers of one hand all the pitchers who ever accomplished two no-hitters in a lifetime and the only one who ever got two in the same season was Johnny Vander Meer with his successive spectacles in 1938.

Yet Feller barely was sidetracked yesterday as he shutout New York Yankees for Cleveland Indians 4-0 on three hits. He didn't give up a safety until the seventh inning, when with one out Joe DiMaggio finally banged a single off shortstop Lou Boudreau's glove.

After that the tension was off and the 21-year-old Van Meter, IA, speedster let out a single in the eighth and another in the ninth.

Tex Carleton, making his first start since hurling a no-hitter April 30, locked in a dramatic duel with Larry French that went to 10 innings before the Brooklyn Dodgers broke through for a 4-1 victory over Chicago Cubs. The Dodgers bunched three in the 10th after two were out to win.

The horrible bottom in pitching was reached at Pittsburgh as the Pirates lost their ninth consecutive game by a 17-6 score to New York Giants. Frankie Freisch used five flingers. The Pirates made seven errors.

At St. Louis Rookie Ernie White came through with a good relief chore for the Cardinals, pitching seven scoreless innings as the Redbirds overpowered the Phillies 8-4.

Another creditable relief job was that of Herb Hash, the youngster who now has won three games for Boston Red Sox. The Detroit Tigers came from behind to tie their game at five all in the seventh and then Hash shut them out until the 10th when Johnny Peacock singled with the bases loaded for a 6-5 verdict.

Dutch Leonard, a 20-game winner of a year ago who has had a tough time getting started this spring triumphed over the hapless Chicago White Sox 8-4.

Bob Harris scattered seven hits and the Browns took advantage of the wildness of Johnny Babich, previously unbeat, to crack down on the Philadelphia Athletics 4-2.

It was a proposal that the youngster eagerly and promptly accepted. Little Miss Ettinger recently won the Pacific coast ice-skating championship at Oakland.

VANCOUVER LEAFS BEAT MONTREAL FOR SECOND TIME

Basketball Squad Has Practically Cinched the Senior Title of the Dominion

Montreal, May 10—(CP)—There can be no fault found with Donald (Dudie) Bloomfield that the 23-year-old Montreal Y.M.H.A. guard put on his star turn just at a time when Jim Bardsley of Vancouver decided he wanted top billing in the Dominion basketball final.

What happened was that the second game of the best-of-five series last night became a two-man show. But, while Bloomfield was a dazzling, fighting spearhead of the Montreal squad, his performance was relegated to a side ring by the attraction provided by Bardsley as he paced the Maple Leafs to victory.

A school teacher by trade, the 25-year-old forward at one time in the game matched the Y.M.H.A. basket for basket when the Vancouver team threatened to collapse before Montreal's sustained offensive. In all, he tallied 19 of the Leafs points in a 48-46 victory that left Vancouver needing only one more victory to take the series.

Perhaps even more heroic, however, because the cause was a losing one was the youthful Bloomfield, playing his first year in a Dominion final. He scored 18 points—only one less than Bardsley—and shone more brilliantly against the Maple Leafs, a classier and more experienced team than Montreal.

Girl Cadets.

This so-called new idea of girl cadets is not as new as you may imagine. Some of the older girls have been considering cadets for years. In 1932 there was one company attached to the boys' corps. We are now a regular battalion.

Each girl is supplying her own uniform. It consists of a navy skirt and white blouse or shirt. This is completed by a navy colored forage cap and navy ankle socks.

Our able trainers are Mr. Harcus and Mr. Laughlin. Already the corps shows advancement under their direction. They have appointed suitable officers. Some of these may be changed but at present they are as follows: Officer Commanding, Lt.-Col. B. Saunders; Second in Command, Major J. Archibald; Adjutant, Captain M. Cook; Reg'tl Sgt.-Major, Sgt.-Major M. Lickfold; Reg'tl Q.M.S., J. Timmerman; "A" Company Commander, Major D. Lazenby; Second in Command, Lt. B. Fenn; "B" Company Commander, Major J. Watson; Second in Command, Lt. G. Potash; "C" Company Commander, Major H. Walker; Second in Command, Lt. D. Wonnacott; "D" Company Commander, Major W. Soady; Second in Command, Lt. B. Leslie.—Contributed by the Adjutant.

On Wednesday morning prizes in connection with the Elevator were presented in assembly by Mr. Jury. Mr. Jury said that he heard people say the Elevator was better this year and they had tried to make it better.

Minnie Salz received first prize for sales, Margaret Ivers second and Mavis Mantle third. Albert Adamson received the prize for pen and ink sketches, Bruce Cronk for senior story and Lloyd Gladwell for junior prize story. The prize for the best poem was awarded to Tom Hyland and for the best essay to David Payne. The editor of the Elevator, Jack Zufelt, received the prize for the best cartoon.—A. M. B.

A Grain of Salt

Do not be too ready to believe the latest tales about supposed squabbles, dismissals, shots and ambushes among the gangsters who rule Germany. A grain of salt, please! We have heard all that before.

True, we have actually seen it before, too. And certainly we would not put it past the neurotic Hitler to plunge his partners into another blood bath.

Even so, the Gestapo grip upon Germany remains secure. And there are ersatz gangsters in reserve.

Germany is at war. In wartime the human sheep of the Fatherland will follow their home butchers; if only because they get poleaxed if they try to get away—London Daily Mirror.

Major Bowling League Honors Champions at Annual Banquet

Belleville Golf Wins High Honors With Joe Legault With High Average

OFFICERS ELECTED

Hailing their new champions, individually and collectively, the Major League of the Recreation Bowling Alleys held their annual banquet, presentation of prizes and election of officers at the Quinte Cafe last evening at which time Lester Shiels, veteran Belleville bowler who was unable to participate in league competition last season owing to injuries, was honoured by being elected President of the league for the ensuing year.

The Belleville Golf quintette of trundlers, who finished first in the league and winners of the post-season play-offs, were presented with individual cash prizes and the handsome Central Ontario bowling trophy. The championship team was composed of Joe Legault, captain, Pat Drumm, Harry Ridley, Evan Barlow, Art Little and Ted Hughes. In the regular league schedule Dave Tobe's Deacon Sportswear quintette was second, while in the league play-offs Meade Johnson finished in second position and both were recipient of the cash prizes, that went with these honours.

Individual Prizes

The individual prizes won during the league competition were:

High Average: Joe Legault, 232.

2nd. High Average: Gar Anderson, 229.

High Three-String: Tony Morrell, 942.

High Single: Harry Robinson, 367.

High Team Score: Deacons, 3754.

Secretary Art Little announced that the final standing of the six teams in the league schedule was: Belleville Golf, Deacon Sportswear, Corbys A.C., Meade Johnson, Tip Tops and Adam's Shoe.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

Hon. Pres.—Newton Wilbur.
President—Lester Shiels.
Vice.-Pres.—Jack Fitzpatrick.
Secretary—Walter Jackson.
Treasurer—Clarence Bryant.

The league executive will be composed of the captains of the respective teams entered in the league for the season of 1940-41.

President as Chairman

Retiring President N. Wilbur acted as chairman and toastmaster during the banquet. Considerable discussion was heard regarding the possibilities of changing the system of bowling during next season's competition relative to the matter of changing or "switching" alleys during league games.

"I believe each team should bowl one game on a different alley," suggested Harry Robinson.

"Would it not be better to alternate on two alleys after five frames had been played? Or better yet, perhaps play on alleys one and two alternately, when meeting one other team. This could be practiced on alleys three and four and five and six by other teams playing league games and then the bowlers would not have to walk so far from alley to alley," suggested Gar Anderson and President Wilbur.

The matter of "switching alleys" and any other new bowling rules and regulations was left in the hands of the incoming executive.

The banquet closed with the singing of "O Canada," following which the members of the local Major League retired to the Recreation Alleys where they enjoyed an evening's recreation of bowling as the guests of Leo Barrett, manager of the alleys.

BUFFALO BISONS GOING UNDER FULL STEAM NOW

Take Last Four in Row, League Leaders Being Latest Victims

LEAFS IN CELLAR

Syracuse Rallies in Ninth to Punch Home Two Runs and Win 6-5

Buffalo Bisons took a long time getting started, but they're travelling under full steam now.

After dropping nine of their first eleven games, the Bisons came back to take three straight from Syracuse and then knocked over the league leading Jersey City Giants 10-7 yesterday to make it four in a row.

Ollie Carnegie paced the herd's 12 hit attack on four Jersey hurlers, with a double and two singles, driving in three runs.

Rochester Red Wings jumped into a tie for second place with Baltimore by beating Newark 8-6 while the Orioles were losing 5-4 to Montreal Royals.

Eleven men went to bat for the Wings in the big fifth inning when they pushed over six runs, after trailing 4-2, to win their sixth game in their last seven starts. Frank Crespi was the batting hero for Rochester, with three hits in four times at bat.

A ninth-inning rally gave Syracuse Chiefs a 6-5 victory over Toronto Leafs, putting them in seventh place and dropping the Leafs into the cellar. At the end of seven innings Toronto was leading 1-0, but the Chiefs went on a rampage in their half of the eighth to score four runs, driving Jim Walkup, Toronto starter, from the mound.

The Leafs came back for four runs in the last half of the inning, but singles by Warren, Hinckle and Harig and an infield out, in first half of the ninth sent the tying and winning runs across for Syracuse.

PREAKNESS BIG, RAIN OR SHINE

Baltimore Agog Over Its Race May 11 With 40,000 Expected

Baltimore, Md., May 10—(CP)—Staid old Baltimore lets down its hair once a year and goes daffy over a horse race—the Preakness Stakes. This is Maryland's proudest, oldest, richest race — dating back to 1873, two years before the Kentucky Derby was run and 13 years later than the first "Queen's Plate" in Toronto.

The running of Preakness Saturday is expected to draw more than 40,000. Rain for the past two years has cut down attendance, but even so, more than 30,000 fans braved wet, chilly weather in 1939 to see W. L. Brann's Maryland-bred Challedon splash in ahead of five rivals, including the favored Johnstown.

Everybody who can goes to Pimlico on Preakness day — the rest listen to the race by radio in barrooms, pool halls, hotels, apartments and mansions. Bookies, who still operate against the law in Baltimore, do a land-office business with stay-at-homes.

The Preakness carries $50,000 in added money, put up by the Maryland Jockey Club. Horses are supposed to be nominated as yearlings and certain fees must be paid to keep them eligible. There is a special provision by which "supplementary entries"—horses not originally named—can be nominated at a fee of $1,500 by April 15.

The various eligibility fees, plus supplementary entry fees and the added money, made the Preakness worth a total of $71,345 last year. It is expected to gross close to $75,000 this year.

CALLING 'EM Between the Lines

with

Ken J. Colling

DID YOU KNOW THAT— Max Swanston, former Peterborough ball player and last head of the now only-a-fond-memory C.O.B.L. was a visitor in Belleville yesterday?......And "Swanie" just can't seem to understand the disinterest shown in Belleville towards baseball—"well Swanie, who can?"..... That 'Red' Scrutton, former Kingston starry outfielder, is now located in Peterboro'......and that there's no use of the Liftlock City scribe pretending ignorance, everyone knows a classy southpaw will turn up along the shores of the Otonabee most any day now...... and that most any old, or even young, lefthander can seemingly beat the Yankees nowadays? ...... That 38 three-year-olds are eligible for the 81st running of the King's Plate next week?......that the post-entry favourites are G. M. Hendrick's Dark Comet and Probisher from the Parkwood Stables? ......but always remember Bimelech......Some of the boys collected heavy sugar on Honey Cloud the other day, but we were in the can.

There should be some real fun at the Hume Arena tonight when "The Ringer", a behooded gent of considerable avoirdupois, meets "The Masked Marvel", another masked gent who tips the beams well over the 200-pound mark. However, there is one angle which should prove satisfying to the paying customers, they'll at least see the features of one of the contestants. The main bout between these two heavies is to be a no-time limit bout, that is to say there must be a winner and also the loser must unmask, thereby giving the patrons of the game a peek at the vanquished man's mug. If the boys really get rough, (and apparently they do judging from the way they divided Referee Cliff Faux's trousers so neatly at the seat last week), there is no telling what may happen. As a matter of fact it wouldn't surprise us if the loser might finally unmask the winner, if only to appease his chagrin thus giving the fans double action and satisfaction.

Arch Ward, sports editor of the Chicago Tribune, writes: "Gabby Hartnett, unlike most ball players, never has chewed tobacco, but he wants to learn at this late date. This item should not be construed as a rap at the gum business, of course......Connie Mack, who probably has watched more pitchers come and go than any other man in baseball, nominates Christy Mathewson as the greatest....The $25,000 home Bob Feller is building for his parents near Van Meter, will have seven rooms and three baths and will be of modified English design......Benny McCoy deposited that $45,000 bonus he got from the Athletics in five banks, $9,000 in each.

Jimmy Powers of the New York Daily News observes: "We still believe fans are entitled to know at once whether or not a man has reached first on a hit or an error. Radio fans are instantly given this information, but patrons inside the park are not. Leo Durocher is against this idea because, he says, it will cause some hitters to brood, if they think they have been deprived of a hit which has been ruled an error, and may fail to concentrate on their running and may be picked off base. Now comes Casey Stengel, who says: 'Nonsense. For every batter who reaches first only to find he has gotten there through an error, there is a disappointed fielder on the other team. Anyhow, at some of the fancy salaries certain prima donna players pull down, they can afford to have their feelings hurt once in a while."

Both the "oilers" and Corbys A. C. are bewailing the fact there are but themselves in common intermediate "A" O.A.S.A. competition in Belleville. Perhaps they do not realize that Belleville has a population of less than 15,000 souls, while other centres of twice the population boast of but three and four intermiate "A" clubs, so apparently Belleville isn't too far behind the general trend of softball. After all in the city league competition, the "lubricants" and the Barriage-led squad will have to look to their laurels when in competition with Point Anne before the summer is out. Out in Ivanhoe the boys have garnered together a strong softball nine for O.A.S.A. competition, but can find no league in which to play, so says playing-manager Rev. S. Delve. Then again while on the subject of "mushball", we hear the revival of girls' softball is already assured, but there will only be four teams permitted in the league during the first season of operation, which about takes care of that angle for the time being.

In their customary manner, that sees most everybody concerned eulogized and fraternized, the annual Major "A" bowling league, of the Recreation Alleys, wound up their current season with the conventional banquet, election of officers and presentation of prizes. The league welcomed back Lester Shiels, who was unable to bowl last season owing to injuries, by electing "Les" to the position of President of the league for the season of 1940-41. Individual prizes were given out by retiring President Newt Wilbur while the league champion Belleville Golf quintette came in for their share of honors once again. That perennial "maple knocker", Joe Legault, was again in the moneyed ranks as the winner of the high average. Incidentally the local major bowling league is thinking seriously of changing their manner of play by "switching alleys" during league games. This method of bowling is practiced elsewhere and tends to keep the boys "out of the groove."

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and I said, Miss Kitty was telling us in school today about men being so cruel to nature.

Ladies too, sometimes, pop said. Ladies have been known to paint the most beautiful faces right out of the picture, he said, and I said, Well what Miss Kitty was talking about was trees. She said men chop down the most beautiful forrests just for their own selfishness, I said.

I'm afraid that's true, pop said. Men's ambitions have always left destruction in their wake. A great dictator may have a hart of gold and a pocket full of lollypops, but it's very difficult for him to go down into history in a big way without putting an undue strain on cemeterries and hospitals, and a man cant make himself a king in the lumber industry and still leave the trees looking pretty, he said, and I said. Well supposing you could make a fortune in the lumber business and never hurt a single tree, what then?

Then you could really take a bow, pop said. It sounds like a noble gole but it seems to have some impractical aspects, he said, and I said, Well why, pop, I mean I have an idea. Think of all the matches that only have time to burn about an 8th of an inch before they get blew out. So all you'd have to do would be to give people boxes to throw their match sticks in, and they'd proberly be glad to do it free of charge, especially ladies in kitchins just for tidyness, and then you'd drive around with a truck and collect the boxes, and then all you'd have to do would be to invest some way to press the match sticks together to make big logs, I said.

All I can say is, I've heard worse ideas, pop said

Not saying he hadn't heard better.

Why The Weather?

Protection from lightning! Where a thunderstorm is occurring there is no particular spot entirely free from danger of being hit by lightning. The safest place is one which, if hit, least harm will result. This is one entirely surrounded by metal, either solid or a network (as a steel frame building), or in an underground chamber. The next best is a building protected by lightning rods, which is better than being in the open or under trees. In an ordinary dwelling, the best place is in the middle of an inner room, provided one does not stand or sit under a lighting fixture. The more dangerous places in a house are near masses of metal, such as stoves, radiators, downspouts and screen doors.

DUCE APPLAUDS STATEMENT MADE IN THE SENATE

Admiral Cavagnari Said "Disturbance of Italy's Shipping by Great Britain and France Must Change"

FIGHTING ADDRESS

Rome, May 11 (AP). — Premier Mussolini applauded today as the Italian Senate was told that the "disturbance" of Italy's shipping by Great Britain and France "must change".

The statement was made by Admiral Domenico Cavagnari, Under-Secretary of the Navy.

Cavagnari's declaration that "only the possession of force can modify a situation which is contrary to one's own interest" caused Mussolini to nod in approval.

"Serious disturbance to international sea traffic caused by French-British control is felt particularly by nations bordering on the Mediterranean," Cavagnari said, "and first of all by Italy, because of her geographic, strategic and economic situation.

"This must necessarily change because it is contrary to natural rights."

The admiral's reference to the Allied blockade of Germany, which has been tying up Italian imports of cotton, oil and other raw materials, was made in a discussion of the navy budget.

Cavagnari claimed he had little faith in figures of naval losses announced either by the Allies or Germany. He expressed the conviction that "after the damagd ships are repaired there will not be much change in the ratio of strength between the two opposing navies."

The Under-Secretary said airplanes had met with considerable success in attacks on unarmed merchant craft, but had not proved effective against war vessels.

"We have learned reliably that experienced pilots, both German and Allied, have been recently affirmed and confirmed the great difficulty of striking a warship

Vast Struggle for Air Supremacy Developing Over Belgian Terrain

By WILLIAM McGAFFIN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Paris, May 11 (CP).—Germany's first large-scale drive of the war against France's Maginot Line was launched yesterday in concert with the invasion of the low countries, French military sources said today.

The Germans threw one division —between 12,000 and 15,000 men— against the French in an unsuccessful attack east of Luxembourg.

While French authorities termed the battle the "first great attack of the war", the high command contented itself with an announcement that the French had maintained their positions.

Intended To Keep French Busy.

The attack, launched as a vast struggle began in Belgium and The Netherlands for air supremacy and advantages on land, apparently was intended to keep the French forces busy on their own heavily-fortified Maginot Line and thus hamper the shifting of forces into the invaded low countries.

The general staff reported fighting continued today, French troops moving into a "spirited" battle with German infantry in two sectors.

When the Nazi division attacked itself east of the tiny Grand Duchy.

No 'Mystic Immunity' Safeguards Western Hemisphere Says Roosevelt

Washington, May 11—(AP)—Declaring that continued aggression "challanges American civilization," President Roosevelt said last night that no "mystic immunity" safeguards the western hemisphere in a world of modern conquerors.

Speaking at the close of a day which saw the tide of the war sweep over the low countries, the President reaffirmed his belief that the 21 American Republics stood for peace. However, he said, the new world now faces an immediate issue. "Can we," he asked gravely, "continue our peaceful construction if all the other continents in all the world embrace by preference or by compulsion a wholly different principle of life?"

"No," he replied to his own question. "I think not."

The occasion for the President's address was the eighth Pan-American Scientific Congress. The speech he delivered had been drafted only a few hours earlier to replace one which went into the scrap basket after the lightning German invasion of fresh frontiers.

The new Nazkrieg dominated not only the President's activities, but most government agencies as well. Among the numerous manifestations were:

1. Announcement of a Red Cross drive to raise $10,000,000 to succor war victims. The President urged contributions by all Americans who sympathized with the unfortunate people.

2. A mounting wave of bi-partisan sentiment in Congress for a thorough resurvey of national defence needs. There were indications that both army and navy would seek additional appropriations.

3. Suggestions that Congress be kept in continuous session because of the critical international situation.

4. Discussions of intensifying the neutrality patrol to forestall any forays by Nazi warship or submarine raiders on the Dutch possessions in the West Indies or South America, which lie in the Pan-American neutrality zone.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

SEASON LATER THAN USUAL FOR ASPARAGUS

Despite the lateness of the current seeding and planting season, the appearance of new asparagus on the city market today was made at a normal time, vendors said.

The last year, the vegetable which appeared for sale on April 30th., was anywhere from eight to twelve days ahead of its usual appearance due to the sudden arrival of a few days of exceptionally warm weather which coaxed the asparagus from the ground practically overnight.

Asparagus beds, especially those of any size, have wintered well, according to growers and with the weather in favor, the crop this year should compare favorably with that of former ones.

FIREMEN RESCUE CAT FROM TREE

Rescuing a cat from the top limbs of a high maple tree on Dunbar Street was the only activity by the local firemen yesterday. The cat had been chased up the tree by an over-ambitious dog and was too scared to try to make its way down again.

MAY SOON START AIRPORT AT BATH

According to a Napanee report, it is expected that the site of the proposed airport situated on Highway No. 33 a few miles west of the village of Bath in the Township of South Fredericksburg will be the scene of much activity within a short time. Several months ago thirteen farms were surveyed and options taken. The options on these 13 farms, comprising 1,500 acres, run out the end of May and it is expected that operations will commence about the first of June.

It is not known whether the landing field will be of grass or concrete, but it was stated that one large hangar will be erected along with a number of quarters. The airport is one of the many to be constructed through the British Commonwealth Air Training Scheme.

FLOCKS OF SHEEP WORRIED BY FOXES

Flocks of sheep in the Point Traverse vicinity in Prince Edward County are being worried by foxes is the report of farmers from that district.

These crafty animals enter flocks of sheep during broad daylight and farmers are taking precautions as it is known that small lambs are easy prey to these stealthy creatures. The remains of young lambs have been found in the foxe's lair as it is known that young lambs have been carried from the flocks to the fox dens. Farmers' shotguns have failed to rout these bold foxes from the flocks.

MEMBER OF CRUISER HOME ON LEAVE

One of the few Belleville boys wearing the uniform of the Royal Canadian Navy, Jack Jackson, son of W. S. Jackson of Belleville, is home visiting his parents on a 21-day leave from his ship, which has been stationed at Halifax. Jack is a proud member of the crew of the H.M.C.S. Assiniboine, the new Canadian Flotilla Leader, which recently assisted in the capture of the German merchantman, "Hanover" in the Carribean Sea and afterwards towed her into harbour. Dressed in the snappy trim-fitting uniform of the sailor, Jack's appearance fairly shouts the efficiency of the Canadian Navy. He has been with the Navy for about twelve months.

PAYS $10 FINE FOR OVERLOADING TRUCK

One of the first cases of its kind to be prosecuted in district police court this Spring saw Charles Conger, Napanee trucker, fined $10 and costs for overloading his truck. The case was heard in Napanee police court before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., yesterday.

It was alleged that Conger's truck was licensed to carry 1,700 pounds, whereas he carried over 10,000 pounds, which included the weight of the truck, when apprehended on the highway. Highway police have been instructed to prosecute all offenders who violate the H.T.A. pertaining to overloading, Magistrate Butler warned yesterday.

TRANSIENTS ARRESTED

Two transients were arrested in Belleville on charges of intoxication last night. Today the pair appeared before H. B. Wilson, Justice of the Peace, and were remanded in custody to appear for trial on Monday. Sidney Wynn, who told police he was a native of Smith's Falls and a painter by trade, was taken into custody in a local restaurant, where it is alleged he was drunk and acting in a disorderly manner, namely, causing a general disturbance. The other man gave his name as William Ryan, and no address.

Otherwise activities were quiet and serene in and around local police circles, no other arrests being reported. Only six transients sought shelter at the police station last night.

The Belleville Players Give Exceptionally Fine Performance In the Broadway Hit 'Stage Door'

Members of the Cast Play Their Parts With Deftness and Ease of Professionals — Great Credit Due to Director Alex Cann and His Assistants

STAGE EFFECTS GOOD

Under the auspices of the Belleville branch of the Red Cross Society The Belleville Players presenting "Stage Door" last evening in the Collegiate Auditorium achieved a distinct triumph in the city's history of amateur dramatics. The Belleville Players brought together the leading theatrical talent of the community and, under the expert direction of Alex Cann, they gave of their finest, in a play that was a Broadway hit a few seasons ago and a highly successful offering in its screen adaption, more recently.

The entire production, last evening, had a professional air. The stage settings were remarkably good, the effect of New York's dazzling electric signs and midnight traffic noises in the bedroom scene in the first act being accomplished with masterly skill. Against the background of the Footlights Club, so realistically created by the "behind the scenes" staff, the action of the play moved briskly and smoothly revealing the life of young girls coming to New York with rosy dreams of great Broadway careers. A cross section of all types of dramatic aspirants was revealed by "Stage Door" and the young ladies taking part last evening were cast with perfect discernment by the director.

Those who have seen "Stage Door" as a movie, found in the original play an entirely new plot, surprisingly different from the motion picture story. The play, for all its brilliant repartee which was given its full value by last evening's cast to the uproarious delight of the audience, shows the struggle of the sincere actress to develop her art, as it should be done, in the theatre, against the allure of Hollywood where in too many cases the mediocre flourish and the really talented lose their dramatic ideals in the land of plenty.

The "sincere actress" was portrayed by Miss Joan Maraskas, who played with an intensity of feeling and a deep understanding the part of Terry Randall who refused to be conquered by disappointment and poverty in her steadfast purpose of becoming a great actress. The challenge of Hollywood where a contract and fame awaited her was met with the scorn of one to whom theatre is life. In the end Terry was rewarded with her big chance, worth all the discouragement and privation she had undergone.

But Terry was only one of the eighteen would-be actresses one met at the Footlights Club, into whose intimate and Bohemian atmosphere visitors presented themselves at their own risk. They were apt to encounter the biting witticisms of Judy Canfield played last evening by Miss Mary Forster, who departed from her usual roles to present this, ultra-sophisticated character and to put it over with complete success. Beneath Judy's brittle attitude there was her devotion to Terry, her only soft spot. The outstanding comedy part of the play, Judith was splendidly presented. Miss Jean Stobie added another to her successes on the amateur stage with her convincing portrayal of Jean Maitland to whom the call of Hollywood was a thrilling and welcomed invitation to leave the struggles of Broadway ambitions for the safe haven of a screen career. Her return to the Footlights Club as a great star was splendidly done.

The part of the girl whom Broadway defeated was taken by Antonette Forster, who gave a skilful characterization of the gentle Kaye Hamilton. The guiding hand of the Footlights Club, Mrs. Orcutt, a former actress who liked to recall the days of her fame, for the benefit of every casual visitor was admirably characterized by Rose Lazier Payne.

Walter McVeity, who with Court Miller shared honors as the play's masculine lead, was outstanding as the youthful playwright fired with ambition and radical ideas of remaking Broadway. Sustained by Terry's devotion and loyalty he writes a promising play then breaks faith with the theatre and choses Hollywood's easier ways. Court Miller, with the sincerity and ease of manner that have characterized his work in amateur productions in the past, interpreted, convincingly, the part of David Kingsley, agent for a movie executive, but who has never lost his love for the theatre. It is David whose encouragement inspires Terry to continue trying in the face of defeat after defeat and it is he who makes possible her first real chance on the stage.

Chosen with care, the other members of the extensive cast gave performances in keeping with the high standard which the play maintained. The lovely girls, beautifully costumed, who reside at the Footlights Club, each a distinct personality, the staff and the visitors in the round of everyday life entertained and delighted the audience, which was unanimous in its praise of the high merit of the production.

To its director, Alex Cann, and to the stage staff, Perry de Montigny, stage designer; Doug McBride and Charles Ross, stage managers; Vernon Cameron, properties and Homer Thomas, business manager, goes special commendation for the success of "Stage Door", as well as to its cast which was as follows:

Olga Brandt (Bernice Saunders), Mattie, maid (Frances Lazier), Mary Harper, Big Mary (Helen Chant), Mary McCune, Little Mary (Shielah Burrows), Bernice Niemeyer (Elizabeth Pringle), Madeleine Vauclain (Muriel Hackman), Judith Canfield (Mary Forster), Ann Braddock (Peggy Doolittle), Kaye Hamilton (Antonette Forster), Linda Shaw (Marie Carscallen), Jean Maitland (Jean Stobie), Bobby Melrose (Marianne Adams), Louise Mitchell (Jean Archibald), Susan Paige (Helen May), Pat Devine (Micki Forster), Kendall Adams (Meribeth Stobie), Terry Randall (Joan Maraskas), Tony Gillette (Peggy Rogers), Ellen Fenwick (Miriam Drew), Mrs. Orcutt, elderly woman (Rose Lazier Payne), Frank, houseman (Douglas McBride)), Sam Hastings, young man (Alvin Faught), Jimmy Devereaux, young man (Gerald Morris), Fred Powell, business man (Harold Carruthers), Lou Milhauser, business man (Jacob Goodman), David Kingsley, in the late thirties (Court Miller), Keith Burgess, young man (Walter McVeity), Mrs. Shaw, middle aged woman (Mrs. Arthur May), Dr. Randall, middle aged man (Aircraftsman Denny), Larry Westcott, publicity man (Alex Cann), Billy, photographer (Ronald Herman), Adolph Greizl, middle aged man (Louis Maraskas).

Adding to the pleasure of the audience was the R.C.A.F. band of over thirty pieces which played between the scenes, giving a fine musical accompaniment to the performance.

MAN'S FACE SWELLS AFTER WASHING IN CREEK NEAR OSHAWA

With his face swollen until he could not see out of either eye, 33-year-old John Bowman stumbled into the police station this morning and informed police he had apparently been poisoned. He was immediately rushed to the Belleville General Hospital.

Bowman, who said his home was in Kingston, told Chief Kidd he had washed his face in the water of a creek south of Oshawa last night and apparently the water had been contaminated. The man's face was badly swollen this morning and to such an extent he could hardly see out of his eyes. The cause of his condition puzzled hospital authorities. Later in the day Bowman's family, who reside in Kingston, were notified of his plight.

Sunday is Red Cross Day Throughout British Empire

120th Anniversary of Birth of Florence Nightingale Falls on Sunday, May 12 —Famous Nurse Inspired Swiss Author to Found Red Cross

Red Cross Day will be observed throughout the British Empire on Sunday, May 12th, the 120th anniversary of the birthday of Florence Nightingale. This day was chosen because it was this famous nurse who gave Henri Dunant, Swiss author and philosopher, the inspiration for his efforts towards the founding of Red Cross.

It was Miss Nightingale's work among the wounded and suffering during the Crimean War, together with her report of the shocking inadequacy of care and supplies, that brought about a revolutionary change in the military medical services of the day.

Some years later, in 1863, Henri Dunant was responsible for the holding of a conference at Geneva at which representatives of 16 nations were present. There the fundamental bases which have governed Red Cross ever since were laid down.

Today Red Cross is a permanent organization of national societies, acting in the face of disaster during peace-time and war. By international agreement, it becomes an auxiliary of the Army Medical Corps in war-time and as such is the agent to which requests for supplies, materials and assistance are directed by the Corps which cares for the sick and wounded of the national forces.

The Canadian Red Cross Society went into full war-time strength as soon as hostilities began last September. It was in the sphere of international action even before Canada had declared a state of war, for when the Athenia was torpedoed, the Society cabled $10,000 to Britain for relief of the survivors and had hospital, nursing and medical facilities to meet the first arrivals.

HOW ONE DEAR OLD MOTHER SPENDS HER MOTHER'S DAY

A mother sat by her window,
Her hair was streaked with grey.
She had risen early that morning
And tidied things away.
For she was sure she'd be remembered.
What visions she had that day:
She thought of her sainted mother
So long gone to her rest.
So she plucked a lovely white flower in memory
And wore it upon her breast.
So she sat by the window and waited,
And thought surely someone would come
For no one had even written
And no remembrance had come.
So little would have pleased her,
A kind word, a kiss or two.
Or even a dandelion well chosen
And given by loved ones true.
She wondered what she had neglected
In the past to do for them.
That she should be so long forgotten,
By all her loved ones then.

So she wandered from window to window
While the tears rolled down her face
And she prayed to Christ for forgiveness
And to keep her faith from becoming weak.
And she might still think with kindness
Of those who had used her thus.
She wandered, and waited till midnight
And still no word had come.
And the dear little mother thus forgotten
At midnight went to her bed.
She had gotten up bravely that morning
Fearing this self-same dread.
For it had happened thus often
Still she had faith in her offspring,
And will likely again do thus.
If God in His mercy spares her another year,
Mother's Day again will likely be spent like this.

—Sel. B. Gleason.

DEMOCRACY PROVES SELF

Democracy has proven its vitality and flexibility in the British political development. In the interests of a National Government under Mr. Winston Churchill, Mr. Chamberlain has retired from the premiership and has agreed to serve in the cabinet. This itself is proof of the unanimity of feeling in Britain in the war effort.

The new Prime Minister, Winston Churchill, has had a very active life and has always been associated with public life. He is a man of great dynamic personality and possesses qualities which have been stressed as necessary these days.

He has served during both wars against Germany as First Lord of the Admiralty. He has been the subject of bitter attack from the German Nazis, for long before the war broke out, he foresaw the menace Hitlerism and Naziism would naturally become to the world. Earlier this week Mr. Chamberlain had announced that in Mr. Churchill was to be placed the direction of all the active services, the air, the army as well as the navy.

Mr. Chamberlain said in his speech last night: "During the period—almost exactly three years—I have been Prime Minister I have borne a heavy load of anxiety and responsibility. As long as I believed there was any chance of preserving peace honorably, I strove to take it. When the last hope vanished and war could no longer be avoided I strove equally hard to wage it with all my might.

"Perhaps you will remember that in my broadcast on Sept. 3 last year I said we should be fighting against evil things. My words have proven to be insufficient to describe the vileness of those who have now staged everything on the great battle just beginning. Perhaps it may be at least some relief to know that this battle might last for days and even weeks has ended the period of waiting and uncertainty.

"The hour has come when we are to be put to the test as the innocent people of Holland and Belgium and France are being put to the test already.

"You and I must rally behind our new leader and with our united strength and with unshakeable courage fight and work until this beast that has sprung out of his lair upon us has been finally disarmed and overthrown."

The honesty and candor of the noble heart that is in Neville Chamberlain did much for Britain and France both before and after Munich. There may be disputes about the Munich pact, but the world had over eleven months' grace in which to prepare. It was evident that at that time Hitler was determined on war over Czechoslovakia and it would seem that Mr. Chamberlain's tact and honesty disarmed Hitler for the time being and obtained a valuable respite in which to arm.

Mr. Chamberlain at Munich gave the world the demonstration of a great nation and empire, desirous of peace and honor among nations. Hitler's every action after Munich showed him the enemy of organized world society, but Chamberlain kept Hitler from war for nearly a year.

Mr. Chamberlain took over office when the clouds began to lower. Britain years before that time had in her sincere desire for peace tried to prove to the world the value of reduction of armaments and yet in that time Germany was plotting and breaking in spirit all the treaties to which she had bound herself and which were aimed at maintenance of peace. Mr. Chamberlain has borne a grave load in preparing for the crisis if it were to come.

No finer proof of democracy can be shown than in the present situation. The sincere love of country and honor among nations which the British leaders and people have demonstrated brings glory to their race. Democracy is not a state in which a leader exalts himself at the expense of all other men and women of the state but it provides the opportunity to the individual to serve unselfishly for the state which honors his freedom and individuality. How dark shows the Hitler sort of rule and government as compared with the love of country Britons show!

Mr. Chamberlain's words last night were the words one would expect of a noble Briton.

ALLIES MEET NAZI THRUST WITH CONFIDENCE

Britain, France and Norway, with their new Allies, the people of Belgium and the Netherlands, have met the Hitler thrust with not only calmness but also with marked success. That it is a time of trial and testing everyone believes, but it is just at such a time that the fine spirit of the democracies will show at their best. Adolf Hitler has used the war of suspense but that strategy cannot be carried on forever for even a dictator must come to the fact. His policy grows threadbare as his excuses for invasion of neutral nations show. Finally the wild beast of Naziism has to come out. Now it is out. And it is faced by heroic nations, with one idea in their minds—to crush the savage and anti-social principles which Hitler and the enemy represent.

The great company of the Allies have new courage with the demonstration of valor and courage which the Belgians and Netherlanders show. Hitler will have no walk-over. The Allies know he is to be doomed. His unsavory reputation for broken promises had long since made the neutrals alert and when he thrust they were ready with their defence. Great deeds are being performed on the new battlefnont in Holland and Belgium. Perhaps the greatest battles in history will be fought in this area and the soil of France, Holland and Belgium again have to endure the shock and the sacrifice and it may even be that the enemy will try to invade Britain, if so, there too the same story will be told of Allied confidence and courage.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

May 11th., 1920.

Last evening on the High School grounds a baseball match was played between teams representing Forms 1A and 1B. The result was a score of 8 to 7 in favor of Form 1A. The game was full of thrills. Arnott twirled a good game for 1B. Turner connected with a number of safe hits which came at exactly the right time. Boyle and Curry did the best work with the bat for 1A. The following composed the teams: Form 1A—Boyle, Beamish, Day, Hardwick, Blanchard, Curry, Harden and McIntosh. Form 1B—Barlow, Turner, Bowyer, Facer, Marsh, Simmons, Arnott, Crozier, and MacFarlance. The umpire was Leslie Allen and he gave entire satisfaction.

When the Duke and Duchess of York visited Belleville on Tuesday, Oct. 15th., 1901, they were given a royal welcome at the G. T. R. Station. Now, owing to the death of King Edward, the Duke and Duchess are King George and Queen Mary. The Royal Train and the Governor General's reached Belleville about 11.50 o'clock the night before and were placed on the Y, north of the station. A guard composed of the following local men remained on duty around the trains all night: J. Paterson, L. Soule, J. Miller, C. A. Gibson, H. Renfrew, W. Nelson, E. Spriggs, C. Boyle, T. Hyland, H. Smith and F. Lynn. The first train to come into the station shortly after nine o'clock was that carrying the Governor General. The band played and the crowd cheered. His Excellency stood upon the car platform and the following were presented: Mayor R. J. Graham and the aldermen present, Mr. W. B. Northrup, M.P., Mr. R. Mathison of the D. & D. Institute, Mrs. Northrup, and Mrs. Mathison. The train left after a stay of five minutes and the Royal Train followed. The welcome given the Duke and Duchess was indeed inspiring. The bands played and Mr. William Johnson, chairman of the Reception Committee, called for cheers which were given lustily. The following were presented to the Duke and Duchess: Mayor R. J. Graham, Ald. Bogart, Ald. Denmark, Ald. Harris. Mrs. Sewell, on behalf of the Daughters of the Empire, presented a magnificent bouquet to the Duchess. The 15th Regiment paraded about 100 men and the 49th Battalion had a good number on parade. Mr. R. Blaind led the singing of the national airs with his cornet under the direction of Prof. Hunt.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

The day of total war has come.

By smashing into Holland and Belgium the German army and air force throw the conflict wide open for the first time, hitherto German blows have been struck at points on which the Allies could deliver no direct counter. Great Britain and France were unable to meet the Germans in Poland.

In Denmark and Norway the element of surprise and distance made delivery of an effective counter stroke impossible. But in Holland and Belgium it is not only possible but essential for the Western Powers to throw their full strength into a giant effort to hold the enemy and push him back.

Despite the role played by Italy in creating a Mediterranean alarm by unofficial warlike gestures it is doubtful if the move into the Low Countries came as much of a surprise. The speedy ending of the Norwegian campaign may in part have been influenced by the anticipation of this larger and more menacing blow.

When Germany invaded Belgium in 1914 the primary and immediate aim was to crush France. This time the primary aim is the destruction of Great Britain. For this reason The Netherlands coast becomes desirable and the attack on Holland probably will be pushed with more vigor than that on Belgium.

British and French forces are hastening through Belgium to meet the invaders. The Germans, however, will try to seize as much as possible of The Netherlands coast before engaging the Allied armies in force. If they can drive through to the coast near the Belgian border they can cut off help for the Dutch forces except by sea.

The Norway Chapter

PARIS, May 9.

I INTERRUPT this series of travelogues, which I have continued to write regardless of the news, to comment on the debacle in Norway and the ensuing debate in the House of Commons.

The conduct of the war so far by the British and French falls far short of the energy and intelligence which the crisis demands, but the reasons lie deeper than the personalities of the British leaders, and the real difficulties are as much political as they are military.

To begin with, the democracies are neither militarily nor psychologically prepared even yet for the kind of war that Hitler wages. For seven years, under ruthless despotic dictatorship, the largest nation in Europe has used its entire wealth and an immense amount of the wealth of other nations, its money, man power, total industrial plant, total labor power, total press and world political and commercial connections for only one goal; a war the object of which is a complete redistribution of power.

For five of those seven years Britain, France and the United States refused to see what was going on in front of their eyes and would not believe what the dictators themselves told them. The United States still refuses to believe it. The President knows the truth; he knew it earlier than any of the democratic statesmen of the world. But the people of America do not know it. They watch with fascinated and horrified eyes the course which affairs take, and do not realize that the United States itself is dangerously unprepared in its mind, its economic organization and in its defenses to survive the twentieth century.

x x x

No changes of leadership or strategy on the part of the Allies can overcome two assets which the Nazis have; division in the ranks of its victims and the moral inhibitions of the Allies by which their hands and feet are tied in advance.

The Nazis have a single-minded goal: to change the social structure of the earth and make Nazi Germany first the arbiter of Europe, and from Europe which politically controls Africa and a large part of Asia, and economically controls South America—make her the arbiter of the world.

In our comfortable complacency our minds are unequal to the first necessary act of imagination namely, the realization that this is a possibility.

It is a possibility. Its realization demands action that is swift and ruthless beyond all previous experience of political and military action. If it is to succeed, it must succeed in months, not in years. If it fails, the failure is the most gigantic in history.

The decision, therefore, to undertake it is a decision of insane daring or of insane desperation. But once it has been taken, once desperate move after desperate move has pushed Hitler to where he is, he cannot retreat except to make the total retreat. Nor can he delay. The strain is too tremendous—the strain not only upon his country but upon himself. Every sign points to the immense drive for the fast decision.

The pressure on Mussolini is the most significant indication. Mussolini does not want to go into this war now, or did not want to two months ago. But if Mussolini is convinced that Hitler can win—and that means win in a matter of months—then he is going into war, for that is his only hope of survival and gain, for the immediate next lap of history anyhow.

x x x

The plan of Hitler allows for no concept of neutrality, any more than it allows, in ultimate victory, for any such thing as a small and independent nation. Therefore, when he violates the "neutrality" of Denmark and Norway and occupies those countries he is taking not only a temporary step for strategical reasons, but a permanent step for ideological reasons. As long as the Nazis are in power in Germany they will never get out of Denmark, even if and after they have won the war.

The existence of the small nations with any degree of autonomy depends upon victory for the Allies. In Hitler's dream of redistribution of Europe the small countries will be provinces of Germany, controlled financially, politically and economically from Berlin. Hitler will make his own United States of Europe, but with the most limited states' rights and without any Bill of Rights.

The fantastic thing about this war is that the governments of every neutral country know this. They are under no delusions whatsoever, but despite the fact that they know it and despite the fact that not a single one of them is able to defend itself and that there is no system of collective security under which any of them would certainly come to the help of his neighbor, despite the fact that the only powers which can and will defend them are Britain and France, they cling to a legal conception of impartiality which is utterly without reality.

x x x

Because Britain and France are fighting for the basic concept of Europe, which is diversity in unity, and are trying, in an anarchic and revolutionary world, to hold aloft the concept of law and of "a decent respect for the opinions of mankind," they are tied hand and foot. They must either crash the West Wall or do what Germany does—advance blow by blow, moving in upon the protagonist through neutral territory where the gains can be greatest with the least loss.

No matter what government had been in power in England and no matter how much energy and intelligence were at hand, it is very doubtful whether an attempt to come to the assistance of Norway from the sea could have succeeded in overcoming the first advantage, of ruthless, instantaneous, unwarned attack, aimed at possessing or demolishing the airdromes, particularly an attack aimed against a country undermined by treason and, for all modern purposes, utterly undefended and completely unprepared.

Germany, sitting in the centre, protected at her back, strikes out with her left hand today and with her right hand tomorrow and hopes that the Allies, running now to this corner of Europe and now to that in defense of "neutrals", will dissipate and divide their forces, while a series of humiliations weakens their internal morale. If she can persuade the French to blame the Mritish for this fiasco, and the British to blame the French for the next one, that is all to the good.

x x x

But Hitler cannot win the war by taking all the small countries of the whole of Europe, north and south and east and west. He them as bases for the real attack can only pocket them and use in the place that will bring the real decision.

If the German press, the pressure upon Mussolini and the choice of Norway indicate anything at all, they indicate that Hitler will perhaps make one more minor move before he strikes with all the force of the German machine upon the head and solar plexus of the British Empire—upon England herself and upon the eastern communications of the empire. He needs perhaps one more base for such a blow in the west. Holland would be ideal if Holland could be got without involving Belgium and thus France. And he needs the Italian fleet, air and land forces, the latter supplemented by his own in the Near East.

If there is a move in Holland, it is possible that we shall see some new version of the Trojan horse tactic. Holland, like all the other small states except one—namely, Switzerland—is very badly prepared to defend itself even for a short time.

When the history of this period is written it may be described as the era of neutrality to end neutrality. For the defense of neutrality presumes either countries strong enough to defend it themselves, or a world in which it is a generally accepted concept and not merely an idea held by one side of the struggle.

Sunday is Hospital Day; New Wing of the Belleville Hospital Open to the Public

Time of Inspection by the Public of the Local Institution is 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday

FINE EQUIPMENT

Sunday, May 12th is "Florence Nightingale Day". The world over will pause in memory to the gentle "Lady with the Lamp" whose sacrifice and self-denial in the dark days of the Crimean War, inaugurated one of the noblest professions in the world.

And in further tribute to that gallant figure, and to the hundreds of thousands of counterparts who write proudly behind their signatures the letters "R.N." the civilized world at least will pay homage to those structures, some magnificent edifices of brick and stone; others humble buildings located in the far-flung outposts of an Empire, the hospitals.

On Sunday, the portals of the hospitals of the nation will be thrown open to the gaze of a curious public. Some will enter with a feeling of awe; others with feelings of mixed fright, and gladness. There will be those with that "dislike of the smell of ether" complex, too but these like the greater majority of people who will experience a sense of thankfulness and gratitude, members of that large army of human beings to whom the hospitals of the country have proved a haven of relief, personal care, and cure, will leave the structures, with a feeling that here through the efforts of tireless workers is a place where the physical ills of humanity can be treated with the latest discoveries of modern science.

On Sunday, hundreds of people, residents of this city and the district served by the institution, will visit Belleville's fine hospital. They will be escorted by a competent group of usher-nurses through the halls and corridors of an institution that is enclosed in an aura of quiet efficiency; that commands instantly an involuntary attitude of perhaps awe, and respect, and that will leave the greater majority with the feeling that their hospital is not, after all, a place where gruff surgeons hurriedly cut one up, and turn one over to the care of grim-visaged nurses to get better at one's convenience but a homey institution where every act is one of kindness and mercy, and where personal comfort and a rapid return to health through the medium of gracious attention, and the most modern equipment that modern science has developed, is the first thought of kindly doctors, and a sympathetic staff.

The New Wing

But the cynosure of hundreds of eyes on Sunday will be the magnificent new wing of the hospital which will be opened to the public for the first time since the completion of the more important sections of this long-felt want, to not only hospital authorities, but the city and district they serve.

Nearly completed and equipped at a cost of over $200,000, the new addition consists of three storeys that house the last word in modern medical and other equipment designed for the alleviation of human suffering.

So important and so necessary to the hospitalization of residents of the surrounding district is this new wing, that its available beds were occupied for weeks before the actual completion of the building itself.

"Has the new wing lived up to expectations" Mr. Gordon Friesen, administrator of the hospital was asked by a group of newspaper men this week as he conducted them on a personal tour of the wing. "Is it being utilized fully?" "Yes, indeed!" he replied, "in fact we have a waiting list for the private rooms today." this in a tone that conveyed the impression that still more space could be used to care for the numbers who seek admittance to the modern hospital.

A trifle wide-eyed at times, perhaps at the sheer modernism of the equipment, the efficiency of trim nurses who went about their duties in the silent proficient manner of the profession, and the everyday life of the modern hospital that functioned about them even as they looked, the newspapermen were shown the wonders of medical science as exemplified in the building, furnishings and equipment that is the new wing.

Up-To-Date Nursery

In a noiseless electrically operated elevator they were whisked to the third floor of the building. Here they saw an up-to-date nursery, which will be completely equipped with all modern facilities for the care of young lives just arrived in the world. Down the spacious corridor, beautifully furnished is the waiting room where anxious 'papas' may rest and await the "news" numerical and otherwise of the newly-arrived family.

Here too are private rooms for maternity cases, each equipped with telephone and radio. The last word in electrical communications with rooms and various parts of the floor, a light and buzzer system that informs the nurse on duty practically instantaneously, the number of the room calling, has been installed. Delivery rooms, in pure spotless white, with gleaming instruments flashing under the rays of powerful lights; a nurses' work room and other phases necessary to this important part of hospitalization are here.

Modern Operating Rooms

On the second floor are the efficiently-equipped operating rooms, two for major operations and one for those of a minor nature, now available for the skilled surgeons of the city and district, and the cosmopolitan population of the community.

Looking in on one of these rooms, the newspapermen saw the last word in modern surgical equipment. Great super-lights that shed a brilliance like the brightest day, but yet caused no glare. Spotless walls and floors, neatly arranged pads and bandages, glass-encased instruments of every description immediately at hand. There is everything that money can do to provide mechanical aid for the sick and maimed.

Only a short time previously someone stricken with a major illness had left one of the rooms. The air was slightly redolent with the aroma of ether. Instruments that had been used lay in neat gleaming piles on a spotless table, ready for the giant sterilizer. Here had been enacted, not long before, another of those countless dramas that every day and almost very hour are witnessed in the hospital of the land. On the wall are installed "viewing boxes" where doctors and surgeons can "read" X-ray plates conveniently. A nurse's workroom where everything is prepared for the operations, is close.

Pathology Dept.

On the ground floor of the new wing, as soon as the spacious rooms are completed and equipped, is the new Department of Pathology. This will be under the skilled supervision of Dr. J. B. MacKay, of Western University, London, who will take over his duties as full-time pathologist on July 1st. From this lab, will go out daily the reports that will assist physicians in diagnosis of the hospital's 175 patients. Not all of these, of course, will require laboratory tests, but even if they did there is equipment and skilled workers to do the job. Nothing has been overlooked.

X-Ray Rooms

Down the hall on this floor are two x-ray rooms each equipped with most up-to-date equipment for this important part of hospital work. In one of the rooms is the new mobile machine which can be moved to the bedside of a patient and photographs taken with a minimum of discomfort. Importance of x-ray treatments is rapidly growing, and this machine facilitates to a marked degree the applications of such treatment especially to those who cannot be moved. In the other room is the stationary equipment, a mass of gleaming metal and huge bulbs. Three viewing plates have been installed on the walls where technicians and surgeons can ascertain what is disturbing the usual functioning of the body of the patient concerned.

Also on the same floor is the sterilizing room that houses a large autoclave, a gleaming container into which articles to be sterilized are passed through a large metal circular door that resembles a huge radio dial. Other sterilizers are also in evidence. A central supply room from which is issued all the linen used by the hospital is nearby. A physiotherapy department will be equipped here as soon as possible.

Spacious Kitchens

On this floor too, is one of the most important departments of the hospital, the kitchens and dining rooms. Here a well-drilled efficient staff of cooks and others, despite the handicap of working while construction is proceeding, prepare and serve five hundred meals daily.

The spacious kitchen equipped with a heat-insulated stove will be one of the finest in any institution in Eastern Canada, when completed. Adjoining is the well-lighted airy staff dining room, where immaculate linen and spotless napery show in vivid contrast to the colorful interior decorative scheme. An addition is now under construction which will accommodate the complete staff. Nearby is the serving room equipped with a cafeteria system. Steam tables and "cold" tables are here as is a modern refrigeration system.

One of the outstanding features connected with the new wing is a circular driveway now under construction at the former emergency entrance. Here emergency cases, accident patients etc can be rushed to operating rooms with a minimum of loss of time. A nurse will be on duty in a telephone-equipped room near the entrance at all times.

Rooms, Last Word in Comfort

Twenty-five private and nine semi-private rooms are included in the new structure, which are the last word in hospital accommodation.

In planning the furnishings of the new rooms, not only convenience and comfort was considered but what is of equal importance, the artistic and restful atmosphere that is so important to the patient during convalescence. The latest and most beautiful examples of the designers' art as applied to hospital furnishings were selected, with due value being given the charm of the completed picture. Thus one finds in the private rooms lovely backgrounds of soft, warm shades, colorful draperies adorning spacious windows finished with Venetian blinds, walnut modernistic furniture, and comfortable upholstered pieces that represent the last note in convenience as well as chic appearance. Well placed lights to abolish glare, special over-the-bed tables, and such additional evidences of thoughtfulness as hidden night lights to guide the nurse without rousing the patient, and outlets for telephone and radio complete the new hospital rooms. Each private room has a washroom of its own, while the de luxe rooms are also finished with a bath. Wide noiseless doors, and specially constructed floors that minimize sound are part of the construction plans of the rooms.

A cordial invitation to visit the new wing and the hospital proper is extended by Mr. Friesen and his staff to the general public. "Open House" will be held on Sunday from two o'clock to five p. m.

"We sincerely hope the general public will take advantage of this opportunity to visit its hospital and see for themselves what is actually being done for the population of the city and large district served by the institution," the administrator said.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

His Landlady Seems Too Attentive

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My son under 21 years of age is boarding with a spinster nearly 50. Some friends of mine suggested this boarding place, thinking my boy would be well taken care of, and the spinster would look out for him in a kind, motherly fashion. Alas, she has, far too kind and motherly.

She calls him pet names combs his hair, sits in his lap, and claims she is only mothering him.

At the same time she is turning him against his best friends, b. false accusations. I think she is not only jealous of them, but is afraid of their inflence, and is due an eye-opener from me if she doesn't stop her scheming ways.

Don't you think it would be better for him to move?

Worrying Mother.

To my way of thinking, combing a lodger's hair, especially if he's one-half the landlady's age, seems taking an unfair advantage of a boy of 21, though most boys would be immune to such middle-aged attentions. If you can get him to move peaceably don't you think it would be better to pass up what you call the "eye-opener?"

Wants to Write Expressive Letters

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Six months ago I fell in love with a girl, and I can't seem to get up enough courage to tell her so. Now I want to write her. What should I say and how? I would like her to believe I can use words with a lot of expression and that I am highly educated. I've had about two or three dates a week with her, and I think she cares for me. She is 20 and I am 24.

Jack.

I like your letter very much and that's why I'm using it. Men and women go to school, to colleges, to universities, and they travel extensively, all for the purpose of increasing their cultivation. They go through all kinds of changes in taste, beginning generally with what is called a "high falutin' style." But in the end they conclude, as do the really great writers and speakers of the world, that the best of all styles is found in simplest expressions. Read "Arabian Nights," the holy Bible, all of the classics, in proof of this statement of mine.

Whatever your style, preserve in it, by all means, that simple, sincere personality that I find so charming in your letter.

Sometimes He Just Holds Her Close

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been going with a young man of 23 for about ten months, and in all this time he has never said anything about love. Sometimes when we are alone he will hold me close to him without saying a word. I wonder sometimes if there isn't someone else he is bound to in some way. I love him so much.

I believe he thinks a great deal of me, but doesn't want to admit it. Is there any way I can make him love me? He is a fine young man and any girl would be proud to have him for a husband.

Jane.

It seems to me that you're making pretty fair progress with this young man, and if you don't try to "rush" him, you're likely to make even more. Very often boys are slower about falling in love than girls and they make haste more slowly in the matter of being demonstrative. A little patience on the part of a girl has kept many a likely lover from straying.

He's Being Sent to the Philippines

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I thought ours was a complete romance. We met, fell desperately in love, and planned to be married. But now he has been transferred to a new post in the Philippines and will have to stay two years. It isn't possible for me to follow him, so we cannot be married until he comes back, and it seems so long.

He is four years older than I am, and I am 20 years old. Do you think that's about the right difference? Would you advise me to wait for him?

M. R.

The fact that you raise the question of waiting for him makes me doubt if you really love this young man. If you cared enough I don't believe you'd have any misgivings, especially with this period of separation confronting you.

Why don't you just remain good friends and see how you feel when he comes home? Meantime, don't you think it would be wiser for both of you to be free?

'Early Bird' Habits Not for Your Baby

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

AS THE DAYS grow longer babies and young children want to arise earlier. But it is not well for babies and young children to get up with the birds. Consider the sleep they lose when they do and sleep their mothers also lose.

Regardless of the season, many babies and young children don't sleep nearly long enough in the morning. Some young children, especially on the farm, get up when their parents do—at four or five or six—and stay up till their parents go to bed. Such need not happen. It won't if the parents make a sensible plan and carry this plan through.

Follow Program

You say it can't be done, except with a few children? Yes, it can. It was done with our children and it was done with many other children I have studied. The cost in pain to the parent and child to accomplish it is about nothing. The gain to both parent and child in comfort, health and general welfare is ten thousand-fold, perhaps.

Decided on a desirable hour for the tot to get up in the morning. Set the alarm clock for that time. When the clock rings go for the child, or if he is old enough let him get up and dress alone. If he awakens earlier let that be his privilege, but he must not stand in the crib or get out of his cot till the designated time. If he does, give him pain without exception—a good smacking, preferably. Don't tell him to go back to sleep, merely that he must not get up. If you hold yourself literally to this program, he will find the world so drab and unattractive that he will after a few mornings, just fall back to sleep. But if you are inconsistent, don't hold yourself rigidly to the clock, or if in any way you create the slightest doubt in his mind about the program, he will hold out indefinitely—beg, whine, cry and create all sorts of disturbances.

They don't expect him to sleep later on Sundays or holidays than any other day. He should rise at exactly the same hour the year round. Continue with this program indefinitely after the child enters school. As he nears adolescence, even earlier, he may want to sleep longer than his school program will allow.

For His Welfare

Some parents, thinking only of their own comfort and welfare, will allow the child to get up and play quietly with his toys whenever he happens to awaken. It's their child, of course, but if they are considering his health and welfare, they probably will prefer to train him to sleep until a regular reasonable hour in the morning. They should remember that it is not only the hour when a child goes to bed that determines how much he sleeps, but also the time when he awakens in the morning. They should realize, moreover, that the child who chooses least sleep is the very child who needs most of it, being so excitable and high-strung.

Solving Parent Problems

Q—Whom do you consider most responsible for the citizenship or crime of any community?

A.—In the long run, the parents in the upper 20 per cent of education and family background. Their children tend to serve as models in conduct for the children and youth of the whole community.

AT THE McCARTHY

"SLIGHTLY HONORABLE"

Rated one of the season's most sophisticated and amusing film stories of scandal in high places, Walter Wanger's "Slightly Honorable", with a cast headed by Pat O'Brien, Edward Arnold, Ruth Terry and Broderick Crawford, will open next at the McCarthy Theatre thru United Artists release. It was directed by Tay Garnett.

This is a picture that strikes along two entertainment fronts, coupling a strong dramatic plot with a smart comedy theme, and scoring successfully in both departments. Cast on the Wanger theory of "the best available players for even the smallest roles," the film features a lineup of supporting talent that includes Alan Dinehart, Claire Dodd, Phyllis Brooks, Janet Beecher, Bernard Nedell, Douglas Dumbrille, Eve Arden, Douglas Fowley John Sheehan and many others.

It introduces a new personality to local audiences Ruth Terry, the "Little Cupcake" of Hollywood. Miss Terry is the 18-year-old actress Wanger pulled out of nowhere and placed in the leading role opposite Pat O'Brien. Although this is her first major screen role, advance reports claim the Irish miss handles her assignment like a veteran, and more than holds her own in the face of real acting competition. Ruth is cast as Ann Seymour, a vivacious and lively night club entertainer, who adopts Pat O'Brien as "her man" when he rescues her from a man-handling admirer.

As John Webb, lawyer and suave man-about-town, Pat O'Brien is seen in a decidedly different type of role. His performance is complemented with that of Broderick Crawford, who plays Rus Sampson, Webb's law partner and pal.

"Slightly Honorable" shows how John Webb tackles a man-sized job when he attempts to spotlight a society scandal in his state—a scandal that involves thousands of dollars and many glittering personalities in high society.

This is a dangerous assignment because it means Webb must battle the powerful political machine of Vincent Cushing, played by Edward Arnold. During the investigation Webb becomes involved in two murders, with circumstances pointing to him as the protagonist.

The McCarthy Theatre program will also include latest important news events on the war situation as brought to the screen in the Fox newsreel presentation. An all-star comedy treat and Dave Apollon in a fine musical offering.

"Tropic Fury", "Timber Stampede".

Richard Arlen and Andy Devine in "Tropic Fury" also George O'Brien in "Timber Stampede", two exceptionally fine features, are now

AT THE CAPITOL

"HEAVEN WITH A BARBED WIRE FENCE"

A refreshing romance of the road comes to the Capitol next in "Heaven with a Barbed Wire Fence," the 20th Century-Fox picture featuring Jean Rogers, Raymond Walburn, Marjorie Rambeau, Glenn Ford and Nicholas Conte.

Jean is seen as a "hitch-hike" girl; Glenn Ford, a promising newcomer from the stage, is seen as a boy "on the road." She's afraid and friendless, he's lonely and broke. Headed nowhere, fast, without a hope or a dream between them, you'll agree that it takes nerve for a pair of kids like this to fall in love. But that's just what happens and you'll join in their tears and heartaches and laughter as you roam the road with them in "Heaven with a Barbed Wire Fence."

Among the many colorful characters they meet along the road are the Professor, a gentleman-hobo who goes in for careful grooming and elegant speech played by Raymond Walburn; Mamie, his long-lost love, whom he discovers running a barroom in a western mining town, played by Marjorie Rambeau; and Tony, an embittered young freight-hopper, who introduces the girl and boy to the customs and dangers of the road. Tony is played by Nicholas Conte, who like Glenn Ford is a promising recruit from the stage. Conte played the title role in the Chicago production of "Golden Boy."

"Devil is Driving"

A District Attorney who relentlessly prosecutes the men of wealth and power who were responsible for his office is the principal character in Columbia's high-powered drama, "The Devil Is Driving", on the same program.

Richard Dix, who has figuratively, gone to the devil in his screen career as star of "Devil's Squadron," "Devil's Playground" and now "The Devil Is Driving" enacts the leading role with the forthright, dynamic energy which distinguishes most of his screen work. He is ably supported by an imposing cast including Joan Perry, as the prosecutor's sob-sister sweetheart, Nana Bryant, Franck C. Wilson, Henry Kolker, Elisha Cook, Jr., and John Wray. The film which was written by Lee Loeb and Harold Buchman was directed by Harry Lachman. Jo Milward and Richard Blake collaborated on the screen play.

AT THE BELLE

"VIRGINIA CITY"

The Belle Theatre will continue its new season parade of film hits so auspiciously begun with "Gone With the Wind" and "Rebecca", with "Virginia City", starring Errol Flynn, Miriam Hopkins and Randolph Scott. The film, which brings to the screen one of the most stirring chapters in the west's unwritten history, is now on the Belle Theatre screen.

"West of Dodge City there's now law" was a byword in the old west. And west of Dodge City, there was Virginia City, a city of gold, ruled by lead. Sprung up overnight, after the discovery of Comstock Lode and other gold and silver mines had brought thousands of prospectors to Nevada, Virginia City was as colorful as the gold that brought it into existence, and just as unheeding of law and order. It is this background against which Warner Bros. have set their exciting new film, in the stormy days at the close of the civil war. Southern sympathisers in Virginia City have banded together and raised some five million dollars which is to be smuggled out and sent to the Confederate army. Flynn as a Union intelligence officer, gets wind of the plan, and sets out for Virginia City with some plans of his own. On the stagecoach journey he meets Julia (Miriam Hopkins), who is the new singing and dancing star at the famous Sarenac Cafe in Virginia City. This marks the beginning of a hectic romance which has as many ups and downs as the terrain of Nevada.

Pitted against Flynn in his battle to divert the gold to the Union army is Randolph Scott, as a Confederate officer, and John Murrell (Humphrey Bogart), notorious highwayman, who intends to divert the gold to his own uses. From this situation emerges as justy and action-packed a story as the most ardent thrill-fan could desire, even more exciting than "Dodge City" in which Flynn starred last season.

Critics who have previewed "Virginia City" on the west coast, call Miriam Hopkins' performance the surprise of the year. As the spitfire queen of the dancehall, a complete change from the dramatic roles she has been playing, she is said to turn in a performance that rings the bell from every angle. Flynn in the reckless, dashing type of role, is said to do one of his best characterizations, with Randolph Scott as a worthy contender for hero honors.

Besides the headliners, the fine supporting cast includes Frank McHugh, Alan Hale, Guinn "Big Boy" Williams, John Litel, Moroni Olsen, Russell Hicks, Dickie Jones Douglas Dumbrille and a host of others.

Based on an original screen play by Robert Buckner, the film was made under the direction of Michael Curtiz, whose genius for handling pictures of epic sweep was so ably demonstrated with such outstanding films as "The Adventures of Robin Hood" and "Dodge City".

Ruth Terry, the Hollywood newcomer who is featured with Pat O'Brien and Edward Arnold in the comedy-hit "Slightly Honorable," which opens next at the McCarthy Theatre.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Getting The Patient To Describe His Symptoms Fully

The story is told of a woman who was being fitted for shoes. In trying on both shoes, the salesman remarked, "Lady, one of your feet is larger than the other".

The woman, highly indignant, put on her own shoes and walked to another shoe store. The clerk in this store also removed both shoes, and seeing there was a difference in size between the left and right foot, said, "Lady, one of your feet is smaller than the other". She bought her shoes at this store.

The lesson of the story, of course, is that it is often in the way a statement is made or a question is asked that brings a true or confidential reply or answer.

There is, perhaps, no other place where a question put in a courteous and sympathetic manner brings such a true or straightforward answer as in medicine. I often marvel at the patience and the courtesy of physicians in outdoor clinics where so many foreigners apply for help. These patients are nervous, do not understand the English language very well, and have difficulty in describing their symptoms. The physician, usually experienced, knows human nature well enough to realize that if he is to get the whole or complete story or history of the illness, he must be patient and sympathetic.

It is interesting to see a new department, a new section, in the Journal of the American Medical Association which is devoted to the medical student. Medical students or recent graduates will here learn much in a short time that has taken physicians previously many years to learn.

In advising medical students as to the best way to get the patient to describe his symptoms fully, one of the three methods is that of striving to please each patient.

"Patients very greatly as to their emotional stability, intellectual ability, keenness of perception and general reaction to the questioning and examination which enable the physician to decide just what is wrong. One patient may respond intelligently to, while another may be affronted or feel insulted by, the same question put to them in the same way."

There is, of course, the other side. A patient should understand that the physician, in private or clinic practice, wants to know the whole story—nothing kept back—if he is to give the needed help.

Children Should Not Use First Names for Grown-Ups

For grown-up friends of the family to ask a child of that family to call them by their first name is most unfair to the child. Let us grant that they would like to have the child use a more intimate name that would more nearly express affection. Nevertheless, the child has, undoubtedly, been taught that he or she has not the privilege of calling a grown-up by his or her first name unless that grown-up extends this privilege. Now the child is asked by the grown-up friend of the family to discard all its previous training.

The adults may do this with all good and kind intents, but it is an unthinking and unwise thing. When a mannerly person hears the child call, say, Mary or John by their first name, naturally it is the child who is blamed for his or her lack of respect. Such a reaction is pitifully unfair to the child, who is not at all to blame.

There are two alternatives for this use of the first names. One is that the child to whom the family's intimate friends are especially devoted call them by a nickname that they themselves suggest, some attractive nickname that will appeal to the child and that will be appropriate for him to use.

Or, if the friend is an especially intimate friend, one who is practically as close as an aunt or uncle or cousin, the child's parents may be asked if they are willing to have this affectionate title ("Aunt", "Uncle", "Cousin") used by the child.

Acknowledge Cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We have just had a death in the family and we have acknowledged all floral pieces. We have been told that we should also acknowledge the sympathy cards.

Please advise us if this is the proper thing to do.

W. W.

Yes, anything that is sent by a relative or friend to carry the message of friendship and sympathy should be acknowledged by a note of appreciation. This means that not only should we write notes of thanks for flowers, but also for letters or any other forms of expressions of sympathy. While it is not considered good form to send ready - made "sympathy cards", nevertheless we should write notes of appreciation if they are sent, for the senders meant to have them carry kind thoughts.

Insulin

Adults often develop diabetes because of overeating. These may cure themselves by observing diet rules that aren't too stringent. But when a child develops diabetes it is usually from a distinct lack of natural insulin in the system.

I remember when diabetes in a child meant almost surely that the child would not live long. To keep it alive the child was placed on the most rigorous of diets. Then the diet so weakened the youngster that he fell easy prey to some other infection.

Today, injections of insulin enable the diabetic child to live a fairly normal life. He is faced with the probability of having to have injections of insulin all his life, but he gets used to this routine. I know of a dozen or more young persons in this community I serve who would not be alive today if it weren't for insulin. Before the days of this treatment, they would almost certainly have died. I think of this when I meet them on the street and I remember how much we owe to the discoverers of insulin, a debt all the greater because of the unselfish way it was turned over to the public and not used by them to grow wealthy.

Of course, we must always remember that insulin isn't a cure. It is merely a product taken to make up for the lack of it in the system. It doesn't spur the system on to produce its own supplies of insulin.

In 1922 the death rate from diabetes in one U. S. state was 19 per thousand persons. This was the year when insulin became known. In 1923 the rate was 16. By 1924 it had shrunk to 9, and in 1926 it was down to 5. Thus in less than two decades diabetes has declined from an incurably fatal disease to a comparatively unimportant one. Thanks to the work of Dr. Frederick Banting of Toronto.

Banting now Sir Frederick, was a young doctor when he became interested in diabetes. He studied what other men had found out about the disease, such as that the removal of the pancreas resulted in death by diabetes. He separated the islands of langerhans in the pancreas from the pancreas themselves. By months of patient work, he managed to make an extract of these islands and using this extract on a dog whose pancreas had been removed, he found that the dog lived. The result was insulin.

Whatever is Ailing You? You're Not Yourself at All

It is almost uncanny how quickly a wife can detect any thing wrong with her husband's health. And how worried she is until he does something about it.

When it is a question of trouble with the nerves she can usually give him sound advice for most women know about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food from personal experience.

Few ailments, if any, get a man down so badly as disorders of the nerves because mind as well as body is usually affected. Worry and sleeplessness waste the nerve force in the body. Digestion is usually upset, bodily organs slow up for lack of motive power and he feels gloomy, discouraged and despondent. Life is robbed of its pleasures, efficiency is lowered and a nervous collapse is threatened.

But long before such a condition is reached the wife detects trouble and if she is persistent in recommending Dr. Chase's Nerve Food can usually halt the disorder, for this treatment greatly helps to restore the nervous system.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food supplies in condensed and easily assimilated form the ingredients from which nature creates new, rich blood and nerve force. In this way it instils new pep and energy into the nervous system and the body generally. Every organ, every part of the body must naturally be benefited by the flow of new, rich blood through the arteries and a full supply of new nerve force through the spinal column, the nerve centres and the myriad of nerve fibres which go to the uttermost parts of the body.

When you decide to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food do not go at it in a half-hearted manner. You should buy at least half a dozen boxes to begin with and then take the medicine regularly and persistently until health and vigor and the joy of living are fully restored.

One of Oldest Frame Homes In County Destroyed by Fire

Building Owned by Thos. H. Ketcheson Served the Public as Hotel in Early Days

GRASS FIRE CAUSE

Another of the connecting links with the pioneer past of Hastings County was swept away Friday when fire completely destroyed the large double frame house between the fifth and sixth concessions of Sidney Township, two and one half miles east of Frankford, owned by Thomas H. Ketcheson. Furnishings and contents of the building, owned by the two families occupying the house are a total loss.

The fire is believed to have been started when a grass fire started near the house suddenly roared out of control. It swept up the sides of the frame structure and enveloped the entire building before a large crowd of neighbors gathered to fight the blaze.

The occupants of the house, said to be Belleville people, had moved into their new home but a few days previous. A new metal roof had been laid on the building last week. The building, a testimonial to the craftsmanship of the pioneer builders of years ago, is said to have been over one hundred years old, and served the travelling public of its time in the capacity of a hotel. It has been owned by the Ketcheson family for a great number of years.

Sacred Musical Concert Enjoyed at Frankford

The Community Hall at Frankford was filled Thursday evening when a sacred musical concert was enjoyed by many Frankford citizens as well as a number from Belleville and the surrounding district.

The program was varied and of a deeply spiritual content and the final burst of enthusiasm by the audience after the singing of "Blest be the tie that binds" was a real benediction.

An appropriate welcome was extended to the audience by Mr. Rupert. The program consisted of choruses by the Frankford girls. Duets were sung by Mrs. Stojan and Mrs. Kravaak (in Czech); Gertrude and Dorothy Cretney and Cadet Jimmy Drope with Mr. Rupert. Solos were given by Mrs. Atyeo, Mrs. Cook and Mrs. Rupert. The instrumental numbers were delightfully done and included two selections on the vibra harp by Mr. Rupert and a number on the electric harp by Don Henderson. Two musical readings were given by Mr. Rupert and a trombone solo by Mr. Naylor was very much enjoyed. Miss Lillian White and Don Henderson gave an instrumental duet on the piano and electric guitar, while an instrumental on the violin and guitar was rendered by Mr. Kravaak and Frank Stojan. A trombone solo by Mr. Naylor was the final instrumental rendition of the evening.

Several buildings were scorched, however, Garnet Thompson, owner of the pulpwood suffered considerable financial loss as the result of the blaze.

Confidence Marks British Press Comment on Choice of Winston Churchill as Britain's Premier

London, May 11 (CP)—Confidence today marked British press comment on the selection of Winston Churchill to succeed Neville Chamberlain as Prime Minister.

Saying that the aggression which Hitler expected would increase political discord in this country has ended the crisis, The Daily Telegraph declared:

"Now the people stand united behind the figure of Churchill. No man is better fitted to form a war-time cabinet. He understands the mind of Hitler. He is capable of developing the powers of ingenuity and resource which this war demands. He will answer daring with daring."

No Dangerous Gaps

THE TIMES said there will be no dangerous gaps in policy and no hesitation. "For the instant," it added, "the heaviest immediate responsibility does not rest with the government at home, but with the Allied commanders on land, in the air and at sea."

"He has the qualities to make his arduous task glorious," The Daily Telegraph said of the new Prime Minister. "The Allies," it added, "are each established in a unity which tyranny can never compass. We have the government of victory."

Recalling Mr. Churchill's past warnings against "the character and purpose of our treacherous enemy," The Daily Mirror said that "only those who can help us to victory are now needed." It added that "the highest service that others can render in this moment of destiny is to stand aside."

"Great Britain has full confidence" in the leadership of Mr. Churchill, the News Chronicle said, adding that "the fact that the opposition parties will join his government means that he will speak for a wholly united nation."

Called By Destiny.

"The new premier will be hailed by the people as a man called by destiny to serve the nation in this grave hour," the Daily Mail said. "His splendid qualities as a man of action and imagination need no recital. The country knows them well and will rally to him with the utmost enthusiasm."

All newspapers printed editorials condemning the Nazis for their new aggression and praising the Dutch and the Belgians for their brave defence.

"The usual preposterous pretexts for invasion," said the Times, "are of course put forward, in more than usually nauseating tones of Nazi hypocrisy."

The News Chronicle, which said that "many of us by now are past the point where we think it worth while to express indignation at anything Hitler may do," predicted that Italy may soon join the attack and "the whole world may be set ablaze before the flames are beaten out."

Stabs In Back.

"Hitler," said the Daily Mail, "is armed not only with the might of a great industrial nation but with the assassin's weapons. He stabs in the back."

"Great Britain's responsibilities are now gigantic," said the Daily Herald. "She is pledged already to rescue the Poles, Czechs and Norwegians. And although so far no man can foretell the duration or outcome of the struggle, two more nations have felt sufficient faith in her strength and integrity to invite her help rather than submit to Nazi 'protection'."

ASPARAGUS MAKES FIRST APPEARANCE ON SATUR. MARKET

Half-Pound Bunches Sell for 15c — Rhubarb Plentiful at 5 and 10 Cents the Bunch

MANY BROILERS

The more or less gay colors of new spring produce, featured by the first asparagus of the season, brought a typical seasonal touch to the Saturday city market. The fresh greens of young plant shoots vied with the colors of potted plants and flowers in a display that was a refreshing change to the winter drab of the past few months.

The new asparagus was quoted at 15 cents for half-pound bunches with early stocks being quickly disposed of. The quality was good and vendors stated that warm weather will bring out fairly heavy quantities by next week.

Rhubarb was plentiful with bunch lots selling at 5 and 10 cents each. New onions, radishes and other spring vegetables sold at 5 cents.

Strawberry plants and raspberry canes were likewise in evidence today, with the former selling at $1.00 the flat of 200 plants. Canes sold at 2 and 3 cents each. Cabbage plants were offered at 1 cent each for sturdy stock, but this price varied with size and quality. Onion shoots were offered at $1.00 the box. Tomato seedlings sold at 25 cents for a small flat.

The gay colors of Spring pansies were evident, selling at 25 cents the berry box. Carnation shoots sold at 10 cents for the same quantity.

Eggs Unchanged.

Prices of other commodities were steady with grade "A" extra selects eggs offered at 25 cents the dozen. Other grades were offered at 2 cents less, with mediums selling at 21 cents the dozen. Butter quotations were unchanged at 55 cents the two-pound roll.

The chicken offering was lighter than usual with broilers again predominating. Choice young weighty birds were offered at a top price of $1.00 the pair with other grades ranging down to 50 cents the pair. Summer chickens sold at from 90 cents to $1.30 each according to quality while fowl ranged between 60 and 70 cents each.

New vegetables failed to have any appreciable effect on the prices of winter stocks, turnips, parsnips and carrots holding steady at last week's quotations. Potatoes appeared to be plentiful with quotations firm at $1.00 the bag for the table variety, and $1.30 and $1.50 for certified seed.

Winter apples in depleted quantities, are still popular. Spys and Starks held firm at 40 cents the peck with lesser cooking varieties selling at $1.00 the bushel.

Whitefish and fresh lake trout prices took a sharp decline due to the appearance of the fish in Lake Ontario and certain stretches of the Bay of Quinte. Both varieties were offered today at 20 cents the pound, a 5-cent drop from quotations of last week. Mudcats sold at two pounds for 25 cents, pike at 10 cents the pound, panfish at 15 cents the dozen, and "suckers" at three and four for 25 cents.

King George Sends Sympathetic Message To Queen Wilhelmina

London, May 11 (CP)—The King today sent the following message to Queen Wilhelmina of The Netherlands:-

"I am profoundly shocked by news of the brutal and wholly unwarranted German invasion of your Majesty's country. Not only is this action in defiance of international law and of solemn undertakings, but it is without any pretence of warning.

"The neutrality so strictly observed by The Netherlands since the outbreak of the war has been grossly outraged. I wish to express to your Majesty my disgust at this crime and my admiration for the brave resistance which is being made by the people of The Netherlands under your Majesty's leadership.

"In response to the appeal which my government received from your Majesty's government the Allies are hastening to the support of your Majesty's forces.

"I am confident that our cause will prevail and that The Netherlands true to their history will still remain the home of free men. In this hour of trial and anxiety I wish to convey to your Majesty and to all your people an expression of sympathy and admiration for your country which is felt by my peoples throughout the world."

Waterloo Pilot Seriously Injured On Western Front

Waterloo, Ont., May 11—(CP)—Flying Officer Albert M. Wilson, 28, Waterloo, has been "seriously injured" in air operations, it was revealed Friday by the British Air Ministry in a cable to P. V. Wilson, Managing Director of the Waterloo Trust and Savings Company, and father of the Royal Air Force pilot.

Flying Officer Wilson is the Twin City's first war casualty. "We do not know how seriously injured our son is, what he was doing when he was injured, nor where it occurred," Mr. Wilson said. "The message from the Air Ministry did not even tell us if he is in Allied or enemy hands."

Flying Officer Wilson left here slightly less than two years ago to join the Royal Air Force. When he left he was a Captain in the Scots Fusiliers of Canada Regiment. He studied for a time at Royal Military College, Kingston.

Recently, it is understood, he was attached to a bombing squadron and, while no confirmation of the story has been received, it is believed he was "brought down" on the western front.

WAR BRIEFS

Berlin, May 11 —(AP)— The German news agency claimed today that one of Belgium's strong forts before Liege is in German hands. (This Nazi claim could not be confirmed elsewhere.)

London, May 11 —(CP)— The Ministry of Information today banned export of copies of the Communist "Daily Worker" and the Fascist "Action." These newspapers, the Ministry announcement said, "are well known to make a practice of publishing allegations which create in the minds of neutrals misapprehension about British policy."

London, May 11 —(CP)—The Man in the Street was nicknamed Britain's new Prime Minister "Winnie."

But for telephone operators Winston Churchill has a private nickname—"Mister Winch."

He combined the first letters of his two names for a "nom-de-plume" to deceive wire-tappers, it was disclosed.

Now he may have to find another.

New York, May 11 (AP)— The British Broadcasting Corporation reported early today that a hospital in Brussels was in flames. The broadcast, picked up here, gave no further details.

New York, May 11 (AP)— The British Broadcasting Corporation said a message from The Netherlands early today reported the landing of Nazi parachute troop planes on the Dutch Islands of Zeeland. These islands, in the southwestern coastal area form the province of Zeeland. The broadcast was picked up by Columbia Broadcasting System.

Stockholm, May 11 (CP) — Swedish anti-aircraft guns opened fire on a German plane flying over Goteborg early today. It was not learned here immediately whether the plane was forced to land.

New York, May 11 (AP)— The New York World's Fair, dedicated to peace and freedom in the midst of a world shaken by war, opens for its second year today. Despite the conflict in Europe, with its repercussions throughout the world, fair officials sounded a call for "fun" and "informality" as they prepared to reopen the gates for a run ending Oct. 21.

'Red Mask' Matman Unmasked By 'Mystery Man' at the Arena

Stan Luther, Montreal, Forces 'Mystery Man' to Produce Best Wrestling Holds to Gain Decision

GOOD PRELIMINARIES

Although the identity of the "Mystery Man" still remains a deep dark secret, insofar as the Belleville wrestling clientele is concerned, he did manage to humiliate "The Red Mask," as the "Mystery Man" not only defeated the "red-masked" gent, but exposed his countenance to the wrestling public at the Hume Arena last night in the main bout of a four-card show. Upon being unmasked it was learned that the identity of "The Red Mask" was none other than Stanley Luther, a lithe Montreal wrestler, who took the fancy of the fans, but emerged loser when he was forced to concede the third and final fall after one hour and 39 minutes of a no-time limit bout.

To open the main bout the fans were at a loss to know which was their favorite as both men appeared hooded and their facial features clouded in mystery and a mask. After sizing matters up, however, the fans then reverted to the question as to which man Referee Cliff Faux took a fancy to and ultimately turned against the "Mystery Man," but their hopes were ultimately shattered. The "red-masked" gent literally slugged the "Mystery Man" who somewhat resembled Two-Ton Tony Galento in stature, into submission and won the first fall in something like nine minutes.

One is Unmasked

Early in the second round it was quite apparent that the "Mystery Man" had designs on unmasking his "red-hooded" opponent and subsequently managed to tear the latter's mask from his face, much to the chagrin and humiliation of Mr. Stanley Luther of Montreal, who was experiencing his first unmasking before the hungry patrons. Although Luther protested furiously and claimed his shoulders were not pinned to the mat, the "Mystery Man" gained the second fall in 22 minutes with a press.

Despite the fact that Luther tried to retaliate matters and unmask the "Mystery Man" to expose his countenance, his efforts were in vain and ultimately the result of defeat, as he fell victim of a step-over figure-four leglock and reverse crab hold that the "Mystery Man" applied so much pressure to that Luther was left prostrate and hors de combat and was forced to concede the final fall after nearly 40 minutes of hard torrid wrestling.

Semi-Final Bout Draw

In the second preliminary bout of the evening Ed. Sobel of Hartford, was to stack up against Chief Little Bear of Quebec, but the scheduled opposition failed to put in his appearance and Joe Maich of Brantford filled in. The crowd were with their old favorite, Maich, to pull out a win over his lighter opponent, but the rough tactics of Sobel stood him in good stead and he proved too slippery. Sobel wriggled out of head chancerys, toe holds and arm locks to turn the tables on his heavier opponent and the bout went to the limit of forty-five minutes without either man scoring the semblance of a fall, although just as the bell went Maich had Sobel in a bad way with a combined arm-lock and toe-hold and might have won the match had not the bell intervened and stopped the bout.

The first bout of the evening saw Young Griffin of Niagara Falls stack up against Al Buttanham of Hamilton in a bout which was to go thirty minutes or one fall. After only eight minutes of rough and tumble wrestling Buttanham took a head chancery on his heavier opponent and pinned his shoulders to the mat with a pin fall.

Fliers on Card

As an added attraction for the evening two Airforce men from the Trenton Airport hooked up in a crowd pleaser that had the fans rooting for their favorite. "Nibs" Palmer of Montreal eventually won the fall over his lighter opponent, Don McLaughlin, of Toronto, and the Arena Management promises both lads back in the near future to hook up with some real stiff opposition.

Bloomfield Asks To Join Softball Loop in Belleville

A possible sixth entry sought affiliation in the Belleville Softball Association at an executive meeting held in the Y.M.C.A. last evening when the Bloomfield "Stars" tendered an application for affiliation into Belleville softball group. The Bloomfield entry was sponsored by F. W. Stacey, who made direct application. With an entry already having been accepted from Picton, the request of the Bloomfield club was left in abeyance and in the hands of the league executive.

The teams now affiliated with the Belleville Softball Association are Point Anne, Corby's A. C., Shell "Oilers," Belleville Juniors, Picton Dominions and possibly Bloomfield. The matter of sponsoring a juvenile softball team in Belleville was shelved and laid over until 1941 on a motion presented by Secretary Harry Knott.

Twenty Umpires

A list of 20 umpires was named with Charles Barnett, of the league executive, named as chairman of umpires and whose duty it is to name the officials for all league games, including those played in either Picton or Bloomfield. The umpires will be paid at the rate of 75c for umpire-in-chief and 50c for base umpire. The umpires named were Josh Maracle, Don Thomas, Ken Watt, Andy Knott, Vic White, Earl Darrah, Gar Anderson, Cy Young, Homer Townsend, Harold Bawden, M. (Piper) Latchford, H. G. (Twigg) Woodley, Tom Miller, Jimmie Murray and the six members of the sitting executive.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, May 11—(AP)—Bobby Feller asked Oscar Vitt: "Why don't you let me work more? Gosh, I used to pitch every day back in Iowa." . . . Who in the congregation knew that Joe DiMaggio began his professional career as a shortstop? . . . Jack Dempsey and Joe Engel have been huddling here . . . Nobody knows why, but everybody knows that Engel has ambitions to crash the big time as a promoter.

Oscar Vitt says he never laughed so loud in his life as when he saw Joe McCarthy fidgeting around on the Yankee bench. . . . Benny McCoy has loosened up all of a sudden and is going like the dickens around second for the Athletics.

Today's tall story:

Max Macon of the Brooks remembers a day in the three-I league when he struck out and scored before another pitch could be made. . . . He got to first when the catcher missed the third strike, to second when the throw was over the first baseman's head, and all the way home when the pitcher, trying to pick him off second, heaved into centre field.

ENGLISH RACING OUT

London, May 11—(CP Cable) — No race meetings will be held in England after today until further notice, it was announced officially today following the German invasion of the Low Countries. Newbury will be the only track open today.

BAUER PROGRESSING

Kitchener, May 11—(CP)—Bobby Bauer right-winger with Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League, is making good progress following an appendectomy earlier this week, hospital authorities announced.

FOILS GUN JUMPING

Renato Enrico, 440-yard sprinter for Temple University, is shown in the starting gate for runners invented by that institution's track coach, Ben Ogden. When the gun is fired, the straps holding the runners back, are automatically released, thus preventing false starts and "gun jumping." Because, while in his crouch, the runner leans against the straps, Ogden believes faster starts will result. The apparatus is still in experimental stage.

Girls' Softball in Belleville Revived With 6 Teams in Loop

Games Will be Played on Armouries Lawn and Collegiate Campus

J. McVEIGH, CHAIRMAN

Following a decade of inactivity, girls' softball was revived in Belleville last evening with the formation of a six-teamed Belleville Mercantile Girls' League. The six clubs to function will be sponsored by Corbin Lock, Metropolitan, Zellers, Woolworth's, Kresge's and Lipson's, the latter teams emanating from stores along Front street, Corbins being the only manufacturing plant admitted to the organization.

The league will play all its games on the armouries' lawn with a single schedule, each team meeting the other clubs on one occasion. At the termination of the regular league schedule, however, the first and fourth clubs will play-off in the semi-finals as will the second and third placed teams. The two respective winners in the semi-finals will then meet in the city softball championship. A suitable trophy will be provided and presented the league champions.

Good Teams of Old.

Girls' softball was first introduced into Belleville in the early '20s of the present century and for nearly a decade flourished as a popular sport and pastime. Such splendid teams as the Ontarios, Beavers, Frontenacs, Belleville Fruit, Corby's A.C., and other girls' teams were sponsored by clubs when girls' softball was one of the outstanding sporting ventures in Belleville. Following a decade or more of inactivity, however, the game will again be revived for the purpose of recreation and pleasure.

Jack McVeigh was named general chairman of the newly-instituted league when they organized at the Y.M.C.A. last evening with T. E. Schwab named as secretary-treasurer. Paid neutral umpires will be employed for all games with the armouries' lawn and the Belleville Collegiate campus being selected as official league playing fields, games to be played at the armouries on Tuesday and Thursday and at the collegiate campus on Monday nights only. The colors of the clubs were announced as follows: Zellers (green and white), Kresge's (blue and white), Woolworth's (red and white), Lipson's "Tigers" (yellow and black), Metropolitan (white on green), and Corbin Lock (gold and blue).

Opening Games.

The opening game schedules were drawn as follows: Woolworth's vs. Zellers, Corbins vs. Kresge's, and Lipson's vs. Metropolitan. The official league schedule and playing dates will be drafted by general chairman Jack McVeigh and Secretary Schwab late next week.

AMBERS KNOCKED TO HELPLESSNESS BY LEW JENKINS

Loses Lightweight Crown to Sweetwater, Texas, Cowhand by Technical Knockout in Third Round

NO ALIBIS

New Champion Wants to Fight Armstrong Early This Summer

New York, May 11 (AP)—Before the startled, unbelieving gaze of a great crowd in Madison Square Garden last night, Lew Jenkins of Sweetwater, Texas, battered lightweight champion Lou Ambers of Herkimer, N.Y., into a reeling, helpless derelict in less than three rounds of furious fighting.

The third round was one minute and 29 seconds old when referee Billy Kavanagh grasped Ambers in his arms to spare him further punishment. Ambers had been down four times under Jenkins' fusillade. His manager, Al Weill, was standing against the ropes waving a bath towel in token of surrender.

Ambers, never before knocked out in a long and gainful career, sat on a dressing table and tried to smile as he said:

"What's the use of trying to alibi? He did it, and he did it good. He's a tough son-of-a-gun."

Jenkins was quiet and modest in victory. He mostly listened and dabbed at a slight cut on his left cheek while his Manager, Hymie Caplin, yelled himself hoarse about a fight this summer against Henry Armstrong, the welterweight champ.

"It'll draw two hundred grand," exulted Hymie. "Maybe three hundred. We'll fight him either for our lightweight title or his welterweight."

Last night's scrap wasn't 30 seconds old before he whipped over a right that dumped Ambers to the canvas for a count of five. Proving he could be impartial, he clipped the veteran to the floor with a sharp left in the second. And then, in the third, he simply laid into Lou with both fists and tore him apart. Ambers was down twice before Kavanagh shielded him.

RYBA DELIVERS TELLING BLOW

Pinch-Hit Single in Tenth Enables Rochester to Defeat Newark Bears

(By the Associated Press)

Mike Ryba, the jack of all baseball trades who never succeeded in mastering the one position with a major league club, always was a handy fellow to have around a ball club.

The 36-year-old veteran has tried every position on the diamond at one time or another, and although his specialty is pitching, he still can jump in to help out in an emergency when not taking his regular turn on the mound.

"Old Mike" delivered a pinch-hit single in the 10th inning to give Rochester an 8-7 victory over Newark Bears yesterday.

The victory kept Rochester in a tie for second place with Baltimore Orioles, who defeated Montreal 9-5 and boosted them to within one game of Jersey City Giants, who lost 4-2 to Buffalo. Homers by Jimmy Outlaw and Ollie Carnegie helped Buffalo win its fifth consecutive game at the expense of the little Giants. Floyd Giebell went the distance for the Bisons for his second straight triumph, allowing 10 hits, the same number Buffalo got off three Jersey hurlers.

Syracuse Chiefs made it two straight over Toronto Maple Leafs, 3-1 behind the six-hit hurling of Ted Kleinhans and Jack Tising. Kleinhans pitched four-hit ball for eight innings, yielded two more to start the ninth but got the verdict when Tising replaced him to retire the next three Leafs in order.

VETERAN DRIVER KILLED IN CRASH

George Bailey, veteran Detroit auto race driver, was burned to death when his speeding car crashed broadside into the inner guard rail after going into a spin on the southeast turn of the Indianapolis speedway. Bailey was tuning up in preparation for the Memorial Day classic to be held on May 30.

Proud Yanks Lose 10 Straight, The Longest Losing Streak Since McCarthy Took Charge

Boston Red Sox Down World Champions in Ten Innings

BROOKLYN BEATEN

First Time the Giants Have Beaten Dodgers This Season

By BILL WHITE
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

If you think the looks the Republicans are giving the Democrats are black, you ought to hear what the Burghers of the Borough of Brooklyn are planning to do to Bill Terry after what happened yesterday.

"The reason Brooklyn is "berling" lies in the fact the detested Terrys blasted a Brooklyn homecoming that was the biggest thing to hit town since Babe Phelps came in the first time. Thousands were on hand hoping for a fourth straight Brooklyn victory over the Giants.

The only thing that went sour was the game. The Giants won 7-2 behind the five-hit hurling of Harry Gumbert.

Brooks Only Half Game Ahead.

That was the first time in four tries the Giants had downed the delirious Dodgers and it left the Brooks only a half game ahead of the idle Cincinnati Reds in the National Baseball League pennant chase. Gumbert allowed two runs and two hits in the first frame, but he blanked the Brooks the rest of the route.

There were dark doings in another Manhattan borough too. The proud Yankees lost their seventh straight, this one to Boston Red Sox 3-2 in a 10-inning affair. Three bad errors, mixed with six solid Sox hits, turned the trick and gave the Yanks the longest losing streak they've ever suffered under manager Joe McCarthy.

Pittsburgh Pirates finally found the season had opened and made off with one of their rare triumphs the first in ten tries. Five-hit hurling by Mace Brown and a five run attack on Bill Lee and Charley Root in the sixth gave the Bucs an 8-3 victory over Chicago Cubs.

Buck Newsom Wins.

Another pitching performance that merited considerable attention was the one big Louis (Buck) Newsome of Detroit Tigers unleashed at Chicago White Sox. He scattered seven hits to give the Tigers their first shutout of the season, by 3-0.

Philadelphia Athletics turned the business of beating Washington Senators over to Bob Johnson, the hard-hitting outfielder. He obliged with his fifth homer of the season, a double and two singles, all of which accounted for five of the A's runs in their 8-7 victory.

Cleveland Indians won their third in a row the hard way—by spotting St. Louis four runs and then beating them 9-4.

The Cincinnati, St. Louis, Boston and Philadelphia National Leaguers all had an off day.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

With six teams in the fold, girls' softball was revived in Belleville last night. Permission has been obtained to play all games on the Armouries Lawn or at the Belleville Collegiate campus, the former grounds being used on Tuesday and Thursday nights and the latter on Monday nights if necessary. Girls' softball flourished as a popular sport and recreation in Belleville in the early '20s of the present century, but was abandoned some nine years ago. This popular sport always created interest among the fans and the newly-organized league will doubtless be received with open arms by the sporting public of Belleville. However, those sponsoring the sport should bear in mind that the game became popular solely because it was played in a central park, namely the armouries' lawn, where ideal facilities are afforded both the players and the patrons alike. Two energetic officers will conduct the league —Jack McVeigh as chairman and T. E. Schwab as secretary. The league schedule, which will commence early in June, will be drafted late next week, but in the meantime the competing clubs will participate in the spring training.

When Bob Feller hurled his no-run no-hit game against the Chicago White Sox early this season it marked the fourth time the Indians' mound staff had accomplished this feat. As a matter of fact eight other no-hit games have been pitched by seven Cleveland pitchers and three of them were hurled against White Sox. Other hitless performances by Cleveland moundsmen were: Hugh Dailey against Philadelphia, 1883; Cy Young, Cincinnati, 1897; Earl Moore, Chicago, 1901, for nine innings, losing in tenth; Robert Rhoades, Boston, and Addie Joss, Chicago, 1908; Addie Joss, Chicago, 1910; Ray Caldwell, New York, 1919; and Wesley Ferrell, St. Louis, 1931.

Belleville wrestling fans saw another behooded wrestler unmasked last night when "The Mystery Man" who has appeared here on several occasions, literally tore the hood and mask from the face of Stan Luther, a lithe and agile lad from Montreal. Last night's main bout lasted until long after midnight, but it could have terminated long before had the participants forgot about unmasking each other and went to work in earnest. Next week the popular Pedro Valdez of Mexico will again wrestle here.

Bloomfield is seeking a berth in the Belleville softball loop of the O.A.S.A. However, if the Prince Edward teams aren't of a better calibre than they were last season they would not be of much value to the local set-up. The Belleville softball moguls would be well-advised to remember the consequences of Rednersville, Tweed and Napanee softball entries. The class of softball played in Belleville is far superior to that played in the villages which is as it should be.

The season's initial baseball practice will be held at the Collegiate campus Wednesday evening as soon after 6.30 p.m. as possible. Whether or not a baseball team will function in Belleville this season will depend primarily on the turnout seen Wednesday night. If the local ballisters are sufficiently interested to attend practices regularly and assume a portion of the club's executive endeavours, then perhaps other inovations may be added towards the uplift of the game in Belleville. Players from 16 to 60 years of age are urged to come out, but from this corner we'd like to see the youngsters dominate the pre-season baseball practices. Frankly speaking the success of any sporting team depends solely upon the youth that is trained to replenish the gaps left by those who annually pass from the game. Baseball is at its lowest ebb in Belleville and only by means of injecting young blood and training the teen-aged can the game expect to live.

Did you know that—while interviewing Dizzy Dean over a coast-to-coast radio hook-up last week, Radio Bill Stern asked Diz how much longer he expected to remain in baseball....Diz's reply was typical—"Until I grow a long beard," he shot back....Strangely enough Stern's program was commercializing shaving cream on the air .... They'll do it everytime....And that Bill McKechnie, pilot of the Reds, is a grandpappy now? ....It's another ball player in the McKechnie family now....Girls' softball will be played on the armouries lawn once again, permission having been given them by General Headquarters Military District No. 3 through Col. A. B. Gribble....There is talk of Billie Hughes heading a strong rugby football squad at the R.C.A.F. next fall?....And that Corbys "mushballers" are in a quandry seeking a catcher to replace Alex Simpson, if the latter remains indisposed?....But Eddie Schrieder seems a sure mound starter as a teammate with Johnny Bawden this season.

SPORT SPICE—When Lou Ambers hit the canvas last night and ultimately lost his lightweight crown to Texas Lou Jenkins, it was the first time the Herkimer Hurricane had been victim to a K.O. in his lengthy and colorful ring career. . . . While making the lightweight limit Ambers weakened himself to such a degree that he just couldn't stand-up under the terrific two-fisted attack by Jenkins. . . . Joe Krakauskas, the former Hamilton pitcher now with Washington, is still suffering from the same old ailment—losing by one run. . . . With hits and errors even, the A's eked out an 8-7 win over the Senators yesterday. . . . It looks as though the Yankees just can't win regardless. . . . Yesterday the champs. (or should we say chumps) lost 3-2 to Boston despite the fact the Yankees outhit the Red Sox nine to six. "There just ain't no justice," bemoans Marse Joe McCarthy, who doesn't seem to be worrying to any noticeable degree.

LEN WADSWORTH RETAINS TITLE

Scores Six-Round Knockout Over Frankie Genovese at Timmins

Timmins, Ont., May 11—(CP)—Len Wadsworth, Canadian middleweight boxing champion of Timmins, successfully defended his title here Friday with a six-round knockout over Frankie Genovese, Toronto Italian. Wadsworth, scaling 157, held a three- pound advantage over his rival.

Genovese led on points for the first half of the 10-round bout. Wadsworth came out swinging for the sixth however, and dropped the rugged Toronto boy for a nine count. Genovese got up and then took another count. The third time he went down he stayed there. The two boxers fought to a draw in Toronto some weeks ago.

The Stars Say

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a pleasant, lively and progressive one, with matters coming to the fore which may hold elements of surprise or adventure of an unforeseen nature. It may be a joyous, unexpected gift, some token of esteem from superiors or employers, or a romantic adventure arising from a thrilling source. Or a novel experience may materialize in the realm of thought or spiritual aspirations.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a progressive and prosperous year, with advancement or success coming with unforeseen precipitancy. Travel or contacts with strange places or persons may be lucrative as well as thrilling, although personal initiative may attract benefits from employers or other sources.

A child born on this day may be original, ingenious, skilful and capable in any number of out-of-the-ordinary ways, attaining place and attention from superiors, employers or perhaps strangers as well. It may benefit by travel and enjoy personal as well as professional adventures or honors.

For Monday, May 13

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is a conflicting one. There are signs of definite success in relation to corporations, political or diplomatic bodies, fraternal societies or through intrigue or undercover activities. There also are omens of impediments, delays, stubborn opposition and difficult financial angles. There may be entanglements or loss because of papers or writings, so be alert.

Those whose birthday it is face a year of conflict and doubt, although there is room for gain and achievement by particularly discreet, wary, subtle or secret co-operation with powerful bodies, political or fraternal. Finances are at stake, and papers menace if not carefully handled and signed. Social or affectional pleasures bring consolations.

A child born on this day may have marked ability in statesmanship, politics or stratagem, with much insight and understanding of a shrewd and subtle quality. Loss or misconstruction of writings or documents seem to figure in its career. It may have a forceful and domineering character, making for success against obstacles and opposition.

Little Benny's Note Book

Sattiday afternoon pop and I were starting to go out for a walk and ma said, Wait a minute, Willyum. I'll go with you, it's such a lovely day I think it would be lovely if we all went for a walk.

The more the merrier as long as they're all in the family, pop said, and ma said, I'll put my hat on.

Wich she did, and we went out, ma saying, Wich way, where shall we walk to, anywhere you say, Willyum?

The spring flowers in the park are proberly shoving each other aside in the spirit of the times, let's walk to the park, pop said, and ma said, I think that's an ideal thought shall we go by way of the Avenue?

Why the dooce should we delibritly go out of our way when even as it is it's a hefty walk to the park? pop said, and ma said, I was thinking it might be intristing to see some of the displays in the shop windows, and as far as flowers go, there are any number of florist shops on the Avenue and their windows will have beautiful displays of all kinds of varieties that we'd never see at all in the park.

Yes indeed, we can try to smell them through the glass and maybe the florists will take pity on us and bring us out a few handfulls, pop said. Did you say something about walking in any direction I name? he said, and ma said, Well of course, Willyum, all you have to do is name it. Could anything be more reasonable than that? she said.

Well yes and no, in other words if and that is, pop said, and I said, Well G, pop, gosh, ma, speaking of walking there's a picture at the Little Grand called The Walking Phantom, why dont we compromize by going to see that?

You've got my vote, pop said, and ma said, What, a gassly horrer picture?

The result being we walked to the park the short way.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 11 (CP)—Reflecting brighter war news, the Toronto stock market improved in tone in today's short session. Gains widened to a point among senior base metals, industrials and cheaper golds. Trading continued on a small scale and turnover was only about 100,000 shares.

Noranda and Nickel advanced a point, Smelters and Hudson Bay added fractions, Falconbridge gained 25 cents and Steep Rock, Waite Amulet and Pend Oreille firmed 5 to 10 cents.

Buffalo Ankerite firmed 20 cents and Macassa 10.

Ahead around 5 cents were Pickle Crow, Little Long Lac, San Antonio and Malartic Gold Fields. Dome weakened ¾ to 20¾, a new low for recent years and Lake Shore dropped a point to 23.

Scattered gains marked steels, foods, papers and liquors. Ford A, Brazilian, C.P.R., Walkers common and Laura Secord gained fractions. General Steel Wares slipped back a point to a new low for the year at 7¾.

Home Oil at 2.25 was up 4 cents and Texas Canadian 65 cents to $2.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, May 11—(AP)—Demand for stocks of companies with war profit potentialities lifted these one to three points at the best in today's market, but many issues continued without much support.

Steels and Aircrafts were the principal gainers, touching top marks in the first hour when dealings were moderately active. A little selling later chipped down extreme advances and the close was a bit uneven.

Transfers were around 600,000 shares.

Wall Street nervousness over the latest German blitzkrieg seemed to have waned somewhat, and the excited selling of yesterday was absent.

Foreign bonds steadied. The British "free" pound sterling and French franc rallied briskly after dropping to new historical lows Friday. Support for these currencies followed reports of strong resistance to the Nazi invasion of the Low Countries.

Prominent shares on the forward swing were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft and Glenn Martin.

Toronto, May 11 (CP)—No price changes were reported early today by bacon-hog markets. Dressedweight: Stratford $19.40 plus transportation.

Slight Easing In Butter Prices

Toronto, May 11—Slower trading caused butter prices to ease a shade on the Toronto open produce market yesterday.

Buyers were less numerous on the butter market and holders reduced prices slightly on offerings, although they did not appear to be trying to force sales. Some of the trade stood on the sidelines awaiting the final stock report from Ottawa, which helped to impede dealings. First grade Ontario creamery solids turned over in light volume at 22¾c a pound. Western offerings aroused no interest at 23¼c.

Receipts were not heavy on the egg market. Prices held up fairly well in the face of generally quiet trading. The uneasy tone of the market during the last few days was attributed to unsettled export conditions. Further shipments are going forward for export, however. Graded eggs traded yesterday at unchanged levels, while the two top grades weakened in the retail section.

Montreal Produce.

Montreal, May 11 (CP).—Produce market prices here, as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Butter — First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 24¼c to 25c; first grade solids, jobbing price, 23¾c to 24¼c.

Eggs—Graded shipments in used free cases, selling price, A-large, 23½c; A-medium, 21½c; A-pullets, 19c; B, 21c; C, 18c to 18¼c. (Government inspected lots ½ cent higher.) Receipts: 3,511 cases.

BRITISH EMBASSY

When Sir Noel arrived he hailed two passing motorcycle policemen, but witnesses said they declined to intervene and rode away. Sir Noel and his colleagues then telephoned the police from another hotel across the street.

Eventually Police Arrive

Witnesses said that eventually the police chief arrived and escorted the foreigners to their two cars which they found covered with posters. Sir Noel insisted that they be removed and the police chief complied while the crowd shouted disapproval.

Posters still were on the walls of the hotel this afternoon.

Meanwhile, in a pro-German demonstration in the centre of Milan, several hundred students shouted "Down with the Allies!" and paraded through the central streets of Milan, cheering Premier Mussolini, Germany and Adolf Hitler.

DUTCH FOREIGN MINISTER

The Dutch attacked this morning at Rotterdam, determined to wrest from the Germans the Nearoy Waalhaven airfield, base of the German forces of occupation in the big coastal city.

Assault Lasts Two Hours

The assault lasted for two hours —directed not only at the airport but also at Germans on Dordrecht Island.

In the attack on Dordrecht Island alone, Man Kleffens said more than 1,000 Dutch were lost but the German force was completely destroyed, the Foreign Minister declared.

The Dutch counter-assault at Rotterdam was launched at 8 a.m. in conjunction with a heavy British bombardment of Waalhaven airdrome, on the left bank of the Nieuwe Maas, which bisects Rotterdam.

Had the Germans been able to consolidate their hold within Rotterdam they would have had a coastal base for assaults directly across the narrow lower neck of the North Sea against the British Isles.

From the Allied viewpoint, the reported victory at Rotterdam over Adolf Hitler's plane-carried advance guard appeared as the most dramatic, if not most important, development thus far in the two days of Blitzkrieg and counter-Blitzkrieg.

Belgian and Dutch forces, on land and in the air, fought as comrades-in-arms of the British and French. Thousands of British Tommies and French Pollus poured into the low countries. Belgium especially, to help the Belgians and Dutch dam the tide of invasion.

Reports on War

Other reports on the war included:

1. The announcement by British military circles that Arlon, in south Luxembourg, is in Allied hands. This was one of the first concrete indication that Germany has not gobbled up all of the little Grand Duchy, nestled in a corner of the Maginot line and the westwall.

2. Unconfirmed advices that German forces in Belgium had reached the outer defences of Liege and had crossed the Albert canal, a main line of Belgian defence. The crossing was said to have been accomplished yesterday at Maastricht and this was followed with an advance toward Roermond.

3. The declaration of a British source that the Allied advance in Belgium is "proceeding according to plan"—this coupled with the statement that, although it is too early to be optimistic, yesterday's operations were "satisfactory."

4. The Belgian advice that lightning defence, consisting in part of blasting away bridges and other routes of approach, had halted the German overland advance.

5. Word that the strongest advance in The Netherlands appeared to be north of the Rhine, toward Almelo, Hengelo and Arnheim. German forces were said to have penetrated as far north as Groningen.

Van Kleffens, who flew to London yesterday to establish liaison with the Allied command, said a British bombardment of the Rotterdam airport during the night preceded the 8 a.m. attack in that sector.

Changed Hands Three Times

"After a very stubborn fight which cost us a great toll of life we recaptured the airdrome at 10 a.m.," the Foreign Minister said.

"That was followed by recapture of The Hague airdrome which in the course of Friday changed hands three times."

The Minister said reinforcements were needed in South Holland because "The German plan makes it necessary for us to scatter forces which would be kept together in the normal course of events."

Van Kleffens said that two thirds of his country's gold deposits had been sent away before the invasion and that the remainder is being sent.

All Mines Swept Up

The Minister said that German planes sowed magnetic mines in all Netherlands ports on the first day of the invasion but that all had been swept up by evening.

He credited the Royal Dutch Navy for "a great part" in dislodging the Germans from Dordrecht Island in the Rotterdam operations. The island and other interior coastal vantage points had been gained by German parachutists or soldiers landed in harbors by seaplanes where they were said to have been concealed in barges until the signal to strike.

A British source said that the Nazi blitzkrieg tactics seem to have been frustrated by the swift action of the Dutch in destroying bridges on the Nieuwe Maas River. All were blown up except one at Gennet, some 15 miles south of the Rhine.

manoeuvring at high speed," he said.

Commenting on the substitution of Winston Churchill for Neville Chamberlain as British Prime Minister, the extremist Fascist newspaper of Bologna, Resto Del Carlino, asked if it would be during the government of Churchill, "another octogenarian", that Britain would "receive the first salute of landing German troops and if Premier Reynaud of France would be able to placate with another cabinet shake-up "a revolution which may break out in France."

Resto added its voice to the Fascist effort to discourage manifest sympathy for Belgium and Holland among the Italian people. Resto said [illegible]ist Italy would not "feel sorry [illegible] the fate which befell sacros[illegible]t countries rotten with Dem[illegible]cracy and anti-Fascism."

NATION IS ASKED

"L. G." May Be Given Post.

Political observers thought either Arthur Greenwood or Clement Attlee would represent Labor, and Sir Archibald Sinclair the Liberals.

There was the likelihood that David Lloyd George would be given a post.

At Buckingham Palace last night Mr. Churchill realised a lifetime ambition when he solemnly kissed the King's hand signifying his acceptance of the premiership.

In a fighting speech calling on the nation to rally behind the new prime minister, Mr. Chamberlain said simply: "My duty was plain. I saw the King and presented my resignation."

That decision was reached, he said, when debate in the House of Commons over the British military withdrawal from central Norway made it clear that "some new and drastic action must be taken if confidence was to be restored to the House of Commons and the war carried on with a vigor and energy which are essential to victory.

Reason For Resignation

He said it became apparent yesterday "that the essential unity could be secured under another Prime Minister, though not under myself," and therefore he resigned.

Among the rebel Tories who may join the new ministry are two former First Lords of the Admiralty, Alfred Duff Cooper and L. C. M. S. Amery. It was impossible to say what ministers will go, but Sir Samuel Hoare, Air Secretary, Oliver Stanley, War Secretary, Sir Kingsley Wood, Lord Privy Seal and possibly Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, are believed to be on the blacklist.

Mr. Churchill probably will have his war cabinet, as a directing agency and without the political heads of the three fighting services.

Official Bulletin

The official bulletin announcing a change in the tenancy of No. 10 Downing Street read:-

"The Right Hon. Neville Chamberlain M.P., resigned his office of Prime Minister and First Lord of the Treasury this evening and the Right Hon. Winston Churchill C.H., M.P., accepted His Majesty's invitation to fill the position.

"The Prime Minister desires that All Ministers should remain at their posts and discharge their functions with full freedom and responsibilities while the necessary arrangements for formation of a new administration are made."

NAZI OUTRAGES

No Words Adequate.

"No words could adequately condemn the treachery and the barbarism which have marked the successive outrages of Nazi Germany."

Mr. King said:

"No one knows where the next blow may fall but every neutral country must at least now be persuaded that there is no limit to the Nazi lust of conquest and no chance for survival of civilization unless Nazi Germany is vanquished."

The prime minister declared that "the greatest battle in the greatest war for the greatest cause has begun. The storm has gathered; it is for us to gather our strength."

Some Cause For Optimism

Some cause for optimism was seen, however, by the government leader, who said there is every reason for renewed confidence in the final outcome of the struggle.

News of the invasion of the lowlands, although terrible, "has shown that stouthearted nations, however small, are prepared and ready to resist. Every attack upon still another country, every extension of the battle front brings to Nazi aggressor a new military danger."

Baron Silvercruys said Belgium fulfilled all her international obligations and the "flimsy pretext" which Germany advanced for the invasion, to the effect that neutrality had not been preserved, "is but an insult added to a grave injury."

"For us Belgian, the hour of trial has come. The loyalty which we displayed as an independent and neutral nation we shall now demonstrate anew on a field where Belgian determination, courage and constancy will have a renewed vigor."

GERMANY'S

Planes were reported all over the country last night, and shortly after 8 o'clock this morning flights of nine and ten planes were seen over Namur, 35 miles southeast of the capital and Dinant, 15 miles south of Namur.

Four Soldiers Killed

Four soldiers were reported killed in a bombardment of Rixensart, about 10 miles from Brussels, at 4.30, while Alost, 15 miles west of here, also was reported bombed.

British and French troops, with tanks, artillery, motorcycles and engineers, were observed moving through Belgium this morning. But the government kept strict censorship on their movements, as well as on the situation at the front and other military information.

Refugees from the frontier areas arrived in Brussels throughout the night, many of them riding in open trucks.

Brussels, which early in the war became accustomed to blackouts and restrictions on cafes and theatres, presented a perfectly prepared blackout during the night. Blue bulbs had been placed in all the street lights before the war began. The inhabitants were calm.

On land, declared Defence Minister Lieutenant-General Henri Denis, the German thrust bogged down in a mass of traps, obstructions and mined roads and bridges long prepared to halt just such a blitzkrieg as Adolf Hitler sent upon Belgium before yesterday's dawn.

The army, under the direct command of 38-year-old King Leopold III, backed up Denis' pronouncement. In all the border area, it said, the German invaders were halted.

Behind the lines, Belgian defenders mopped up German parachute troops and at the same time police were alert against any "fifth column" movement that might aid invaders dropped from the skies.

All Germans in Country Held

All Germans in the country were arrested. Leon Degrell, leader of Belgiums' Rexist (Fascist) party and Staf Declerq, Flemish Extremist, were taken into custody.

Crowds of Belgians, roused by the fighting words of King Leopold that "The Belgian cause is pure", jeered as police vans carried Germans to jail.

British and French fighting men, brothers-in-arms of the Belgians in the First Great War streamed through the country on their way to the fighting front. The cheering populace greeted the Tommies and Poilus gaily, pelting them with flowers.

Death List Heavy

The death list from German bombs which fell yesterday in the centre and suburbs of Brussels reached 150 and eighty-two persons were wounded. Eight German planes were shot down over Belgian territory, an official announcement said.

In one area of Brussels 20 houses were wrecked by Nazi bombs. German raids on Belgium airports missed fire in one respect: all planes had been moved from the ports. The planes of the Sabena Air Lines, for instance were reported safe in England.

Refugees hurried out of the combat zones as the British-French Allies moved in. Evacuation of the residents of Liege, a battleground in the First Great War, was to begin today.

Happy over the turn of events were four British Royal Air Force Aviators, interned since their planes crashed on Belgian territory earlier in the war.

Belgium steeled herself internally for total warfare. Food rationing at fixed prices started today. Motion picture theatres and some shops were closed as well as the Brussels Bourse.

Speed Up Air Training Plan

There was speculation concerning the nature of the new moves and it was agreed generally, although unofficially, that they would involve a speeding up of the British Commonwealth air training plan and possibly some new policy involving the Canadian Active Service Force, the 1st Division of which has been completing its training in England with the 2nd Division still training in Canada.

Some departures in policy along the economic front also are anticipated.

"We were considering ways in which additional help might be given by Canada," Mr. King told the Ottawa correspondents.

"We have been anticipating possibility of the war suddenly extending and studying how we might respond quickly to the new need. The government has been in close touch with the Allied powers and we have tried to anticipate what might be required of us if a crisis arose."

Premier Sends Messages

The Prime Minister sent messages to Winston Churchill, new British Prime Minister, and to Neville Chamberlain, Mr. Churchill's predecessor.

The message to Mr. Churchill assured him "of the continued whole-hearted co-operation and strong support of my colleagues and myself in all that pertains to the vigorous prosecution of the war effort of the British Commonwealth.

Mr. King's message to Mr. Chamberlain was in a personal vein and he said he was proud to stand at his side when he assumed office and again when he retired from the Premiership. "My admiration and understanding sympathy are yours in the fullest measure at this hour," the message concluded.

Officials at the Canadian Legations in Brussels and The Hague provide the Government here with running accounts of the German invasion, the Prime Minister said, which were valuable at the meeting of the war committee of the cabinet.

FRENCH MOVE INTO SPIRITED BATTLE

yesterday, the French advance guard followed its appointed role, sounded the alarm, and then withdrew.

Sector Most Agitated.

This particular sector extending east from the Luxembourg border has been one of the most agitated along the western front, even in the days when patrol activities were the main actions of a stalemated war.

It extended the German push to a jagged line between 300 and 400 miles long — from the North Sea along the Dutch and Belgian borders through the territory of Luxembourg and along the French border itself east of the tiny Grand Duchy.

At the same time a vast struggle for air supremacy was developing over Belgium as British and French planes fought off the thrusts of planes attempting to halt the flow of Allied reinforcements into the beleaguered low countries.

The Duchy of Luxembourg, through which the Germans moved swiftly yesterday, and the country east of the Moselle River along what was previously known as the French front were the scenes of the fighting today.

In the Luxembourg sector, a general staff spokesman said, French advance guards were "maintaining our advance" in a series of engagements with German patrols.

On the Moselle River sector, French troops were said to have reoccupied outposts from which they withdrew yesterday under heavy German attacks.

Struggle For Air Supremacy

The struggle for air supremacy over Belgium was disclosed in a terse British communique which reported that Allied planes had fiercely resisted attempts by the German air force to strafe reinforcements moving into Belgium.

The disclosure came as official sources announced that German bombing planes had killed or wounded 100 French civilians in a series of widespread air raids yesterday accompanying the assault on the low countries. Forty-four of the raiders were reported shot down.

Paris experienced its second air alarm in two days shortly before dawn this morning, and German airplanes appeared at several other places over France. There were no reports of new bombings. Anti-aircraft batteries blazed into action in east-central France during one 30-minute alarm.

Attack Nazi Airdromes

In retaliation for the Nazi air raids yesterday, the French said, their bombers successfully attacked "several enemy airdromes" during the night and also made extensive reconnaissance flights over Germany. All planes were said to have returned safely.

British general headquarters said that the German air force had made eight attacks on Allied columns moving into Belgium in the last 24 hours, only to be met by "vigorous" resistance.

Allied fighting planes and anti-aircraft guns drove the Germans off as they attempted to machine-gun roads and troop concentrations, the communique said. The troops were said to have behaved admirably under fire.

Sectors Not Mentioned

The communique mentioned "reports" that the Germans had attempted to land parachute troops, but did not mention the outcome of this manoeuvre nor the sectors involved.

While the bulk of the British-French northern armies raced to positions in Belgium, the first direct engagements between Allied and German troops on the new war front took place in the Duchy of Luxembourg.

Military dispatches indicated that most of that unarmed country's 1,000 square miles of territory had been quickly overrun by the Germans before they came into contact with French outposts. "Sharp combats" were reported between the opposing advance guards.

Use Pontoon Bridges.

Using pontoon bridges thrown across the Moselle River, Nazi motorized columns sped swiftly through the defenceless Duchy and hastily sought to consolidate their positions against the possibility of an Allied counter-attack.

Their advance was halted—at least temporarily—near the French border where the Allies had converted into strong defensive positions a series of abandoned mine pits.

Gigantic armies were massing for battle further north where the Belgians and Dutch—with almost 1,600,000 men under arms—were offering stiff resistance against German attacks by land and air.

At least that many more men, including 200,000 British troops who have been poised for months behind France's northern frontier, were in the Allied columns hastening to the assistance of the invaded countries.

Endless lines of staff cars, motorcycles, tanks and trucks crowded with men and arms sped northward on all available roads, raising clouds of dust in the little Belgian villages where the civilian population cheered coming.

Carried Out With Precision.

The movement of the Allied column was carried out with precision, according to plans worked out months ago in preparation for just such a contingency.

The British divisions participating in the operation advanced on the left flank of the long front extending from the Moselle River to the North Sea.

With the exception of two brigades stationed at Strasbourg, the British expeditionary force in France has been concentrated in a sixteen-mile long, three-mile wide sector near Lille.

The vanguard of the advancing columns was composed of speedy mechanized combat units, which were followed by the slower 3½-ton, 5-ton and 12-ton tanks. Motorized infantry, and artillery brought up the rear, while overhead roared fighting planes en route to low country bases.

PRIME MINISTER

These appointments were announced early last night by Prime Minister Mackenzie King at a Press conference. It is understood they were decided upon Thursday. Mr. King said he was not ready to announce the government's nominee as Speaker of the Commons or appointment of the party's deputy whip and deputy Speaker for the Commons.

They will be known, however, before parliament meets next Thursday.

Gray May Be Speaker

Mr. Taylor succeeded Ross Gray, member for Lambton West. It has not been disclosed what position Mr. Gray will fill at the new session.

There is a possibility he might be chosen Speaker of the Commons. Other names mentioned for this position, held by Mr. Casgrain since 1935, are J. A. Glen, member for Marquette, Man., and Lieut.-Col. W. P. Mulock, member for York North.

In the Upper House, Senator Parent succeeds Hon. W. E. Foster of Saint John. The Prime Minister said the government was following the custom of alternating between French and English-speaking speakers in both houses in making its decision concerning the members who will preside over the two chambers.

F. G. Sanderson, member for Perth, was deputy Speaker in the last parliament but with an English-speaking member slated for the Speaker's chair, a French-Canadian member will be named in Mr. Sanderson's place.

Bulletin Discusses Hog Prices

The Bacon Board have issued bulletin number 4 and the purpose of this bulletin is to discuss the hog price situation in Canada since the Bacon Board began to operate. When the board met for the first time on Dec. 22, 1939, it was faced with an urgent request from the British Ministry that it should as soon as possible, assume responsibility for export clearance under the terms of the United Kingdom-Canada bacon agreement.

The terms of the agreement provided for a flat price of $18.01 per hundred pounds grade "A" Wiltshires F.O.B. ship, at Canadian seaboard, with relative prices for "B" grade Wiltshires and the various cuts. The board, therefore, in order to maintain quality production of bacon and hogs, had to establish graded prices to be paid for bacon at Canadian seaboard. It was also necessary that initial prices should be at a point below the flat price provided for in the Bacon Agreement, in order to create a fund of money with which to defray storage and carrying charges on product put in store during periods of heavy marketings and carried over to equalize shipments during the period of lighter hog runs, and to endeavor to provide means by which to increase hog prices during the summer months to take care of the increased costs of production of hogs marketed in that period.

The problem, therefore, for the Board to decide was the opening graded price for bacon. This was determined on Dec. 22, 1939, and became the first Bacon Board Requirement on packers to commence with all bacon clearing seaboard on the week ending Jan. 20, 1940. Thus the price laid down by the board influenced hog purchases for the first time during the week between Christmas and New Years, and from that time onwards.

Some good lots of hogs marketed out of the Belleville district during the week of May 10th, 1940, are as follows:

"Lover Come Back"

by BARRETT WILLOUGHBY

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

Sondra had started for the door, when Dynamite called her back.

"About this fish war, Sondy." He paused a moment, fixing her with a quizzical, speculative eye. "'Tis like to be messy, as are all wars. But while it lasts, we can't afford to show any weakness, or have any traffic with the enemy. Ye understand?"

"I'm not quite sure I do, lamb."

"Look, then. The way to end a war is to win it. And ye win the sooner by bein' everlastingly hard. No truces. No half-measures. This Reynall lad, now—by the eye of him, he'll take a divil of a beatin' before admittin' he's licked. But till he does admit it, ye have neither words nor time to waste on him. Do ye agree, darlin'?"

"Y-e-s-s. Of course. But there's little likelihood that Jean Reynall will ever try to take up any of my time—now."

"S-o-o?" The captain's eyes twinkled up at her. "Well, when I was his age, the devil himself couldn't have stopped me from takin' up the time of a gurl like you! But I'm glad ye fall in with me sentiments, Sondy; for if that young pup ever again steps foot inside me door—save with the transfer papers to the Glory—I'll have him heaved out on his ear."

As Sondra left the room, she remembered the unlocked chests in the attic, and ran up to turn the key in each one. She returned to the upper hall just as Polena came puffing up the servants' stairway from below. The old housekeeper had a black look on her face and a freshly pressed blouse on her arm

"That one!" she wheezed. "Coming down with her high-and-mighty orders! 'Press this, Polena!' Without a please or a thank you. I swear I—"

"Polena dear, I'm in a terrific hurry. Liane and I are going down to the village to see about music for the party."

"Going? She's gone already—that one. She left word you'd find her at the floating cannery with young Reynall."

"With Je—" Sondra bit her lip on the name, and on the quick, raw emotion that shook her. This, somehow, was the last crushing straw on the morning's load of frustration.

x x x

Sondra, with Liane's music score gripped under one arm, strode along the O'Moore float toward the little runabout that was a birthday gift from her grandfather. Her eyes were stormy, her chin set, and there was snap in every movement as she tossed the painter aboard, leaped into the open cockpit, and started the engine.

The Spindrift steered like an automobile. She swung it in a violent arc and went shooting past the Glory's dingy hull, hair blowing back, eyes narrowed against the stinging spray, as she headed for the Indian village down the channel.

Shady Lane, bent over a winch on the floating cannery, [illegible] his blue-denimed length and waved his oil can. "Go it, Redhead!" he cheered. Kemp Starbuck, from the wharf in front of his plant, called something through cupped hands But Sondra was blind to everything except a hot resolve to waste no time in the delivery of Dynamite's message to Katlean. Captain Jean Reynall would soon learn that the role of gallant host had cost him his last, slim chance for a season's pack of herring.

x x x

An hour later Sondra returned to find Kemp and her grandfather talking over a scatter of papers that lay between them on the table Kemp was saying, "Even though this contract assures me of your entire catch, sir, I hardly think I shall at any time be loaded up with more fish than I can handle. However, if it should happen, I'll gladly respect your proviso that no part of them is to be turned over to Reynall."

"Good! 'Tis a small point, but an important one—to me." He glanced up. "Hoh, Sondy!" His expectant gaze probed past her "Where's Katlean?"

"He wasn't home." Sondra waved Kemp back to his chair, and went on, wearily: "His mother tried to tell me something but I couldn't understand her Thlinget. I left a note or him to come here the moment he returns."

"Katlean—not home?" The captain's eyebrows bushed suspiciously "Could Reynall have held o him already, d'ye suppose?"

"I hardly think so," interposed Kemp, with a chuckle. "Reynall's dispatch boat, the Baltic, with himself at the wheel, passed our plant some time before Sondra flew by in her runabout. Miss Bootrin was helping him steer, and neither of them seemed seriously intent upon anything—except each other."

"Hah!" The captain's knowing grin was the broader for his allayed anxiety. "We will do no business this day, with Liane's hooks into him. Distractin' as a three-alarm fire that one. . . . Now, now, Starbuck! Don't rush off. Stay and join us here in a bite of lunch."

x x x

Lunch was just over when Liane breezed in, stripping a crimson kerchief from her dark head and whirling it about her.

"Greetings, darlings!" Her voice was vibrant, her eyes glowed with a febrile brilliance. "I've had a simply marvellous morning with Jean Reynall. Caught him just leaving for the Indian village, and went along. I knew you'd be down later, Sondra."

"I was. But I didn't see you."

"No. We stopped there just long enough to pick up Katlean; then all took a run down Peril Strait. Boy! Can that little tub of Jean's ramble! I did the steering, while Jean and Katlean went into a huddle over the catch of the native herring fleet. Jean was all hot to get Katlean signed up, you see." She helped herself to a couple of cakes, and bit into one with relish.

"Well, well?" The captain's fingers were drumming the arms of his chair. "What did Katlean say?"

"Oh, he didn't want to sign, just then. But I took care of that!" Her airy gesture scattered crumbs.

"What d'ye mean—you took care of it?"

'Boo! Boo!" Liane ducked toward him, laughing. "Don't be so savage, cap! . . . I mean—I took care of it. Jean's such a sweet boy, and his heart was so set on that contract he had no time for anything else until it was settled. So-o-o"—she sampled another cake appreciatively—"I trotted out my Thlinget corpuscle and made Katlean sign on the dotted line. I only wish there'd been a few more to sign, the way Jean glad handed me after—sa-ay! What's burning you two?" She stared from Sondra to the captain.

Sondra was biting her lips to hold back expressions no lady should utter. The captain was glowering Now he jutted out his chin and mimicked acidly, "'Such a sweet boy And his heart so set on that contract!' So ye just took care of it all—ye did!" In his glare was helpless exasperation. He nodded, and softly, bitterly, snarled, "Lucky . . . Jean Reynall."

"Well, af-ter a-l-l!" Liane gasped defensively. "I only—"

"Ye only fixed it so I'll have to stop those poor devils of natives from getting even their small share of fish," the captain cut in harshly "I hope they thank ye for it properly when they're hungry this winter. And I hope Reynall takes pleasure in his contract, for 'tis little else he'll net from it!"

Kemp stirred uneasily. "If you'll excuse me. I—"

"Just a minute, Kemp." Sondra rose with a forced smile. "Liane and I have something to discuss with you. Shall we go down to the library and leave Dynamite to fulminate with his fish?"

"By all means! Liane captured Kemp's arm and whisked him through the door.

Sondra paused to lay a hand on the captain's shoulder. "Never mind, lamb. You said yourself the Indians' catch is of no importance; so what if he did get the contract?"

"'Tis not so much that he got it, Sondy, as how he got it."

"I know, darling. But if he got nothing important—"

"He's got one thing that's mighty important—and that's the divil's own luck!" The captain's eyes narrowed speculatively. "And he said . . he'd find a way . . . to collect on that contract. Sondy! Better fetch me that envelope marked 'Bates' from the safe downstairs. I'll just make sure that bit of paper is still secure under hatches."

Sondra found Kemp and Liane waiting for her in the library. "Listen to the smashing idea Kemp has for my torch dance, Sondra! He—"

"Wait a moment, until I've taken these papers up to Dynamite. He's a bit grumpy just now."

"When isn't he?" Liane murmured to Kemp from the side of her mouth.

Sondra went to a long tapestry panel between two bookcases and, tucking it back, revealed the front of an old-fashioned safe.

Kemp grinned. "Ah! The secret hiding-place."

"Nothing very secret about it," declared Sondra. "Mr. Jarvis gave the old relic to Dynamite last year when he got himself a new office safe. It was rather an eyesore, so I had it recessed like this."

"Another of my romantic notions blasted!" Kemp sighed with mock regret. "Nothing secret but the combination. And we won't spy on that Come Liane, face the window with me and keep your eye on the birdies outside. We must be above suspicion should some modern Jimmy Valentine ever loot the strongbox."

Sondra laughed as she spun the dial. "He wouldn't get enough to buy a postage stamp. Dynamite locks the thing only to stop Polena from doing away with old papers and maps he insists on keeping."

x x x

When Sondra returned after delivering the Bates envelope to her grandfather, her guests had gone into the drawing room.

Liane was standing on the temporary platform that had been erected to fill the alcove at the far end of the room. "Here's the perfect stage for my dance, Sondra!" She whirled on her toes.

"But—that's the musicians' dais."

"I know. But while I dance they can sit in the big bay window over there." She turned a cartwheel and landed lightly on her feet. "You see? No matter how big the crowd everyone will be able to get a good view of me up here. Now, Kemp, you tell her the big idea."

"Well, when I learned the nature of Liane's dance, I was reminded of a pyrotechnic powder — Venetian Fire—that we used for stage effects when I was at the Ac—er—university. It's sort of between a magnesium flare and the old-fashioned photographic flash powder, you know. When ignited, it explodes with a dull report, but burns slowly with a beautiful red light. Luckily I found some in our commissary, left over from last Fourth of July. So—"

"Here's what we'll do, Sondra," Liane broke in impetuously. "Lay the powder in a little trench along the front of the platform Then, at the climax of my dance, I'll swoop down with my torches and touch it off while the drums roll and the saxes scream. Boom! Waaa-ahh! I'll dance the finale in the midst of leaping ruby flames. Isn't it gorgeous?"

"Well—yes. But I don't want you to set the house afire."

"There's not a bit of danger, Sondra," Kemp assured her. "There's not enough heat in it to ignite a sheet of paper."

"And you won't need to give a single thought to the arrangements, Sondra. Kemp will manage the lights and everything. By the way, Kemp, what are you going to wear?"

He grinned. "In deference to your Thlinget corpuscle, I'm going savage. You've seen that splendid Killer Whale blanket and crest hat down at the Indian School Museum?"

"You'd roast to death in that layout, you nut! Besides, they wouldn't let it out of the museum for love nor money."

"I'm not asking them, my dear. Ikeda, who is a clever copyist, is making a duplicate on heavy cream silk. He will stain my hair black, of course, to go with it."

"Oh, Kemp!" Sondra cried reproachfully. "Going to all that trouble when you might have worn the uniform and decorations of Michael Karmanova!"

He turned his back on Liane and, stepping close to Sondra, looked down into her face with an odd, wistful expression. "A naval uniform—with decorations," he repeated softly. "My darling—you would do me much honor. Much more than I—deserve."

B. E. F. Armored Cars and Tanks Engage Germans

Correspondent is Told Germany Had Two Armored Divisions in Van of Attack Synchronized With Terrific Aerial Bombing

NEW FRONT FORMED

Grim Evidence of What Total War Means as Reporter Makes Trip Over 300 Miles of Belgian Soil — Thousands of Refugees Hurry From Front Areas

By DREW MIDDLETON
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the British Expeditionary Force in Belgium, May 12—(Delayed)—(AP)—Tanks and armored cars of the British Expeditionary Force threw their first fire into the advancing Germans today, and there was no doubt that the first great battle of this war had begun.

Informed sources told me the Germans had two armored divisions in the van of the attack; synchronized with a terrific aerial bombing.

Despite serious losses in The Netherlands, Belgium and France—placed by some in the neighborhood of 200 planes—the German fliers still are hammering at their objectives.

New Front Established

A new front was established by landing of German parachute troops behind the Allied lines.

As I write, this dingy hotel shakes with the thuds of bombs falling outside the town and with the deep "twung twung" of anti-aircraft batteries.

I have been on the continent just 36 hours, but I have heard sirens scream the "alerte" 11 times, seen six Nazi bombers methodically lay their eggs, watched two fall burning to earth and seen scars of their operations.

A railway which Germans bombed at dawn was uncut. A French observer counted 18 craters, but said proudly "they were hurried, those devils, look—"

Sure enough, there was a train chugging steadily along the tracks.

Grim Evidence of War

In a journey of nearly 300 miles over this little nation there was grim evidence of what total war means.

There was two-way traffic on the roads. Moving toward the distant sound of guns were British men, materials and munitions in trucks, widely spaced to offer unattractive bombing targets.

Moving slowly away from the guns was another army—the army of the homeless and stricken. Refugees went through the thick white dust toward the safety that may lie behind the lines.

The rich rode in cars, the poor rode in trucks, on burdened bicycles or walked.

"We knew nothing," they said. "Friday morning there came the explosion. Our windows broke. The little boy across the street—so bright a little boy—is dead. So we left."

Celanese Company Officials in N. Y.

Drummondville, Que., May 13—(CP) — Officials of the strike-bound plant here of Canadian Celanese Limited left today for New York, reportedly to confer with directors of the company.

As the officials departed for the head office, a skeleton staff remained within the big plant, where 2,500 textile workers went on strike Saturday after the breakdown of a week of negotiations on the question of union recognition.

All was quiet today with three lone pickets patrolling the roadway outside the plant, on the outskirts of this eastern township's industrial centre.

LEFT CAUCUS ROOM WHILE MEMBERS DISCUSSED LETTER

If Members Decide Not to Accept Resignation, Leader Will Seek Seat in Commons

CHOOSE HOUSE LEADER

Hanson, Harris, Green and Grote Stirling in Line for Position

Ottawa, May 13 (CP)—Conservative leader Manion today tendered his resignation as party leader to a caucus of newly-elected Conservative members of the House of Commons and then left the caucus room while his resignation was being discussed.

Dr. Manion, elected party leader at the national convention in 1938, suffered personal defeat in Fort William constitpency in the Dominion election March 26. He said it was his personal wish to retire.

"But I realize my first obligation is to the party, as is yours," said Dr. Manion in submitting his resignation.

He added:

"Therefore, if you should decide that in the best interests of the party you cannot accept my resignation my duty will be to return to the House of Commons as early as possible to render the highest public service of which I am capable."

Today's caucus was called to choose a temporary house leader to head the 38 Conservative members as the leader of the official opposition when parliament meets on Thursday. Also up for consideration was the question of permanent leadership.

Those in the running for temporary house leadership included Hon. R. B. Hanson, York-Sunbury; Joseph Harris, Toronto-Danforth; Howard Green, Vancouver South, and Hon. Grote Stirling, Yale.

Admits Severe Defeat

"In the recent election our party met a very severe defeat," said Dr. Manion. "Although we cannot help but regret the outcome, yet we need have nothing but pride in our campaign attitude on Canadian and Empire affairs.

"I am still convinced the program we proposed in the election was in the very best interests of our country and events since then justify this statement."

Dr. Manion said that it was his opinion, and that of most of the party's National Government candidates that the chief cause of defeat "was the fear in the minds of a majority of the voters that there was a greater danger of conscription being instituted under us than under the King Government."

In regard to his resignation Dr. Manion suggested to the caucus "it might be advisable not to come to a final conclusion until perhaps Wednesday."

Before leaving the caucus room Dr. Manion said no matter what the decision of the caucus regarding his resignation he would always remember with gratitude the assistance of candidates and other friends in the campaign and assured the gathering of his continued interest and co-operation in party undertakings.

COUNTER-ATTACK STALLS NAZI DRIVE IN TONGRES AREA

Enemy Only Reached Nine Miles From Dutch Border Before Being Halted

ATTEMPT THRUSTS

Ranking Members of French and British General Staff Confer With King Leopold

Paris, May 13—(CP)—A heavy counter-attack launched last night stalled the German drive into Belgium in the Tongres area, nine miles from the Dutch border, military sources reported today.

The counter-attack was carried out by motorized French forces. Tongres, 12 miles northwest of Liege, is midway between Maastright, Netherlands' border city, and Waremme, Belgium.

(Belgian Premier Hubert Pierlot yesterday announced: "Despite the stubborn resistance of our troops, the Germans advanced as far as the outskirts of Tongres, and in the evening the first elements reached Waremme.")

Belgian troops are under heavy enemy pressure in the Ardennes forest area. Heavy fighting is underway along the length of the Franco-Luxembourg border, from Langwy to the banks of the Moselle.

A German attack to the east of the Moselle, which marks the southeastern Luxembourg border, was reported repulsed.

No general offensive was reported from the Maginot line proper, but the Nazis have been attempting a series of strong thrusts in the Forbach and Orenthal salients.

French Defence Minister Edouard Daladier, accompanied by ranking members of the French and British general staffs, was disclosed to have conferred in Belgium with King Leopold during a

DUTCH PRINCESS AND CHILDREN NOW IN LONDON

Accompanied by Prince Bernhard, Her Husband, Family Will Take Refuge in England

HUSBAND TO RETURN

Earl of Harewood, Brother-in-Law of King George, Meets Party at Station

London, May 13 (AP)—The heirs to the Royal House of The Netherlands—Princess Juliana, her husband Prince Bernhard, and their two children—arrived in London today.

Princess Juliana led her two-year-old daughter Beatrix by the hand, while nine-month-old Irene was brought in a gasproof box. Prince Bernhard carried one end of the box and a nurse the other.

The Earl of Harewood, brother-in-law of King George, met the Royal family at the Station.

A communique issued by the Foreign Office, with authority from the Dutch legation, stated that "her Royal Highness Princess Juliana of The Netherlands arrived in London today, accompanied by the two young Princesses, Beatrix and Irene.

"People of The Netherlands will be very happy to learn that their beloved Princess is in safety. It is of course, of paramount importance even if the worst should happen (for which fortunately there is no indication at present) that the Royal House of Orange-Nassau should be safe.

BELGIAN KING AGAIN LEADING HIS TROOPS INTO BATTLE

In 1914 King Albert of the Belgians personally took up the defence problem against the invading Germans. Today, his son, King Leopold, fights another German invasion. The young king is shown in a photo made a few years back when he led his own company of grenadiers through the streets of Brussels.

NAZIS ATTEMPT TO DRIVE WEDGE BETWEEN ARMIES

Authoritative British Source Says German Attack Developing as Expected

TRY TO WIN QUICKLY

London, May 13—(CP)—An authoritative British source said today that the main German attack on the lowlands was developing as expected and was attempting to drive a wedge between the Belgian and Dutch armies.

There were many indications, not necessary military, this British source said, that the Nazis "will take almost everything in an attempt to win this war quickly."

Britons were urged not to be disheartened "when they hear of certain withdrawals and should not be unduly pessimistic," he said, in emphasizing that reports for the next few days would be obscure, scarce and often inaccurate.

Information regarding parachutists in Rotterdam and The Hague he said, was obscure and frequently contradictory.

German parachutists, he said, all are very highly trained in offensive technique and "armed to the teeth." He charged that they were chosen for ruthlessness and wore Allied uniforms, civilian clothes, police and postal uniforms and even women's dresses.

HUNGARY CALLS 200,000 MORE

Seven Classes Summoned, Most of Reservists Being Notified by Wire

Belgrade, May 13—(CP-Havas)—Hungary has called up 200,000 additional men during the last two days, it was reported here today, and is filling in the thin ranks of the army marshalled along all its frontiers.

Seven classes were reported to have been summoned urgently most of the reservists being called by wire to join their units at once. In the city of Budapest alone 10,000 men were called in the last 24 hours.

Certain orders already issued for reservists to report on May 15 were revised to read May 12. These troops are being used to reinforce the three army corps along the Rumanian and Slovak borders and the units stationed at Szeged near the Yugoslav border and in the upper Hungary around Kassa.

These reinforcements bring the Hungarian army to 350,000. Men under the colors totalled only 150,000 three days ago.

TRAFFIC ACCOUNTS FOR 5 OF THIRTEEN DEATHS IN ONT.

Husband Killed and Wife Critically Injured When Car Overturns Near Huntsville

ATHLETE KILLED

By the Canadian Press

Thirteen persons died in Ontario during the weekend through accidents and in another case, self-destruction was given as the cause. The fatalities came in mishaps involving automobiles, a train, falls, a brawl, and burns, while one man died of injuries suffered when trampled by a horse.

Traffic accounted for five deaths, house falls two and burns three. James E. Joiner, 74, retired Huntsville business man, was killed Sunday and his wife critically injured when their automobile skidded and overturned in a ditch near Bracebridge while they were on their way to a funeral.

Two of the other fatalities involved bicycles. Russell Hogue, 33, Mar, was killed when his bicycle collided with a truck driven by A. E. Hillman of Owen Sound. The accident occurred near Wiarton. Ellis Wintermute, 13-year-old Belmont athlete, was killed when his bicycle was struck by an automobile driven by Peter Lawson, Jr., 24, London, a friend.

SWEDEN ANXIOUS OVER REPORT

German Warships Reported to be Passing Through Kiel Canal

Stockholm, May 13—(CP)—Sweden kept anxious vigil today over sea and air approaches to her territory from German bases. There were reports German troopships were passing through the Kiel canal and rumors that a sudden air attack was feared.

(These reports were declared in Berlin to be a "stupid swindle.")

As belief the main war arena had shifted from Norway, on Sweden's border, became tinged with doubt over the security of Swedish neutrality, the Government yesterday ordered total blackout indefinitely.

War to Victory In Spite of Terrors Churchill's Aim

Preliminary Stage Has Arrived of 'One of Greatest Battles in History,' New Prime Minister Warns Nation

GO FORWARD UNITED

Premier Tells House Hurriedly Summoned — 'I Have Nothing to Offer but Blood, Toil, Tears and Sweat' — War Secretary Eden May Shortly Make Statement on Formation of Volunteer Corps of Older Men 'for Instant Action in Any Locality' Because of Danger of Enemy Parachutists

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 13—(CP Cable) — Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today that he had only one policy, to wage war with one aim, to achieve victory, when appealing for a vote of confidence in his new administration.

As a symbol of Britain's new political unity, the House unanimously voted confidence in Mr. Churchill's government the vote being 381 to 0.

With Clement Attlee, Lord Privy Seal, sitting on one side of him on the treasury bench and Neville Chamberlain, Lord President of the Council on the other, Britain's new Prime Minister warned the country that the preliminary stage has arrived of "one of the greatest battles in history."

He urged the nation as a whole to "go forward together with our united strength."

The House, called together without advance public notice, adjourned until May 21.

Churchill, Chamberlain Cheered

When he entered the Chamber before the short debate, Mr. Churchill was cheered loudly, but Mr. Chamberlain, who followed a minute later, received an even bigger cheer.

Only two voices were raised against the new coalition, those of James Maxton, Scottish pacifist and anti-war advocate and his fellow member of the Independent Labor Party, Campbell Stephen.

They forced the House to a division on the Prime Minister's motion but, having to act as "tel'ers"—counters—for the "no's" they could not vote in the lobby, and had no votes to count.

"Extreme Urgency of Events."

Mr. Churchill reported his formation of a war cabinet of five men was carried out in one day because of "the extreme urgency and rigor of events."

He told the House, suddenly summoned from recess for a day, that "I have nothing to offer but blood, toil, tears and sweat."

The new prime minister received a great ovation as he appeared.

"Our policy," Mr. Churchill said, "is to wage war by sea, land and air with all our might and with all the strength that God can give us and to wage war against a monstrous tyranny never surpassed in the dark and lamentable catalogue of human crime."

The retiring prime minister, Neville Chamberlain, whom Mr. Churchill made Lord President of the Council in the new war cabinet, also received an ovation as he entered the House with his new chief.

Resolution Is Presented.

Mr. Churchill immediately upon the opening of the session presented a resolution "that this House welcomes formation of a government representing the united and inflexible resolve of the nation to prosecute the war with Germany to a victorious conclusion."

He said the House would adjourn after today's proceedings to May 21, the original date for its recall, with the usual provision for an earlier meeting if necessary.

ITALY REINFORCES ALPINE FRONTIER FACING FRANCE

Additional Reservists Called to Strengthen Army of 1,250,000 Men

ANTI-ALLIED SENTIMENT

Propaganda is Continued Against Allied Contraband Control in Mediterranean

Rome, May 13—(AP) — In the midst of a rising anti-Allied campaign, Italy busily reinforced her Littorio line of fortified positions along the western Alpine frontier facing France today and, according to Italian sources, called out additional reservists to reinforce her army of 1,250,000 men.

There were two major expressions of anti-Allied sentiment, one a series of student demonstrations that brought out 500 soldiers and police to protect the British and French embassies, the other continued propaganda against British-French contraband control over shipping in the Mediterranean.

In addition, Catholic sources announced that English and Scottish seminaries for student priests were being closed and that the Belgian seminary had been closed.

No comment on the call for fresh reservists was available in authoritative quarters on the grounds that it was military information, but one informed source said the figure of 1,000,000 men published abroad probably was exaggerated.

Guards Hold Back Students

The British legation to the Holy See, as well as authorities at the Vatican, was reported reliably to have advised the English and Scottish students it would be prudent for them to go home.

Infantry, carabibieri and mounted police in doorways, courtyards and streets prevented groups of students from reaching the British and French embassies. It was reported the Italian students had been let off from their classes for what was planned to be a large demonstration.

BODY OF YOUTH NOT RECOVERED

Efforts to locate the body of 17-year-old George Kingsbury, who was drowned in Brighton Bay last week when the sailing craft in which he was boating, capsized, proved futile over the week-end. A continued four-day search has been in progress seeking the body, but without results, police authorities from Brighton admitted today.

On Saturday an R.C.A.F. plane is said to have flown over Brighton Bay on several occasions in an effort to locate the body from above, but here again the efforts proved without results. The plane is said to have flown both at high and low altitudes in an effort to locate the body, this practice being recognized as one of the most successful methods in the location of drowned bodies.

It is the belief of authorities that the high winds of last week may have caused the body to drift some distance towards shore and into weed beds, however.

Monthly Breakfast Of Holy Name Society Outstanding Success

The regular monthly breakfast of the Holy Name Society and the Knights of Columbus was held on Sunday morning, May 12 after the 8.30 Mass.

The attendance was the finest of the year which speaks well for the meals which have been prepared by Mr. Ted Royal and Mr. George Lee.

The tables were beautifully arranged in St. Michael's Auditorium by the Boy Scouts and the Children of Mary, the latter serving the breakfast under the direction of their capable President, Miss Donoghue.

The chairman, Mr. Harold Barrett, introduced the guest speaker for the occasion, Rev. Father Gallery and after a few words by Rt. Rev. Monsignor Nicholson, Father Gallery delivered an interesting address.

Father Gallery claimed that unison in all organizations was a necessity, more so today than perhaps ever before and in the light of gaining unison he highly recommended the Communion breakfasts. The work of the Boy Scouts also brought favourable mention. The speaker said that the world of tomorrow depended on the youth of today. Twenty years ago the youth of Germany were to us of little importance but today they are endangering the safety of the world. The youth then cannot be too carefully schooled in the lessons of democracy and that the Boy Scouts were a shining proof of the parish work in fostering democratic education.

The speaker praised the society on its fine work in the past and hoped that its undertakings would be as successful in the future. Father Gallery concluded by saying that the sucess of the future depended on the present.

The President in a few words thanked the members for their presence and urged a little more interest in the study clubs. He thanked Rev. Father Gallery for his splendid address.

The most successful breakfast of the year was brought to a close by a toast to the King.

Renewal of Mission At St. Michael's

There was a large attendance on Sunday evening and a large number was present at the Masses this morning. Devotions each night of the Mission will be at 7:30. The Mission is being preached by Rev. Father Caul, C.SS.R. and Rev. Father Gallery, C.SS.R.

Large Crowds Throng Through Hospital on Opening Day

Many Are Surprised by the Beauty of New Wing as Well as the Splendid Facilities for Treating Patients

INSPECT NURSES' HOME

Exemplification of the faith and pride in an institution that is not only a distinct pride to the district it serves but a handsome testimonial to the foresight and energy of that loyal group of women, The Women's Christian Association, was seen here Sunday when hundreds of people took advantage of National Hospital Day to inspect the beautiful new wing and other buildings that comprise the Belleville General Hospital.

From two o'clock until five, the time allotted for the inspection, a steady stream of people ranging in age from nine to ninety—a cross-section of the life of the district—passed through the doors of the various buildings, some of them for the first time in their lives, others veterans in hospital experience.

They gazed in something akin to awe as they passed through the various departments of the hospital in groups of twenty-five escorted by trim efficient nurses.

They waited patiently outside the building in ever-increasing numbers during the early part of the afternoon, until earlier groups had finished their inspection.

And the large crowd, if after-inspection comment can be taken as a criterion, placed a definite stamp of approval on the hospital proper, the staff and the new wing. "Why, I never dreamed that Belleville possessed such a beautiful place," an elderly lady commented. "It is simply wonderful."

Institution To Be Proud Of

"You should be proud to have such an institution, and we should be glad that such facilities are available," a farmer told one of the nurses. On all sides was heard laudatory comment, on not only the construction and modern equipment that is now the hospital, but on the efficiency and alertness of the staff, and other phases of hospital life so important to the institution.

From the main entrance the groups were taken to the third floor of the new wing, where they were shown the modern maternity departments. Usher nurses here under Miss M. S. Byers, floor supervisor explained and pointed out the various departments of this important phase of hospitalization. From here to the second floor where three operating rooms are situated, the groups were taken. Internes and nurses in full operating room dress, were seen standing over a "patient" in one of the major rooms. Supervisor Miss M. Youmans was in charge on this floor, with Miss H. M. Collier in charge of the operating rooms.

The up-to-date kitchens and dining rooms on the ground floor with Miss Lucille Bertram in charge proved a point of interest. The modern X-ray departments in charge of Mr. George Williams, hospital technician were shown to the groups. The mysteries of the hospital's up-to-date pharmacy where to date upwards of 6,500 prescriptions have been made by Pharmacist J. G. Barclay, were explained by those in charge. Central supply rooms, bathrooms and the new circular ambulance entrance were visited in turn.

In the modern kitchens the groups saw a competent staff preparing the evening meal for the 150 patients now in the hospital. Quietly, efficiently the trays were filled and taken to the various rooms under the supervision of Chief Dietitian Miss Nellie Burke and Assistant Dietition Elizabeth Ketcheson.

But despite the fact that literally hundreds of people were passing through the hospital at the time, the every-day routine of the institution functioned as smoothly as though no visitors were present. The quiet yet efficient life of the modern hospital went on apace, as trim, uniformed nurses went about their duties as though nothing was going on about them.

Modern Rooms

Through the twenty-five private and nine semi-private rooms that are the last word in furnishings, equipment and comforts for the patient the curious crowds were escorted. Small cards placed on the doors of the room signified the identity of the donors. Here perhaps it was that the crowds lingered a bit longer than in other departments, for the beauty and comfort of the rooms attracted the visitors as perhaps did nothing else in the hospital.

Finishing their inspection of the hospital proper and the new wing, the visitors were taken to the nurses' residences where the homey, comfortable quarters of the staff are located. Here they were shown the rooms where the staff sleep, the spacious waiting rooms and lounges, and the many other important phases that are here for the comfort of that important cog in a modern hospital machine, the nurse.

A touch of actual hospital atmosphere was injected into the picture during the latter hours of the inspection when a number of accident victims were rushed to the institution. Screaming sirens of ambulances suddenly shattered the air as the patients were hurried to the hospital for examination and treatment. Perhaps a few of the people thought it was but a part of the inspection proceedings, but tell-tale bloodstains and hurrying doctors and nurses bespoke the grim truth. Wide-eyed spectators stood by as the medical, X-ray and operating staff quickly functioned.

And within a few minutes, with the patients either treated or in bed, the life of the institution resumed its normal functioning.

Satisfaction at the keen interest shown by residents of the city and district in their hospital was expressed by Hospital Administrator Gordon Friesen.

"It has been a very busy day for us," he commented, "but any efforts have been well worth while. It is gratifying to see the interest shown by the general public, and to know that they have a full realization of what their hospital means to them."

NINE INJURED IN 5 ACCIDENTS

Three Seriously Injured in Epidemic of Car Accidents in Belleville District

Nine people were injured, three of them seriously, and admitted to Belleville General Hospital over the week-end as five accidents took their toll on traffic-congested highways of Belleville and district.

Eleven-year-old Everett Parks, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Parks, farmers residing a few miles south of the city on the Picton-Belleville highway, is suffering with a fractured leg and severe head and facial lacerations incurred when he was struck by a car said to have been driven by Norman Holmes, Rednersville.

Parents of the injured boy said the youth is hard of hearing and did not hear the horn of the Holmes car which was travelling toward Belleville. Young Parks, who was walking along the highway near his home, turned directly into the path of the oncoming automobile, investigating Provincial Police Officer D. Adair was told. He was rushed to hospital by Martin's ambulance where he was attended to by Dr. Ralph Bird.

Attempts to Pass

Attempting to pass a car on the Trenton-Belleville highway a mile west of the city, Joseph Elliott, of Frankford, lost control of his car when he endeavoured to pull it back into the traffic lane yesterday afternoon. The automobile swerved across the highway and crashed into a large tree, inflicting injuries on the seven passengers. The automobile was damaged beyond repair. Charges are pending.

Elliott was rushed to hospital in an unconscious condition suffering from head injuries and concussion, while Sidney Cottrell, Trenton, sustained a fractured arm and a fracture of the pelvis. Jack Clapp, George Ferguson, Jack Couture, all of Trenton, and two young lady passengers received minor cuts and abrasions and were able to leave the hospital a few hours after receiving treatment.

The injured people were taken to hospital by Imlah's ambulance, where they were treated by Dr. Bird and Dr. R. M. Anderson.

Crashes Into Pole

Bruce Sproule, Frankford, sustained superficial lacerations Saturday night when the automobile in which he was riding crashed into a telephone pole one mile west of the city on Highway No. 2. Mr. Sproule was taken to the hospital where the most serious injury, a deep cut below the eye, was medically treated and he was later released.

Sproule was riding with W. J. Taylor, Trenton, when, it is alleged, that Taylor lost control of his car, crashing it into a pole. Slight damage resulted. Taylor had only purchased the vehicle a short time previously and had driven it but 12 miles, Highway Patrolman Sam Ervine was told on his investigation.

Highway Patrol Active

The Provincial Highway patrol was active in the district at all hours over the week-end; a night motor patrol being in operation on Saturday and Sunday nights from Brighton to Deseronto in this district in an effort to minimize motor accidents on the open highway. While on duty yesterday Detective Fred Isard apprehended a Montreal motorist speeding at an alleged rate of 55 miles per hour along Highland Avenue. The man admitted his guilt and paid $5.00 and costs before continuing on his journey, a wiser, but more sorry driver.

On Highway No. 14, six miles south of Belleville, a fourth accident was reported shortly after midnight last night when two cars sideswiped, causing considerable fender and running board damage to both vehicles. The northbound car was driven by Earl Pringle and a southbound vehicle by Evan Kostoff of Picton. Constable Sam Ervine investigated and stated that charges were pending as there had doubtless been carelessness on the part of at least one driver. No personal injuries were sustained, however.

Struck by Car

Struck by a motor car as he walked along the highway near his home, 80-year-old Samuel Lake of Stockdale, was seriously injured on Saturday night and rushed to the Belleville hospital. Lake was suffering from extensive scalp lacerations and facial bruises, Dr. G. H. Stobie announced after treating the injured man at the hospital. The injuries were superficial, however.

According to investigating police Mr. Lake stepped directly into the path of a motor car driven by two Czech employees of Frankford, but the motorists were not held to blame.

Frankford Writer Rallies To Defence of 'Home Town'

Deplores Attitude of Press in Describing Village as "Ghost Town"

HISTORY REVIEWED

By Mrs. Jessie Montgomery

Frankford, Ont — Nestled among the beautiful hills where Cole Creek empties its waters into the Trent River, some eight miles north of the town of Trenton snuggles the thriving little village of "Frankford."

This village during the past ten months has been minimized, x-rayed and literally torn to pieces in such a manner that the residents are wondering what next may be published about it.

"Ghost Town"

They do not like such expressions as "the ghost town," "the dusty main street" and the reference to the name "Frankford" as being a German name. But you surely know that there is a vast difference between a "ford" and a "fort," and therein lies the explanation.

But wait, I must deal with one thing at a time and that will involve a large amount of back history which I have endeavoured to hunt up for your benefit.

This place has always been, ever since the time of the Indians, a landmark. It was then called "The Head of the Nine Miles," nine miles of rapids with a descent of about 100 feet to Lake Ontario.

When lumbering was in its infancy just north of the present village of Frankford where the island separates the waters of the Trent River into two channels, you may still see the remains of the old piers where the logs were rafted and sent downstream to the lake. At this place the Hetherington Mill was built. This old mill was sold and re-sold till it eventually was owned by the "Canadian Pulp and Paperboard Mill." At one time this mill employed as high as 175 employees with excellent pay. In 1930 this mill shut down but the pulp mill is again running three shifts a day and employing around 25 men.

Dam Erected

In 1871 Robins erected, at considerable expense, a dam across the Trent River with an immense head of water, making it one of the finest mill privileges in the country. It was suitable for any description of manufacturing purposes. In 1878 there were flour mills, saw mills, a woollen factory, several stores, as many as five taverns, a good stone public school and three churches. At that time its population was around 500.

The canning factory we have at the present is the third canning factory, the other two being burned down. At one time several thriving energetic Frankford men owned and operated it. In the past few years during its busy season it employed in the neighborhood of 70 men and women, a few are employed yearly.

Hydro Centre

Then some two years ago the H.E.P.C. established an office here. They did so, not because it was a dead village and they liked ghosts, but because it was central for rural services. They service Trenton, Campbellford, Warkworth, Brighton and Frankford and all the surrounding territory. There are in all some 1,300 consumers, 300 of whom are in the village of Frankford. In the summer time they employ as high as 40 men for rural construction and have a regular staff of 8 men.

So you see that previous to 1939 the village was far from being dead and there were more on the employment list than in many villages of the same size in Ontario and why writers and publishers wish to belittle it so much is more than one can see.

New Industry

Oh yes, we wish to give its share of credit to the present "Bata Shoe Company." We are proud to think that they too have chosen this site as others before them have done. But why did they do it? One reason was the scenery and its likeness to their home land but most important of all was the accommodations and facilities that the place provided. They visited all over Ontario, yes, and even went farther afield, but after summing it all up they chose Frankford and we are proud of it.

Not a German Name

Now as regards the name. Oh no, it is not a German name and many of our forefathers would be sorely grieved if they knew it was being slandered thus.

About the year 1837 Abel Scott built a saw mill at the mouth of Cole Creek and the place was often called "Scott's Mill" or "Cole Creek." Around about that time or a little later, a man by the name of J. C. Franck lived about where the J. Carr residence now stands.

At this place the people were forced to ford the river as there was no bridge. During Sir Francis Bond Head's administration he visited Scott's Mills and it was "he" who gave it the name of Frankford which it still retains. So its name, too, has a historical setting.

During the coming months visit Frankford and see it for yourselves. See the new construction well under way. Frankford is "booming" not for the first or second time and we hope not for the last.

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

By late afternoon of the captain's birthday, the spacious old paneled rooms of Echo House were ready for the party, save for flowers. These, Kemp had asked permission to send.

Sondra was in the kitchen having a last work with old Jodin, the cook, when Polena ushered in Kemp, his blond face, smiling and eager showing above an armload of long pasteboard boxes. Behind him, similarly laden, came Ikeda.

"The florists are coming, hurray, hurray!" chanted Kemp. Open them up, Ikeda—here, on this table. That's it. Like 'em, lady?"

"Oh!" Sondra's eyes were wide with surprise and delight. "Hothouse roses—from Seattle! Yellow, with sunset hearts!" She caught up an armful and held them against her face. "Kemp, they're exquisite, and you—you're a darling. Jodin—Polena—look! Bring vases and we'll fill them right now."

"Why all the excitement?" Liane sauntered in holding a crimson velvet robe about her. "Roses! Gosh, Kemp, you must have restored some florist's faith in Santa Claus. But—just my luck! The color won't go with my rose crinoline."

At the end of half an hour all the vases were filled. "Now, everybody," Sondra announced happily, "we'll carry them into the drawing room and place them."

Sondra was at the piano adjusting a silver bowl when she stopped suddenly, and stood listening with sideturned head. "I seem to hear something dripping . . ." She moved vaguely, following the sound which finally drew her to the door of the library. She looked inside.

"Good heavens! Polena! Kemp! Quick! The place is flooded!"

There was a concerted rush for the door. Liane drawled, "A deluge—but definitely! Coming through the ceiling. The pipes must have—O-mi-land!" she yelled in sudden recollection. Hoisting her velvet draperies, she raced for the stairs. "I left my bath running!"

Later, in the dripping confusion of the library, Polena flung down the cloth with which she was wiping some books and faced her mistress. "Miss Sondra, it's no use trying to get this room dried out before the guests come."

"But what can we do? What can we do?" cried Sondra.

Kemp came over and placed his hand on her shoulders. "Don't look so tragic, dear. Why not just lock the room and forget about it—until tomorrow?"

Sondra surveyed the damp walls, the empty shelves, the wet books, the soggy roll of carpet. "Yes, I suppose it's the only thing to do," she admitted with a dejected sigh. "Lock both doors, Polena, so no one can stray into this mess from either the drawing room or the reception room. Leave a key somewhere handy, so I shan't have to bother you in case I need to run in here for something. Or have you a spare key?"

"Yes, Miss Sondra. These doors open to any passkey. I'll leave one for you behind the potted fern in the reception room."

Evening. Echo House, high on its shadowy island, was gay with lights and laughter as Captain O'Moore's birthday party got under way.

Outside the Glory's charthouse, on a coil of rope, sat Shady Lane. His round eyes surveyed the gathering dusk with a look of houndlike melancholy.

"Certainly is a fine night for that old pirate's party," he sighed wistfully.

Jean Reynall, pacing the deck nearby, made no answer.

Shady's lonesome gaze yearned toward the blazing lights of Echo House. Each window up there was a rectangle of gleaming gold. High above all, the white beam of the cupola beacon thrust seaward through the tranquil night, as if in far-flung invitation to the festivities below.

Along the line of the causeway, and by the flagged steps to the great front door, moved silhouetted figures in the swaying hoop skirts, the tricornes, and the towering beavers of a bygone day. And occasionally as if wafted from the same era, faint strains of a Russian waltz drifted out on the still, forest-scented air.

"Those were the days, Jean!" Shady observed. "A man could really strut his stuff, decked out in a ruffled shirt, a peruke, and a sword."

Jean still made no response. Their years of close companionship on land and sea had taught Shady not to expect conversation when Jean was troubled.

O'Moore, the old devil, had certainly dealt them a terrific jolt when he weaseled out of that fish contract, and left them holding the empty cans.

That Jean had countered by signing up the Indian fleet, was small consolation. Shady, driving his crew, had just finished two days and a night of frenzied endeavor amongst that hodgepodge, trying to patch leaky hulls, antiquated motors, and rotten nets. The result was anything but reassuring; and all day Jean had been shooting wires up and down the coast to other fish operators.

"Shady," Jean paused before the big engineer. "The replies to all my wires are in—and the answer is, 'No.' O'Moore made no idle threat when he said he'd stop me from buying fish anywhere in Alaskan waters. He's out to smash us, Shady; and he'll do it unless we can outfight, or out-guess him."

Jean fell silent. Shady waited. It was when things looked most hopeless that Jean always came forth with some flashing plan of action. After some minutes of silence, Shady raised a flute held in his hand and piped an inquiring "Where Do We Go From Here?"

Jean gave a short, indulgent laugh. "We go to Shaman's Lagoon, you big anthropoid! For fish."

"Hold everything, skipper! I've been hearing about that hellhole. Bottleneck entrance, foul, shallow bottom, millrace currents that a boat can hardly navigate. Sure, the place is full of herring, but Moose Hardy says it simply can't be fished."

"It has been fished. By Indians, years ago, when the run failed elsewhere. I've been talking to old Ish, Katlean's great-uncle. He knows every rock and current in Shaman's Lagoon. He'll teach our young Indians the trick of fishing it. We'll run the whole Indian fleet in there and park it—what's the matter?"

Shady was shaking his head. "Not two boats in that fleet could make headway against even a four-knot tide."

"True; but between tides, twice a day, there's a forty-minute period of slack water. That's when our Indians will do their seining."

"But will they get enough fish, between tides, to keep our machines running?"

"Ish swears they will get more herring than any one cannery can pack."

"It's a chance — maybe," Shady conceded.

"Our only chance, and we're betting the works on it—because it's the one bet O'Moore seems likely to overlook. His big boats won't dare enter the lagoon, so once our fleet is in there fishing—"

"S-a-y! That old pirate will keep one of his boats off the mouth of the lagoon, just to bust up the schools before they have a chance to work inside."

"He will—if he learns our plans. But I'm hoping he doesn't think of it until after one big school has slipped in. At any rate, the small pods that constantly dribble in there will give us more fish than we could get elsewhere, with O'Moore fighting us. More questions, Shadrach?"

"One more. What if the herring all scram out of the place, after you start fishing it?"

"They can get out through that bottleneck only on an ebbing tide. We'll cork the bottle—with a length of our strongest net. We'll chain a long timber at an oblique angle across the channel above it, to protect that net from outgoing drift. We'll pull the cork on incoming tides to let the fish enter, if necessary. But if we're lucky, if just one big unbroken school gets into our bottle, we'll plug the neck behind 'em for keeps — and there's our season's pack!"

"By — my — sacred — crankshaft! skipper, I believe you'll pull it off."

"We've got to," Jean retorted grimly. "And the longer we can keep O'Moore in ignorance of our scheme, the better our chances. If this fine weather holds until the offshore run starts, we might send a boat or two out to sea to make a bluff at deep-water fishing, just as a blind."

"Even in fine weather, it'd be pretty chancy for those old crates—except, maybe, Katlean's Scundoo."

"Well, we'll worry about that when the time comes. Just now I've got another problem to . . ." He left the sentence unfinished, and abruptly resumed his nervous pacing of the deck.

The big engineer's eyes studied the tall silhouette, moving in the dusk; then shifted speculatively to the gray facade of Echo House. "One time I read where a doctor prescribed ballroom dancing for a case of edgy nerves," he drawled, with calculated irrelevance.

After a sidelong glance at the silent Reynall, he resumed his soliloquy. "General Sherman had something in that classic remark of his. If this fish war, for instance, hadn't boiled up in our faces, we might be up yonder with the little red-head, right now. Herding our dogs through a minuet, or the Suzy Q, or whatever she has coming off."

When this, too, elicited no response, he slightly raised his voice. "You know, Jean, I could go for that spunky little sorrel-top. I'm really no drafthorse on a dance floor. If I once got that little spitfire into my arms, I believe I could—"

"Stow it, Shady!"

Jean came to a stop and faced the other. For a moment in the dusk their eyes held; then Shady breathed, incredulously, "So that's it! You, that's ducked the passes of femmes from Saratoga to Shanghai—sunk now by a pint-sized thoroughbred who treats you like dirt. . . . Not—seriously, skipper?"

Jean Reynall nodded. Ever since we were kids. I didn't really know how seriously, until I met her again, grown-up. But she—" He shrugged and, turning, stood looking up at the lights of Echo House.

Shady sighed sympathetically. "A tough break, fella. I suppose she won't let you come within shouting distance so long as we're at war with her old wolf of a grandpa."

"But I must see her!" Jean burst out savagely. I want to talk to her about something that has nothing to do with my personal feelings. Something that—threatens her. She ignored my first warning, and I've got to find some way to impress her with the danger of the situation she and her bullheaded old grandfather have slid into. You see, I'm sort of handicapped by—oh, darn it, Shady. I can't go into it, even with you." He thrust a cigarette into his mouth and lit it. Then, suddenly, pitched his cigarette overside and started for the gangplank. "I'm going up to Echo House now," he decided, "and make her listen to me."

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

Under the prismatic brilliancy of crystal chandeliers, "Russian Night" at Echo House had reached a high point of gaiety. Sondra, standing alone on the bottom step of the wide stairs that curved upward from the reception room, was a radiant little figure in an old gown of fine creamy lace. Girdled high with a gold cord, it fell in graduated flounces to spread wide about her small, gold-sandaled feet. Her shoulders were bare, her short curls dusted with golden powder; and from one wrist dangled a gilt nosegay at the end of a long gold ribbon.

With a half-smile of happiness, she watched the colorful intermingling of the hundred guests who had put on the finery of their ancestors to do honor to Captain O'Moore. In ruffles and bustles and wide-swinging skirts; in baggy trousers, high stocks, and long flowered waistcoats, they danced in the drawing room, lounged in the dining room, shifted about the samovar in the reception room, and flirted on the stairs.

Most pleasing of all to Sondra was the fact that her grandfather was having a wonderful time. Jovial, silver-haired and handsome in his best uniform, he sat near the huge punch bowl in the dining room, holding court. A most democratic court it was, where O'Moore fishermen in "go-ashore kit" came and went in gayest amity among the costumed members of Sitka's social elite. All drank the captain's health with bows and verbal flourishes; while he, with witty tongue, rolled off responses in English, Russian, and waterfront Scandinavian — all tinctured with a brogue that grew more pronounced after each glass.

Polena, calm and competent, directed her corps of Indian servants, and presided with Jodin over the buffet supper. As the old housekeeper passed Sondra on some hospitable errand, the girl reached out and caught her hand. "It's a wonderful party, Polena. "It's—it's—perfect." Yet without knowing why, she felt it was not quite perfect, for her. Even as she spoke, she caught herself scanning the gay throng for one who could not possibly be there; and frowned, resenting Jean Reynall's power to make her feel his absence.

Her roving eye was caught by the tall figure of the Forest Man, standing beside the closed library door. Unmasked, his fringed buckskins inconspicuous in this gathering, he was watching the crowd through serenely thoughtful eyes.

Although she came up quickly behind him, the Forest Man turned instantly to greet her. "Sondra, my dear! It was kind of you to ask me to your splendid party."

She gave hib both her hands, and it touched her to see the gray that had come into his blond beard and hair during his three-year absence. "Oh, but it's good to have you back, Forest Man!" she told him, sincerely. "I hope you're here to stay a long, long time."

"I plan to," he said quietly. "The spruce here is perfect for the radio masts I must get out, so I'm building a cabin at the Place of Trees. A permanent camp. I want you to visit me there, just as you used to years ago. Remember?"

"I remember." She patted his arm affectionately. "And I'll come. I have my own runabout now, you know. "She was about to bring Jean Reynall's name up when Kemp came sauntering toward them. He was splendidly bizarre in his silken copy of the Killer Whale blanket and crest hat. The hat came low on his darkened hair, and an Indian mask hid his face.

"How!" Laughing, Sondra lifted her arm in an Indian salute. "The mask must be miserably hot, Kemp. Why don't you take it off now?"

"Must wear it until I've staged Liane's show. That comes right after this waltz. Shall we dance it, Sondra?"

A strange voice spoke from behind them. "Sorry, Chief Killer Whale. This one is promised to the U. S. Navy."

Sondra's heart did a sudden zoom and dive. That brusque, quarter-deck tone bore not the slightest resemblance to Jean's; yet she knew it was Reynall, even as she turned to face the commanding figure in the time-dimmed uniform of an American naval officer. Black mask and white wig could not disguise the unmistakable set of his head; his breadth of shoulder. Held speechless by his audacity, she had let him sweep her into the tide of dancers before she found her tongue.

"Captain Reynall," she said in a tense, guarded voice. "You have only a few minutes to escape from this house before everyone must unmask. Immediately after this waltz, Liane is going to—"

"I know. She told me all about her dance. But I came to see you—to talk to you, Sondra." He suddenly bent his head, and Sondra was stirred by the joyous wonder in his low voice. "Darling . . . I didn't come to tell you this, but I can't help myself. You're an adorable, delectable little cream-and-gold figurine in that gown. You're like something lovely out of a dream. You're—"

"Captain Reynall! There are a dozen husky fishermen here who would be delighted to throw you out if my grandfather gave the word. And he'll give it—the moment he recognizes you."

"Are you going to rush right over and tell him?" There was laughter in his voice. He swept her past Kemp who was standing beside the piano. Even in her mental turmoil Sondra was conscious she had never before danced so smoothly with any man.

"I—no. Not if you leave at once."

"But I can't leave. Not until you give me a chance to tell—"

"I'm not interested in anything you may have to tell me. I despise you. I won't listen to you. Now go!"

"Not at all. I'll stay here—and unmask with the others."

"You wouldn't dare!" Yet Sondra knew he would dare. She saw Kemp's mask slowly turning to follow their every move. Her fingers tightened on Reynall's shoulder. "Look! That's Kemp Starbuck in the Killer Whale blanket. I believe he suspects who you are. Please, oh p-l-e-a-s-e go, before you—spoil my party."

"Sondra!" The sudden gravity and sternness in his tone impressed her, despite herself. "Understand—this is no personal matter. I must tell you something—for your own good. Give me five minutes with you alone, where we can't be overheard."

"But—but how can I, with people all over the place? There's not a corner that someone's not likely to barge into. I—"

"Meet me outside, then. Behind the old banya."

She shook her head. "Can't leave my guests. A mob would be searching for me if I disappeared. I shan't have a single minute, unless . . ." Liane's dance flashed into her mind. While it was in progress, there'd be at least ten minutes with these rooms in darkness and all eyes focused on the dancer's dais. Sondra might slip out then, and not be missed. But . . .

While she hesitated, she saw Kemp weaving toward them through the dancers. Something purposeful in his stride set her heart thumping with near-panic. She knew, instinctively, she must avert any meeting between Kemp and Jean tonight.

"You must go—now! Quick, before Kemp—"

"Do I get that five minutes?"

"Yes, yes, yes! But let's get out of here. Swing off into the reception room as soon as you can."

He flashed a look about, then smoothly manoeuvred to place a group of dancers in the path of Kemp's advance. A moment later they were part of the chatting crowd in the reception room. Jean bent his head to hear Sondra's tense directions. "We'll go together to the front door, as if to step into the garden. Then you go out alone. When the coast is clear—just after Liane's dance starts—I'll slip out and meet you at the banya."

But just as they reached the front door, it swung open and a hilarious group of girls and men were marshaled in by a laughing pair of O'Moore's young boat-captains. One of the pair ushered their charges toward the dining room, exhorting, "Right this way, ladies and gentlemen, for the big show!" The other closed the door and placed himself before it. When Sondra motioned him aside so Jean could go out, he spread his arms, grinning good-naturedly. "Sorry, Miss Sondra. Captain's orders. Nobody to leave the house till after Miss Bootrin's act. Look, the waltz is ended, so it won't be long now!"

Sondra turned to look. The musicians were leaving their dais, and Kemp, thank heaven, was mounting it to set the stage for the climax of Liane's dance. Polena's boys were placing canvas chairs for the audience.

LOVER COME BACK—23 . . . . . .

A few minutes more, and the reception room would be deserted. Jean couldn't stay here then without attracting disastrous attention. She must get him out of sight until, unobserved, he could leave the house for the banya.

As her mind desperately shuttled expedients, she remembered the locked library, and the key Polena had put behind the potted fern. That was it! She'd let Jean into the library under cover of the chattering, expectant crowd now pressing toward the doors of the dining and drawing rooms. After those doors were closed, and the overture to Liane's dance well under way, it would be safe for him to slip out.

She drew Jean in front of the library door and explained the plan in a hasty undertone. "Got it?" she finished.

He was chuckling behind his mask. "Okay. Do I slug the guard on the way out?"

"Oh, he'll be inside watching Liane, I hope. But if he isn't, you can drop out of the library window."

Jean disappeared into the library so adroitly that even Sondra scarcely noticed. She knotted the library key on the gold ribbon about her wrist, and joined the last-minute rush of laggards headed for the drawing room.

At the door she encountered Kemp, still wearing his grotesque mask. "Ah, there you are, Sondra!" He caught her hand, and kept it. "Is everyone inside? We must close these doors in just a minute now." He beckoned to the guard at the front entrance, and as the big fellow came over, Kemp motioned him inside. "Mustn't miss the show, Jerry."

Jerry passed inside, and Sondra's heart game a little leap. That left nothing in the way of Jean's departure, once this door was closed.

The orchestra struck up the first movement to the overture; but Kemp still lingered in the doorway, his masked face turning this way and that, as if looking for someone in the reception room. "I don't see our gallant Navy man," he remarked. "Has he fled, like Cinderella, before the stroke of midnight?" His light, ironic tone revealed little more than did his Indian mask; yet Sondra knew, without a doubt, that he had recognized Reynall.

She managed a careless laugh. "Oh, I sent him off, Kemp. He was—that insufferable Jean Reynall."

"Really!" Kemp sounded amused. "Rather bearding the lion, wasn't he, coming here uninvited?"

"Boy Scout bravado. Let's skip it."

Alexander came up. "You may close the doors now," directed Kemp "Then go in and stand by the drawing room light switch, Alexander. I'll be at the other switch, in the dining room. When I signal, you turn off your lights—exactly as we rehearsed it. Remember?"

But Alexander wasn't quite sure. Kemp began a humbled explanation. The music, with quickened beat, swept into the final movement of the overture.

Sondra looked at Kemp's back, momentarily turned toward her. Then, unobserved, she slipped out through the butler's pantry to the kitchen, and thence out the back door into the night-dim garden.

It's a Lot Easier than you think!

The model illustrated is the McLaughlin-Buick SPECIAL four-door touring sedan.

YEAR after year we see the same thing happening—people "stepping up" to bigger cars and better cars—people getting for themselves the better things in life.

This year is no exception.

Many buyers of the good-looking Buick SPECIAL you see pictured here traded in a car from the lowest-price group. Some of them were merely fulfilling a long-time ambition to own a full-sized car, a big straight-eight, amply powered, steady-riding, roomy.

Others were simply taking advantage of a bargain too good to pass up.

But all of them found it easier than you'd think to step up to a McLaughlin-Buick. For this big straight-eight costs less than some sixes. Its price includes many things you'd pay extra for elsewhere. It includes features you can't buy anywhere else, such as recoil-mounted Knee-Action, pressure-sealed cooling, and coil springs that never need lubricating, combined with torque-tube drive.

And above all is the simple fact that this is a Buick, precision-built to Buick quality standards.

Why don't you look into how easy it is to buy? Why not get the net figures, delivered price including equipment?

Work out the per-week cost, count in the lower, long-haul maintenance of a car that's built to take it for years and years.

Others are finding it easy to step up to Buick—and if they can do it, so can you!

"Best buy's Buick!"

CONFIDENCE IN MR. CHURCHILL AS PREMIER

London newspapers expressing the voice of the people are confident in the selection of Winston Churchill to succeed Prime Minister Chamberlain at the helm of affairs during the war.

The Times says there are no dangerous gaps of policy and no hesitation. The Telegraph declares that Mr. Churchill understands the mind of Hitler and that he is "capable of developing the powers of ingenuity and resources which this war demands. He will answer daring with daring."

The Daily Mirror expresses a thought that "only those who can help us to victory are now needed. The highest service the others can render in this moment of destiny is to stand aside."

Other papers express fullest confidence in Mr. Churchill.

The Daily Mail sees in the new premier one "called by destiny to serve the nation in this grave hour. His splendid qualities of action as a man of action and imagination need no recital."

On the broad shoulders of this great figure who has been one of the outstanding public men of Britain, the mantle of responsibility falls. Son of of Lord Randolph Churchill, whose father was the Seventh Duke of Marlborough, Winston Churchill is a descendant of John Churchill, First Duke of Marblorough, English General in the War of the Spanish Succession.

The task he assumes is the most important in the world today and it is confidently believed that his genius will do much to bring Britain and the Allies in the course of time to that victory which will remove the terrible curse which Hitler has brought upon humanity.

WAR IS BEGUN IN EARNEST

The war has come in earnest, in that fullness which the world has been expecting since last September. The Low Countries have been thrown into the struggle by the German invasion intended to sweep to the English Channel. These neutrals had read in Hitler's actions that they were to be picked as the path Germany wished to take to strike a blow at France and Britain and were prepared. It was no August 1914 again.

Four great Allies are marching together and putting up that fight which will witness some of the most desperate fighting. Belgians, British and French know modern war from their experience in 1914-18 over the same ground but the Netherlanders have already in four days' fighting proven themselves among the best soldiers, though the Dutch armies had not known fire. They are giving opposition to the Germans that is holding them back.

It is a German Blitzkrieg, but it lacks the desired completeness Adolf Hitler would desire. The Germans can make no rapid advance, rather the Dutch and the Belgians and the Allies are holding them in check.

Germans now go parachuting and have begun the use of this type of strategy which Russia used to a slight degree in the Finnish war.

Germans have struck in some ways the stride of their methods of the former war. On the first day of the war they bombed civilians and hospitals and civilian lives were lost. German atrocities are however nothing new to the world which remembers the last war and the stories of German savagery in Poland.

Some observers point to a sense of desperation on the part of the enemy. He knows that beyond the English Channel is the land which will crush him unless by some foul means he can gain an advantage. Such an enemy spares nothing, he throws away German lives as if they were less than mud and he will not spare anything in Allied lands: he is the incarnation of destruction and desperation. He knows that if he cannot deal an effective blow at Britain he loses the war. Like a criminal he defies every law.

Adolf Hitler knows that he must strike hard and relentlessly. The present time is the only time that he can make any claim to. This war is taking more out of the nations than the last war did in resources and if he fails to deliver stunning blows, his chance has gone because the irresistible strangulation of German war industry grows nearer and that will stop him at last. So he takes time by the forelock and tries to slash his way through the neutrals to get at the Channel and the champions of liberty, Britain and France. In front of him blocking the way are the intrepid armies of Holland, Belgium, France and Britain. Back of them the sea and then back of that Britain. That island fortress is well defended. Her moats are now on the west front. Hitler cannot sit down and wait for time to aid him. He cannot grow old sitting in Nazi isolation in his mountain retreat. He has elected to stab the Low Countries and must expend men and his munitions and his oil and other resources to gain doubtful advantages.

It is difficult to look forward to see the course of the war. Hitler may also open up the war in the Balkans. Yet he may not. He will find that the democracies' defences stretch back and back to the shore of the Atlantic Ocean. The Allies believe that Hitler with his so-called eighty million Germans, cannot reach the Channel. He may try his parachutes in England and in France as he tried them in Norway and the Low Countries, but on the Continent and in Britain he will find that a close watch is kept for parachute troops.

The war will probably become a major operation of armies with air force playing a large part as activities of the first few days indicate. Hitler is trying to duplicate what was attempted in 1914 by the Kaiser's armies. The German objective is the North Sea and the English Channel. He seeks air and naval bases and will try to turn the flank of the Maginot Line. In this war Hitler invaded Holland which was untouched in the last struggle.

Glorious Garden of Charleston

(By Temple Manning)

In the spring this traveler likes to be in Charleston and the Carolina Low Country, for there's nothing more alluring on earth than the charming scenery and the glorious gardens of this region.

About 25 years ago a few artists "discovered" Charleston and began to reproduce on canvas and paper her fine old homes, with their tiled roofs and brick walls which time has changed and mellowed into soft and beautiful colors. There is an Old World quality about the narrow streets and unique architecture of Charleston. To visit it is to experience an emotional reaction to sheer loveliness.

The approach gives a hint of what is to be found ahead. There are great oak trees, festooned with garlands of Spanish moss, and wisteria, jasmine and Cherokee rose vines. On both sides of the roadway stretch forests, with here and there a glimpse of a wide tree-lined boulevard that leads to the entrance of an old plantation home.

Rich in History

Charleston is situated on a peninsula between the beautiful Ashley and Cooper rivers, and is almost surrounded by water. The Battery lies at the southern point and the whole topography is strikingly like that of Manhattan Island. It is a city rich in history, one of the oldest settlements in America. Its harbor is one of the finest along the Atlantic coast. Fort Sumter, Fort Moultrie and Fort Johnson protected it from many assaults in time of war. Castle Pinckney, a national monument, also was part of the early bulwarks of the harbor.

But rather than forts and cannon, Charleston prefers to centre its life about its glorious gardens, such as Middleton Place, said to be the first landscaped garden on this side of the Atlantic. Cypress Garden, of more recent planting, is equally eye-filling, and a boon to the soul. It is a garden of bulb plants growing out of a cypress swamp, where the brilliant colors of the flowers are reflected in the dark waters of the streams. But it is difficult to single out any special garden for its glorious beauty; such refuges from the hurly burly of modern life abound in and about Middleton Gardens, Charleston.

Charleston.

During the "season," which is the spring of the year, Charleston plays host to countless visitors who come to take their fill of its beauty. Old homes and plantations are open, and there is a general air of festivity in the fine old traditions of the South. A visit to Charleston during garden time is a lifetime experience, unique in travel byways.

In the coastal region of South Carolina, the Low Country, very few of the original plantation homes are in existence. But many of them have been replaced by handsome new mansions and lodges. But, fortunately, the original shrubbery and foliage have been preserved. Just 21 miles from Charleston is Summerville, a resort town that has come to be known as "Flower Town," and with very good reason as anyone knows who has seen its gardens in full bloom.

The road out of Charleston to the north is as interesting and picturesque as it is along its approach up over Florida. There's a fine bridge over the Cooper River, and the highway is as smooth as glass. This follows the trail of the old King's Highway and hugs the coast all the way. Lafayette came ovcr this road in 1784 on his first visit to Charleston, and a few years later George Washington himself traveled it in his gilded, hand-painted coach.

Duke of Kent is Seen Ruling Central Europe

Union of Central European states into a federation under England's Duke of Kent is what Dr. Richard Maresch, Austrian refugee, sees as the solution of the problem of peace for German states, which never will acknowledge one province as ruler. Such a union, he believes, would bring peace to the world.

Favored By Anti-Nazis.

This solution has been suggested for some time by anti-Nazis in Austria, Bavaria, Saxony and the Rhineland, Dr. Maresch told an audience in Patterson Collegiate Institute last night when he spoke on conditions in Germany and the reasons for Nazidom's ultimate defeat. He came to Windsor under the auspices of the Windsor branch of the Secondary School Teachers' Federation of Ontario and during the question period following his address put forth the plan of a federated Central Europe with an English prince as its head.

"When Germany is defeated, as she most certainly will be," declared the Austrian refugee who came to Canada last May, "it is clear that Austria will want to be a nation once more as she was in the past. And more than that, the Bavarians, the Saxons and the people of the Rhinelands will all want to have their own government. They all hate Prussia; Prussia has gotten them all by conquest, not because they wanted to join with her. So they will want to be separated.

Home Rule For All.

"Therefore, why shouldn't there be a united states of Central Europe? Let each state determine what it wants by voting. Let each state have home rule, because it would not do to go against nationality.

"If we had elections every four or five years, we would have war, because one election the Bavarians would want a Bavarian to be president. The next time another state would want someone from there to be president. Such a government would not do.

"So the solution seems to be a king, an enlightened monarch. A Hohenzollern would not do, because all German states hate Hohenzollerns because they are Prussians. A Hapsburg might not be popular with some of them.

"Finally, the suggestion that seems to fit is that an English prince be made king and now we feel he should be the Duke of Kent."

Not Ready For Democracy.

Dr. Maresch, who was once a close friend of Dr. Kurt Von Schuschnigg, stated that he is a convinced monarchist and since 1924 worked toward the re-establishment of the Hapsburg line in Austria.

"We who belong to the monarchist party," he explained, "knew the great danger from the north, that is, from Prussia, and we tried to stop it. I believe that Central Europe is not ready for democracy yet. The people don't know what political rights are, they wouldn't know what to do with them. They have not been sufficiently educated in self-government to do without a ruler of some kind. For that reason I believe in an enlightened monarchy."

Dr. Maresch strongly opposed the rule of a despot like Hitler, however, he hastened to explain. But he pointed out that all German peoples possess the same weakness of allegiance to a leader, whether he be good or bad.

Hitler's Psychology.

This weakness has aided Hitler to power, for he recognized it early in his career and played on it. Blind allegiance to a leader and the belief of the Prussians in their racial superiority have been the mainstays of his rise and his present power.

Dr. Maresch represented Herr Hitler as a man "who spoiled everything he touched," but possessed of marvelous psychology, which so far he has used successfully.

"He has given employment and, for the most part, good wages. People have money to spend and they have jobs. But they cannot buy butter, for Hitler has said, 'Guns are better than butter,' and they have not been able to buy other things they have wanted.

"Hitler knows that. He wants it. For he can turn to the people and say, 'I have given you jobs and money. You could be happy if you had living space.'

"That is his way of getting them war-minded. He knows they did not want war. But he wanted war and he had to do something so that they would want it too."

Millions Fooled Easily.

Millions on the outside are fooled as easily, the speaker went on to say. "There are millions," he said, "who say, 'Breat Britain has everything. Let her give something to Germany and we will have peace.'

"That kind of talk is just what Hitler wants," deplored Dr. Maresch.

Giving Germany back her colonies is not the solution to world peace, he declared emphatically. "Von Bismarck said that colonies for Germany were a luxury, not a necessity," he stated, "and that is true about a prosperous nation.

"The last imperial colonial minister for Germany, Von Dernburg, was a personal friend of mine, and he said 'It is impossible to make the German people colony-minded. They have everything. They don't need colonies, they don't need land'."

Arms, Propaganda, Graft.

Now that Hitler is spending 60 per cent. of revenues on arms and 30 per cent, on propaganda and graft, Germany is poor and he can raise the cry that she needs colonies.

Because she is financially nearly bankrupt she has needed war. "Dr. Egon Richter, who was delegated to Moscow to see what he could do about getting products, said in my presence at the time Austria was taken," declared the speaker, "'If we do not have a war inside of a year we are finished. You know as well as I do we are financially ruined.'"

Dr. Richter was speaking at the time to another Nazi official whom Dr. Maresch would not name except by the alias, Number Six.

That the Allies would win the war is a firm belief of the Austrian refugee who termed the Nazis a lot of gangsters headed by a man who has no idea of right or wrong.

Allied Cause Real.

"You have a real cause," he concluded, "the cause of Christianity and freedom. And it is only when you lose your freedom that you know there is nothing nobler than to fight for it. You will win and when you have won don't hate those people over there. Rid them of these terrible gangsters who rule them. The last war ended in hatred. That is the reason Hitler, the incarnation of hatred, was allowed to rise.

"Teach those people what freedom is, teach them what they have never known."

All Germany, with the exception of Prussia, would join gladly in the fight against Hitler if it were possible, Dr. Maresch stated. "There will be a revolution in Germany because there must be." The difficulty is to get the people organized, obtain guns for them, get them started in a war against their hated leader.—Windsor Star.

Many Inquiries From the U. S. About Tourist Accommodations Indicate Season Should be Good

Re-iterating the popular feeling throughout Canada that the 1940 tourist season will be the greatest in the history of Canada, J. O. Herity of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, stated this morning that already the local office has had numerous inquiries from United States residents asking about tourist accommodations and the amount of fishing which is to be had in the Belleville district. These inquiries have come from Chicago, and also some from the Southern States and many from people who never before have contacted the Belleville office.

"Apparently the advertising which the Canadian Government has been doing throughout the United States has been taking effect', stated Mr. Herity, who said that a great deal of money was being spent in the United States advertising Canada as a tourists' paradise.

Recently Mr. Herity was visited by the caretaker of the Arden tourist camp who reported that the registrations at his camp were far ahead of that of normal seasons. Already the number of tourists registered at the Arden Camp equalled that of a much later date in other years, he said.

The willingness with which Canadian merchants recognized the right of the American tourist to the ten per cent premium on their money was one of the best ways to advertise Canada as a tourist resort, was the opinion of Mr. Herity. "Many merchants grant this right in a very grudging manner and consider it smart if they can tender Canadian money in exchange for American bills at par, but tourists resent it very much if they have to ask for the premium which, by law, they can collect", said Mr. Herity.

R.A.F. Bombs German Troops Between Rhine And Dutch Frontier

London, May 13 (CP)—The Air Ministry announced today that the Royal Air Force had attacked German communication lines between the Rhine and Dutch frontier and "heavily bombed" troops advancing in east Belgium.

The Ministry's communique follows:-

"The Air Ministry announces that Whitby and Wellington Air craft of the R.A.F. carried out a series of attacks on enemy communications in Germany between the Rhine and Dutch frontier during last night.

"A force of Bienheim aircraft also heavily bombed enemy troops advancing through eastern Belgium.

"All but one of the aircraft engaged in these operations returned safely."

The air Ministry also announced a series of "successful bombing attacks" by the Royal Air Force during the night on the Waalhaven airdrome, near Rotterdam, which German forces occupied on their invasion of The Netherlands, lost on Saturday, and then recaptured.

This announcement said:-

"R.A.F. aircraft carried out a series of successful bombing attacks during the night against the airdrome at Waalhaven, near Rotterdam, which had again changed hands yesterday and was being used as a base by the enemy."

"Swim for it Boys" Heroic Hardy Captain

Captain Warburton-Lee, mortally wounded, gave his last order on board the destroyer Hardy, grounded on the shore of Narvik Fjord.

"Swim for it, boys," he said. The boys swam through the ice-cold water to the shore 100 yards away.

They would not leave their captain. One of them swam with him to the beach.

"Is everyone all right?" he gasped, and died.

That story was told last night when sixty Hardy survivors arrived in London to be cheered by a welcoming British crowd and to be received by First Lord Winston Churchill.

In all 130 survivors reached Britain. The London contingent, in a strange assortment of clothes—Norwegian jumpers, ski caps, women's clothing—told of the captain's dying heroism and their escapes on the hillside of the Norwegian fjord.

Leading-Telegraphist B. J. Rees said that they did not go ashore in boats, as reported at the time.

"Flannelled Them."

"The boats had all gone a long while ago," he said.

"Another thing that amused me was a story which I saw that we landed with machine-guns.

"Why, if they had hit us with a snowball they would have knocked us over, but we 'flannelled' the Germans and made them believe we were armed.

"We had to swim about a quarter of a mile altogether, and all the time three German destroyers—they were big, fine boats—were just off the shore watching us. When we got on the beach we took off everything, and talk about B.B.C. physical exercises . . .

"The people were very good to us, but some of us did not get fixed up with clothing."

Leading Telegraphist William Sparks wore a ski-ing cap, sported a bright blue jumper with a flowered collar, said:

"I was not so lucky as some of the others—or perhaps I was," he added with a smile, "for as I was walking along I met a girl, and she, good soul, took off this jumper and I put it on."

Stoker A. Harris was immediately surrounded and asked to explain a large plaster over his left eye. "I'm going to disappoint you all," he said.

"I didn't get this wound in action. I collected it in a friendly fight with a chum on the way home."

Able Seaman Dunn said Hardy led the Second Destroyer Flotilla into action in a snowstorm about four o'clock on the morning of Wednesday, April 10.

The destroyers torpedoed everything in the harbor, four German destroyers and a number of German merchant ships being sunk.

Some of the survivors jumped from their ship as she capsized and swam about 200 yards through the icy cold water to the shore.

"The Germans," he said, "were firing on us as we swam.

"When we swam ashore we made for three cottages on the cliff.

"Glorious But Grim"

Petty-Officer William G. Kay told the Daily Mirror: "It was glorious, but it was grim.

"When we went aground the order was given that we should make for the shore. Some fellows managed to get on floats, but most of us had to swim.

"When we got ashore those of us who had no clothes went into houses which had been evacuated and gathered up what clothing we could find.

"It was terribly cold and snowing. We did not care what we looked like. Our only concern was that we should be warm. Some of our fellows put on women's clothing and marched many miles in skirts.

"The worst of it was that a lot of us had kicked off our boots to swim ashore. It was hard going in bare feet.

"It took six or seven hours to reach a village where we would be safe.

"We were in Norway three days, and were taken off by a warship."

Twenty-four-stone chief bosun's mate Tubby Cock smiled about the fight and called it "beautiful."

"Our guns blew one destroyer sky high," added Tubby. "At least two other destroyers burst into flames.

"The action had been at close range—about 4,000 yards—and we were badly damaged. We were fighting at only about a few hundred yards from the shore, and we suddenly grounded on a rocky beach.

"The water was icy. When we reached the shore we climbed up a hill to a chalet kept by two Norwegian women. They were most kind.

"At nine o'clock in the morning we decided to make for the nearest village, which we found was many miles away.

"The trek over the hills deep in snow took a whole day. One man's clothing consisted of his trousers and shirt, a pair of women's corsets and a curtain covering them.

"When we arrived at the village at dusk we were given food and other clothes. — London Daily Mirror.

Other Glands May Disturb Thyroid Gland

A patient with an overactive thyroid gland was advised by his physician that operation for removal of the gland was advisable as the symptoms—rapid heart beat, nervousness sleeplessness, and loss of weight—were sapping his vitality and no time should be lost. The patient, as with most patients, asked if there were not other measures that could bring a cure.

The physician advised him that complete rest in bed might allay the symptoms to some extent but it would be unwise to delay matters. Also, Xray treatments were effective in most cases but the treatment would extend over a number of months, perhaps a whole year.

As the patient was in good general condition, the thyroid gland was removed by surgery and he was back in his office in three weeks.

It is the "quick results' obtained by surgery that causes so many physicians and surgeons do not believe that all cases of severe goitre are due to disease of the thyroid gland itself but that some other condition, often disturbance in another gland, is disturbing the thyroid gland and so causing the thyroid symptoms mentioned above.

Dr. James H. Hutton, Chicago, in Clinical Medicine and Surgery, states that the other glands at fault are most often the pituitary gland lying on the floor of the skull and the adrenal glands situated one above each kidney. As Xray treatment of one or both of these glands, or the use of the extracts of the pituitary, adrenal, and sex glands bring relief of symptoms in some cases, it shows that these other glands may be the cause of the thyroid gland becoming overactive.

Quoting Dr. Frank Lahey, Boston, in his article, Dr. Hutton says: "When there is a doubt as to the symptoms being due to the thyroid gland itself or to some other cause or gland, operation should not be immediately performed. Time should be taken to investigate the cause, as these patients are not likely to die in the meantime".

Emotional disturbances — grief, worry— can aggravate a mild type of goitre so that severe symptoms arise. If these disturbances can be removed, operation may not be necessary.

Helping Child With Phonics

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

MANY parents who themselves learned in early childhood to read by sounding out letters, syllables and words are distressed to find that their child is given little or no training in phonics at school. Sometimes this concern may be justified.

But my readers should know that phonics are coming back, though in a somewhat different, and, I think, better form. They are coming back in a form which many parents easily can employ in helping their children at home. Within the last few years I have seen in numerous classrooms samples of this newer form of teaching phonics.

Sounds are associated with pictures. First the initial sound of a word is so associated. For example, on the wall is a large picture of a ball with the word ball printed under it. This picture has been drawn or cut from an old magazine. In like form appear pictures of bat boat, bell, etc. The child learns in this manner the sound of b when used at the beginning of a word. In like fashion, with the aid of pictures, he learns the sounds of other consonants.

Pleasant Experience

Pasting, cutting or drawing such pictures, and printing and typing the appropriate word with each picture, can be a pleasant experience for the child and the parent working together, whether the child is just beginning to read and spell or is having help in some reading or spelling difficulty. What an interesting scrapbook may be made in this fashion!

This exercise offers the advantage of having the child see frequently the same letter at the beginning of a word, helping him gain acquaintance with the appearance and sound of this letter, rendering him less likely to confuse it with another letter.

Make Scrapbooks

In one class I also observed a second grade teacher having her children make scrapbooks of words they had clipped from old magazines and newspapers, to illustrate sound blends. I have before me a scrapbook sent me from this school. On page 1, column 1, is br. Under it are pasted: British, Briton, brand, bride, break, brick, bridge, breakfast, etc. Under cr. next column, are: cross, cracker, cream, cripple, craft, etc. There are many pages like these. Any child with very little guidance could make one at home.

Such projects are valuable not only for helping the child attack new words in reading but also at helping him in spelling. If your child, in the grades, seems not to grasp the simple sounds in spelling, especially of vowels, print for him or have him print from copy groups of words that rhyme, like fat, mat, pat; hug, mug, rug; hill, mill, pill.

Solving Parent Problems

Q—Do you believe the home can withstand practically any kind of evil outside influence?

A.—If we parents possessed character enough knew enough and could apply all we know in guiding our childs habits and attitudes at home, all the while winning and maintaining his complete confidence and love, nothing could prevail against him. I honestly believe the possibilities of good influences of the home exceed all the possibilities of evil influences outside the home. Perhaps none of us parents will ever fully realize these possibilities.

STONE CHURCH Y. P. U.

The Stone Church Young Peoples Union met at the home of Miss Lenore Vermilyea on May 1, with a good attendance.

The president opened the meeting. Miss E. Foster led in prayer.

During the business part of the meeting the Young People discussed further the idea of beautifying the church grounds with perennials. Instead of the next usual meeting they will undertake the project — the boys bringing shovels and the girls bringing lunch.

Miss E. Foster opened the Worship service by a call to worship.

The Scripture lesson was read by Miss Lena Detlor followed by a poem read by Mrs. Hugh Gray which closed the worship service.

Mrs. Everett Phillips, the missionary convener, took charge of the meeting.

Rev. L. W. Scott led in prayer. Mrs. Frank Tucker gave the main topic entitled "Men, who see further than the city streets" which stressed mainly the work of Dr. Grenfell in Labrador, who has become a means of comfort to fishermen there.

Miss Lenore Vermilyea favoured with a piano solo "A Prelude" by Chopin. Mrs. E. Phillips told a story entitled "Looking into Oneself", which Mrs. Phillips described as the same as looking into a concave mirror. Miss Lenore Vermilyea treated us to candy and peanuts.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The Poorest of All Matrimonial Risks—A Gambler

Dear Miss Fairfax:

About six months ago I fell in love with a young man ten years my senior—I am 21. We are employed in the same place of business. We were engaged to be married, but two weeks ago he asked me to release him because of his gambling habit. I would not agree to release him. He says he loves me but doesn't deserve a girl like me.

Before we fell in love with each other I had just existed, not caring much what happened. In fact I was planning suicide when I first met him and then everything seemed to take on a different aspect. I hope you understand— I owe my life to him.

I have tried to help him with his one weakness and it was working until recently, when he gambled away his week's wages. Now he says he doesn't deserve another chance. What would you suggest. Shall I try to forget him or find happiness in the haphazard world he lives in? I know I'd have to go on working and could never have a family, but I don't mind as long as I can be near him.

Miller M.

Aren't you taking a very pessimistic view of things for a girl only 21 years of age? To my way of thinking you are. All of life is before you. Last year, in the eyes of the law, you were regarded as an "infant", incapable of voting or making a will. You have only now come into your own. Don't spoil everything by tying yourself up to a gambler. This vice is harder to break than the strangle hold of liquor.

Take yourself in hand, form new contacts. Be a "jiner." Preferably join some club with plenty of exercise, like bowling, go out with the girls who are employed in the same place of business as you are.

Boy Wants to Marry at Fifteen; Must Think He Lives in India

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The other day my brother 15 years old told me he is in love with a girl and that they had decided to wait until they finish school to marry. However, it now seems that her dad has to move and of course that means the girl goes with him. My brother wants me to give him a job so he can marry the girl and keep her here.

That, Miss Fairfax, is what I'm confronted with. I told him to let me think it over. The girl is very attractive and an intelligent young lady and would pass for a couple of years older than she really is. But as far as for them to consider marriage, that is something else. The boy is not old enough to quit school, and surely not old enough to marry.

My business is automobiles and yours is dealing with problems such as mine. Perhaps you can help me. If so you will have among your readers one relieved and thankful being.

Arby Dee

You must know that no province would regard the marriage of a boy child of 15 as legal. That would seem to be a final answer to your question.

Sounds Very Unattractive To Me

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I know a man who thinks that every girl is in love with him. To me he seems very conceited, always talks about himself, and doesn't give anyone else a chance to say anything. He tries to date every girl he meets and then makes fun of her to the next girl. I have gone out with him several times but I'm wondering if it's wise. Do you think I can reform him?

J.

My dear, you have drawn the portrait of a cad to me. You might reform him, but it would be a big undertaking. It's a question whether he'd be worth it.

I'd advise you to choose the company of someone you'd really respect and admire, and again, why pick one young man? It seems to me that young people, if I may judge by the kind of letters I get, neglect the opportunity of going places where they would have the advantage of meeting many nice boys and girls and making new contacts.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

In more than thirty years of country practise I naturally had plenty of diabetic cases to care for. I found careful dieting would often save older people for a few years—if they would obey orders. But as soon as I found sugar in the urine of a child, I knew I had just read the youngster's death warrant.

I remember the same week when Dr. Frederick Banting's discovery of insulin was announced, I was called to a home where a boy of 15 years of age was gradually growing thinner and weaker in spite of a good appetite. As soon as I saw him, I suspected diabetes and sure enough his urine showed the presence of large amounts of sugar. When I saw that, I was saddened for I knew the family well. I thought the boy would be dead within a year. I had read about Banting's discovery and I knew the claims that were being made for insulin, but I had little faith in it. So many miraculous cures are being announced all the time and so few turn out to be any good. Besides, at the time it was difficult to get some of the new preparation even for a trial.

I put the boy on a strict diet, but in spite of it the sugar gained ground, and it was plain that the child was rapidly going down hill. Six months went by, we still heard much about insulin, and the boy sank rapidly. Under ordinary conditions, he would only have lasted a month or two longer. Then I was able to get some insulin. I decided there was everything to gain, nothing to lose, by trying it. I had other diabetic patients at the time, but none of them were so far gone as this boy. None were so desperately in need of something in the way of a miracle, so I gave it to him.

It was much less developed then. Injections had to be made frequently and a lot of time had to be spent observing the patient to see whether too much or too little of the insulin had been given. After having seen dozens and dozens of youngsters go on to death when they were at the stage this boy was in, I was never more impressed in my life then by insulin's effect on him. At first, I just couldn't believe what I saw. The boy not only stopped declining, he quickly got better to the point where it was no longer apparent that he had been through a grave illness. Today he is a perfectly healthy member of the community. I don't think many of his friends know that he takes a daily injection of insulin to keep him well.

Many persons still regard insulin as a cure, which it isn't. It is just a product taken to replace the lack of insulin in the system and so long as the system doesn't supply its own insulin, the patient has to keep taking it or else.

In the winter just passed we had a dramatic demonstration of this up here. A couple of men went out to a remote part of the country to hunt. One of them had diabetes and he took along a supply of insulin and his hypodermic. They had been away only a short time when the diabetic had the misfortune to break his needle. Right away the other man started in to civilization for another needle. It was bitterly cold, many degrees below zero, but he travelled as fast as he could for he knew the danger. Snow was deep and it was two days before he got back with the needle. As soon as he came within sight of the cabin he knew he was too late. There was no smoke rolling out of the chimney and he guessed that the old man must have gone into a coma from lack of insulin. Sure enough, inside he found the body of his friend, frozen to death.

Haemorrhage

As I have said before in these parts where I have spent my more than 30 years of practise, many of the frontier families do not call in a doctor to attend a birth, they try to get along with the assistance of the local midwife. Only when the midwife encounters difficulties does the family call for a physician.

Consequently when the doctor is called he expects to find things in very bad shape, and usually he isn't disappointed. Some are like the worst case I recall, one I attended a good many years ago. A midwife had been called, and if nothing had gone wrong, I never would have known about that birth.

Something did go wrong and the midwife realized quickly that she had encountered difficulties she couldn't handle. But considerable time naturally passed before the husband could hitch up a horse, drive to the nearest telephone to call me, and I could get my horse hitched and drove ten miles over bad roads to the home. When I finally arrived the patient's condition was extremely serious.

I found it was a case of placenta praevia. The placenta had come away first, the woman was haemorrhaging and I thought she would die from loss of blood if nothing else.

Fortunately the baby was born almost as soon as I got there. But there was the mother, weak from loss of blood. In those days blood transfusions were spectacular operations attempted only in large hospitals. But we country doctors knew something about saline solutions and their uses in the blood system. So I set up the apparatus, put one needle in each breast, and pumped into her system some of the fluid she had lost. At least it gave her heart something to keep working on.

The woman was a healthy farm-raised specimen and her system was equal to the strain. The various blood forming organs kept pouring red corpuscles into the veins, and she lived. And I remember well that while she was only 25 years old at the time, this child that nearly finished her was her eighth.

Haemorrhage at child birth like other obsterical menaces can often be averted by proper prenatal care. The examinations the attending doctor makes usually disclose conditions likely to cause such bleeding.

I think the most spectacular handling of a bad birth haemorrhage stands to the credit of an old doctor who practised a few miles from me. When a woman began to haemorrhage in confinement, all his efforts to stop the flow of blood failed until he was desperate. The old doctor was on the point of giving up the struggle when he got an idea. He went out into the yard, got a pail of snow, and packed the unfortunate woman.

It worked; the mother's bleeding stopped. She is alive today. She told me the story. Her doctor is dead.

ARMORED CARS AND TANKS CLASH

For First Time in History Masses of Machines Meet, French Forces Win

Paris, May 13 —(CP—Havas)— For the first time in modern warfare, two great masses of armoured cars and tanks met last night in full impact when French motorized forces stopped the German advance near Tongres, in Belgium nine miles from the Dutch border and 15 miles from the Meuse River.

French military quarters said it was the first time that two large comparatively evenly matched forces met in a direct , frontal clash. The French machines proved themselves at least the equals of the Germans since they succeeded in halting the German drive past Tongres.

The French motorized force was the spearhead of an Allied counter-attack against German forces which had been subjected throughout the day to aerial attack, suffering heavy losses in men and machines.

The German units had been dispatched from the direction of Maastricht, where yesterday they succeeded in breaking through one of the forts in the Liege system of fortifications and moving in force northwestward toward Hasselt and southwestward to Tongres. These were the forces attacked both on land and from the air by the Allied counter-offensive yesterday.

Germans Lose 400 Airplanes In 3 1-2 Days

Paris, May 13—(AP)—The Germans lost 400 airplanes in the first three and a half days of their drive against the lowlands and the western front, according to an official French compilation published today.

This figure, it was declared, included 34 shot down by French anti-aircraft guns and 88 by French and British airplanes in France and Belgium.

Fifty German planes were destroyed on the ground in airdromes in The Netherlands while the others were shot down by the Belgians and by Allied and Netherlands air forces in The Netherlands and Germany, it was added.

Stronger Mobile Defence Forces May be Urged in U.S.

Administration Quarters Indicate Demand for Speeding Up of Munitions Manufacture Recommended

Washington, May 13 (AP)—A call for stronger mobile defence forces to safeguard the Western Hemisphere at any threatened point seemed likely today to appear in revised United States administration estimates of military needs.

Administration quarters indicated that this and a demand for speeding up munitions manufacture were embodied in war department recommendations submitted to President Roosevelt for week-end study in the light of European war developments.

Officials expected that the prospective request for additional funds for the army and navy would be ready for Congress early in the week. Congressmen in close touch with defence officials said they believed Mr. Roosevelt would ask for as much as $500,000,000.

Some legislators, foreseeing demands for costly defence additions in next year's budget, advocated that a special committee make a comprehensive survey to account for billions already spent on army and navy work.

ALLIES SHATTER GERMAN TUNNEL

Part of Istein Railroad Under Germany's "Gibraltar of the Rhine" Closed

Basel, Switzerland, May 13 (AP)— French artillery and Allied air bombs today shattered part of the Istein railroad tunnel under Germany's "Gibraltar of the Rhine."

This destruction closed to military traffic a section of the vital army railroad incorporated in the West Wall fortifications.

Passenger traffic on this German Rhine line was cut off after an attack on a freight train near Istein by a French warplane Saturday.

The new raid and shelling of the southern rise of the bridge of Istein Rock, which the German railroad pierces in a double track tunnel, severed Germany's direct connection with Basel.

North of Swiss Border

Istein is about five miles north of the Swiss border.

Heavy German troop concentrations were noted by observers from the Swiss side from North of Basel, where Switzerland, France and Germany come together, on east to Waldshut—a distance of 30 miles.

Further troop movements were reported east of this point toward Lake Constance.

The French also reinforced veteran Moroccan troops who have been stationed since the war in lower Alsace and the upper Jura frontier with Switzerland.

The Swiss have their Winkelried line from Basel to the Austrian frontier manned with elite troops backed by fully mobilized reserve forces.

Following the Swiss neutrality plan many reserve troops also are posted along the Swiss frontier of the Swiss Jura opposite the French frontier.

SWISS AIR FORCE PROTECTS TERRAIN

Pilots Receive Orders to Shoot Down Any Enemy Machine Seen Over Switzerland

Basel, Switzerland, May 13 —(AP)—The Swiss Air Force, equipped with the latest model German, French and Swiss-made fighting planes, patrolled the frontier today with orders to shoot down any belligerent fliers over Swiss soil who ignored a first warning.

A foreign bombing plane was chased and hit by machine-gun fire and forced to land "on territory of its own country," the Swiss press reported. Dispatches did not name the country.

Intensified aerial vigilance followed upon reports yesterday of large-scale troop movements in Germany, north of Switzerland's frontier. The nation stood on a war footing, with between 500,000 and 600,000 citizen soldiers mobilized.

All Called to Arms

Every able-bodied citizen between the ages of 20 and 60 has been called to arms.

A German bomber was pierced with bullets from Swiss fighters two days ago after it ignored warnings from the Swiss side of the Rhine River. It made a forced landing just across the river boundary north of Basel.

The Swiss High Command's decision to act against frontier violations by belligerent planes followed upon the bombing of the Delemont region by a German plane which had apparently lost its way May 10.

Another reason cited for the decision was increasing fear that the many frontier violations by German planes south of the Rhine might be intentional flights of observation planes.

The number will depend on the homes found for them in the Dominion.

Lightning and radio! Radio sets and listeners may be adequately protected from injury by lightning by providing each antenna with an approved lightning arrester, located either outside or inside the house, but as near the point of entrance of the wires as possible. A water-pipe system makes an excellent ground and is preferable to most others. Probably the next best is burying a large metal plate in moist soil. If the soil is dry the plate should be larger and pipes or rods driven into the ground and connected to the plates should be added. In all cases, however the form of protection should be in accordance with the electrical code used by the local authorities

Phantom Burglar Strikes Again

Belleville's phantom - burglar struck again Saturday night when he entered the home of J. B. Ives, 14 Mount Pleasant Road, and stole a small amount of silver coin.

The burglary was not reported until Sunday morning, but police investigation proved the break-in to have been completed in the same manner as previous entries into private dwellings on the east hill. Unlocking the door the marauder left the door ajar to effect a hasty exit in case he was discovered or disturbed.

Here again drawers were ransacked, but only a small amount of cash was taken. Other valuables, which were available to burglars, were left untouched.

AT THE BELLE

"Virginia City"

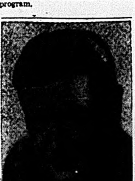
Virginia City, Nevada—through whose brawling streets forty thousand gold-mad adventurers from every corner of the globe once stormed —comes to gaudy, bawdy, glittering, fighting life again on the Belle Theatre screen, in the melodramatic romance "Virginia City" which stars Errol Flynn and Miriam Hopkins. Some newspaper man of the day wrote, "West of Dodge City there was no law . . . and there lay Virginia City "

Mark Twain who worked on The Territorial Enterprise in the wild and woolly days said that it was considered no disgrace to kill a man in Virginia City and slayings were so frequent that they were treated with astonishing brevity by the local sheets. Virginia City was the centre of the biggest gold and silver mining operations in the history of America. A million dollars a day came from the earth. Comstock's Lode it was called, and it became world-renowned as "The Big Bonanza".

Newly-made millionaires and multi-millionaires of the day were by no means undivided in their sympathies for North or South for the Civil War was in progress. Millions were turned over to help the Union cause to win. Millions were secretly hoarded to be sent to the capital of the Confederacy in Richmond, Virginia. When the picture opens, news of the plot has been discovered by Kerry Bradford, a Northern officer, at the time a prisoner in Libby Prison. Escaping he joins his outfit and is finally commissioned to waylay the twenty-four wagon gold train. This dashing part Flynn plays with all the verve he displayed in "The Adventures of Robin Hood" and in the phenomenally successful "Dodge City".

In Virginia City Kerry meets Julia Hayne—Miriam Hopkins—a Southern girl who is acting as a spy and to further the cause is an entertainer in the lurid Samarac Saloon. Battles, murder and sudden death threaten the heroine and the hero too . . . . and at the end though the Northerners win the gold mysteriously disappears. The truth of the adventure adds interest to the drama and proves that fiction may indeed be stranger than fiction.

The popular Belle News of the Hour will be exhibited on the same program.



Fighting D. A. Richard Dix in the "Devil Is Driving," now showing at the Capitol and on the same program "Heaven With a Barbed Wire Fence."

Latest British Planes Score Victory in Five Minutes of Battle

London, May 13—(CP)—Latest model British Boulton Paul Defiant pursuit planes scored a victory in their first five minutes of battle by shooting down a Junkers 88 over the Dutch coast yesterday, the Air Ministry announced today.

A squadron of crack new planes, equipped with electrically controlled gun turrets, were cruising over The Hague when they spotted the Junker attempting to bomb three British ships off the coast. Three Defiants swooped on the German bomber, which turned its guns on the first British plane, piloted by a squadron leader.

At close range, the squadron leader fired a machine-gun burst into the enemy machine, which dived to a low altitude with thick smoke streaming from its port motor. It streaked landward over the water with the Defiants in hot pursuit and finally crashed in a field south of The Hague.

Meanwhile a Spitfire accompanying the Defiants on their patrol shot down a Heinkel-111 which had also attempted to bomb a British ship at sea. The Heinkel put up a stiff fight, but with the aid of a second British plane which arrived in time to take part in the fight, the Spitfire shot down the German plane. The latter crashed on land.

Nazis Threaten Ten Frenchmen

Berlin, May 13 (AP)—The German high command threatened today to shoot ten captured French soldiers for every German parachute trooper shot by the French.

A German communique said:

"The assertion of Herr Reynaud that German parachute troopers wore foreign uniforms or civilian clothes is a lie.

"Herr Reynaud is no soldier. He appears not to know that parachute battalions are regular formations of the German army set up in peace and trained for their particular task.

"Their uniform is generally known and is adapted to the particular fighting manner of the parachute soldier. It is not to be confused either with civilian clothing or any kind of a foreign uniform.

"Should, nevertheless, Herr Reynaud seek an excuse to vent his hate on the brave parachute troopers, immediate reprisals against this breach of international law will be taken by German defence forces.

"In the future, for every German parachute soldier shot, ten captured French soldiers will be shot."

DUTCH RETAIN WATER DEFENCE LINES INTACT

In West Gelderland Province, Below Zuider Zee, Dutch Take Stand Behind Inundation Line Against German Force Which Has Crossed Ijssel River

(By Reilly O'Sullivan Associated Press Staff Writer).

Amsterdam, May 13 (AP) — The Netherlands command announced today that its forces were making strategic retreats under the pressure of heavy German attacks but still held their water defence lines.

It announced that Dutch forces in western Gelderland Province—below the Ijsselmeer (Zuider Zee),—were taking a stand behind their inundation line against a German force which has crossed the Ijssel River and "come into contact at some points" with Dutch forces.

It said Dutch border troops had withdrawn also with small losses to prepared positions in the north-eastern provinces.

German Claims

Germans in the north reached some points on the eastern shore of the Ijsselmeer (Zuider Zee).

(In Berlin, the Germna News Agency claimed complete Nazi occupation of the northern province of Groninggen.)

In the south, the high command said German mechanized troops had penetrated to the Langstraat region, which, roughly, is north of Tilburg and west of Shertogenbasch. Holland's great network of rivers, however, still is beyond the Nazis on this northward path toward Rotterdam and Amsterdam.

German Communique

The communique said:-

"German troops which passed the Ijssel have come into contact at some point with our positions in the western part of Gelderland which are secured by inundations.

"In the northern provinces, German troops have reached locally the coast of the Ijsselmeer and of the Waddenzee (between the mainland and the northern fringe of islands in the North Sea.)

"Our border troops in this part of the country have withdrawn further with small losses and arrived within our positions.

"Mechanized German troops have reached the Laangstraat.

"In the southern part of Rotterdam there still are small, heavily armed (German) detachments but without artillery.

"Despite great German superiority in the air, our air force has bombed objectives important to the enemy with exceptional heroism."

HOUSE OF LORDS IS UNANIMOUS

Prime Minister Churchill and Ex-Premier Chamberlain Both Highly Praised

London, May 13 —(CP)— The House of Lords today unanimously approved a resolution of confidence in the Churchill Government and adjourned to May 21.

Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary, moving the resolution, paid tribute to Neville Chamberlain's "sanity of outlook, his resource and tenacity of purpose," which he said are still at the nation's disposal.

Of Prime Minister Churchill, Lord Halifax said: "He brings to his task the particular gifts which have already earned for him the respect and confidence of his fellow countrymen; and never more than now could the imagination, daring and determination which he commands be of greater value than they are today.

Churchill's Capacity to Inspire

"He has, moreover, a rare capacity to inspire the resolution in Parliament and people which will surely be required before we bring this struggle to a successful issue."

Lord Snell, Labor Leader, told the peers that "we do not hate the German people or wish to prevent their natural and right development, but we will not tolerate their lust for domination or the bred-in-the-bone brutality of their present government."

Lord Snell promised the government all support, saying "the British nation is sorrowful but quite resolved to continue its task, pooling all its strength in an attempt to restore decency and freedom on earth."

Paris, May 13—(AP)—A French war department spokesman said at mid-afternoon today that so far the only port in the fortified zone around Liege that has fallen to the Germans is Eben Emael.

Berlin, May 13—(AP)—The German high command claimed today that German troops have broken into Liege, Belgium and captured the citadel of Liege fortress.

(This claim of the Nazis could not be confirmed elsewhere. The Belgian high command said its forces had "maintained their positions everywhere.")

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Reports from the new war zone in The Netherlands and Belgium indicate the Germans are employing different tactics in the two countries.

In The Netherlands the acrobatic warfare which worked so well in Poland and Norway is being used extensively with parachute troops dropping down in cities and "fifth column" Nazi supporters throwing off their disguises to embark upon intensified sabotage and espionage .

In Belgium the attack is on a more orthodox pattern, the enemy advancing in force over the frontiers and attacking the Belgian defence lines.

Two reasons probably account for the difference, the greater degree of preparation accomplished by the Nazis within Holland and a desire to smash that country first.

Belgium, having suffered more acutely than any other country in the last war, was probably more resistant to the peaceful penetration of enemy agents prior to the opening of hostilities than was Holland.

The quicker the Germans can occupy The Netherlands, however, the quicker they can shorten their front and prepare to resist the inevitable counter-blows of the British and French. The main purpose of the whole operation, of course, is to seize the coast and so attain positions for attacks on Great Britain.

So the aim is naturally to extend German control of the coast southward from the northern border of The Netherlands.

UNION LEADER MAKES CHARGE

J. A. Sullivan, President, Says Ship Owners Were Attempting to "Scuttle" Seaman's Union

Toronto, May 13 —(CP)— A three-man conciliation board, under the chairmanship of Mr. Justice Charles McTague, opened its hearing of the dispute between Great Lakes seamen and Canadian Steamship Companies today and adjourned shortly afterward when a charge was made the ship owners were attempting to "scuttle" the Canadian Seamen's Union. The charge was made by J. A. Sullivan, President of the Union.

Sullivan said the ship owners had written letters to their captains, instructing them not to hire Union men. He claimed this violated terms of the agreement which brought about suspension of a strike that delayed opening of navigation this spring.

Cincinnati Reds Increase Lead In National Loop by Beating St. Louis Cards in Twin Bill

Derringer and Old Jim Turner Were the Winning Hurlers

YANKEES WIN

World Champions Break Losing Streak at Eight by Downing Boston

(By Judson Bailey, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York Yankees still are to be reckoned with in the American Baseball League pennant race—as everybody believed all along.

The way they bounced off the bottom of the standings yesterday to shut out Boston Red Sox 4-0 was a performance so forceful no skeptic could doubt that here were the real world's champions.

Red Ruffing whipped out that old fast ball and spread six hits smartly, struck out eight and walked only two. The champs punched out their hits in familiar fashion—two runs in the third on an error and three singles, another in the seventh on two doubles and a final one in the eighth on a double, a single and an error.

In the National League Cincinnati Reds proved once again that they, too, have the stuff of champions and are going to be hard to dislodge from first place. They slaughtered St. Louis Cardinals 7-1 and 13-4 in a double header. Paul Derringer allowed only four hits in the first game. Then old Jim Turner repeated even though he was shelled for 16 hits.

The double victory increased the Reds' margin to a full game over Brooklyn even though the Dodgers tromped on the Phillies 5-3 with Fred Fitzsimmons' knuckle-balling. Fat Freddy had to be rescued when he loaded the bases in the ninth.

Giants Edge Out Bees

New York Giants edged out Boston Bees 3-2. Prince Hal Schumacher was effective for seven innings, fanning eight, and Fireman Walter Brown stopped a flareup in the eighth for the Giants' fifth straight win.

Chicago Cubs plastered another defeat on Pittsburgh Pirates 7-5 when Bill Herman hit a three-run homer in the eighth Dizzy Dean gave up a homer in the first inning and was belted out in the second.

It was a rough day for the upper crust in the American League—from the Red Sox down. Cleveland Indians were thumped 5-2 by St. Louis Browns, with Elden Auker rationing eight hits, and Chicago White Sox tamed Detroit Tigers 4-3, getting three runs in the first inning.

Johnny Babich achieved his fourth victory against one defeat as Philadelphia Athletics whipped Washington Senators 4-2. Babich held the Nats to six hits.

VANCOUVER LEAFS WIN 3 IN ROW

Capture Dominion Basketball Championship From Montreal Squad

Montreal, May 13 (CP)—Western domination of Canadian basketball continues today with Vancouver Maple Leafs their 13th representative to win the Dominion senior final in 16 seasons of play.

Practically a composite of two other teams from British Columbia that won the title in 1937 and 1938, the Maple Leafs needed only three games in a best-of-five series to keep the Montreal cup in the west. They defeated Montreal Y.M.H.A., 28-26, here Saturday after winning the opening games 33-26 and 48-46.

Experience joined with ability to play a major part in the quick triumph. Two of their eight players were twice before on British Columbia teams that won the Dominion title and four were on one previous champion.

Both Jim Bardsley, who paced the Leafs in the three games with a total of 30 points, and Slim Art Willoughby second highest scorer with 25 points, played with University of British Columbia, champions in 1937, and the Vancouver Westerns squad that won the title in 1938.

Vancouver, who started back home yesterday, will get the cup from Victoria where it was won by the Dominoes last season. Their triumph made it four years straight for British Columbia teams.

DOZEN EXPECTED TO START IN KING'S PLATE

Katie Bud and Star Gaiety, Two Fillies, Must be Considered on Saturday

RACE FIRST DAY

Hendrick's Dark Comet Still Class of the Crop Fighting for the Guineas

Toronto, May 13—(CP) — The turf adage about steering clear of fillies during the Spring doesn't run to form when applied to Canada's premier race, the King's Plate. At least two — Katie Bud and Star Gaiety—will start in the 81st running Saturday. Neither can be overlooked.

Fillies never have been successful in the Kentucky Derby. Only Regret has won. The history of the King's Plate, however, is spotted with triumphs. Since the distance was set at a mile and an eighth in 1924 seven have galloped home to capture the King's 50 guineas.

The last was in 1935 when Sally Fuller, owned by Edward F. Seagram of Waterloo, Ont., won. Others were Queensway, Young Kitty, Troutlet, Fairbank, Aymond and Maternal Pride.

Katie Bud and Star Gaiety must be considered in a field that lacks a shining star. About a dozen horses are expected to face the starter.

Katie Bud, owned by Dave Garrity of Toronto, campaigned successfully as a juvenile. She won three races out of 12 starts. One of the victories came in the Coronation Stakes, a six-furlongs sprint.

Star Gaiety, owned by the Erindale stable and trained by Arthur Brent, warned she was nearing peak form with a 1:58 4-5 trial over the distance. Before that she had not been seriously considered.

George Hendrie's Dark Comet, the early favorite, stepped further into the leader's role with a handy nine furlongs trial. He broke well and accompanied by Ridge, a stable-mate, covered the distance in 1.58, the best time to date.

BIMELECH SCORES SMASHING WIN IN PREAKNESS

Great Three-Year-Old Colt Will Start in the Belmont, June 8th

GALLAHADION THIRD

New York, May 13.—(AP)—Belmont and Bimelech seem to go together naturally, and by the time Belmont winds up its 24-day Spring meeting which starts this afternoon, it should be seen whether Bimmie is the super horse he looked to be after winning the Preakness Saturday or "that nag" he was after losing the Derby the week before.

There's no doubt that Colonel E. R. Bradley's three-year-old is the most talked-of horse in training right now or that Belmont is the place to determine its greatness.

Beaten in the Derby by the 35-1 outsider, Gallahadion, Bimelech came back at Pimlico Saturday to score a smashing victory in the Golden Jubilee Preakness before 50,000 fans. Some fans want to see him in one more real test—the rich Belmont strakes—before they decide finally as to his greatness. The Belmont will be run June 8.

Mioland, beaten by two lengths at 1 3-16 miles in the Preakness, and the stretch-running Gallahadion, which was third, both were full of run when they finished.

1st Infantry Brigade Of Canadian Troops Leaves Aldershot For Advanced Training

By EDWIN JOHNSON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Aldershot, England, May 11 (CP).—As part of the pre-arranged training program, the entire personnel of the First Infantry Brigade of the Canadian First Division bade a temporary farewell to the familiar haunts of Aldershot today and for a brief spell will be housed under canvas on the rolling, grassy plains of one of those areas known as "Somewhere in England".

Like two divisional machine-gun units which moved to the new camp site two weeks ago, the First Brigade left for its secret destination by motor transport and rail. With the convoy went all the brigade's equipment and such stores as will be required during its absence.

It was the first large scale shift of Canadian troops since the division began training in England. The advance column moved out on schedule, headed by its commanding officer, Brigadier Armand Smith, but despite the problems attending such a big undertaking the convoy reached its destination within minutes of the set time.

Traffic along the route was regulated by men of the Divisional Provost Company in accordance with plans which would govern similar moves in the actual theatre of war.

During the period the brigade will live under canvas the men will be given sound training in formation and other advanced field exercises At the close of this phase of the syllabus, the troops will return to their quarters in the Aldershot area and then will be replaced by the Second Infantry Brigade. The Third Brigade will follow later.

TORONTO LEAFS LOSE TWIN BILL TO THE BISONS

Canadian Team Sinks Further Into Mire of Cellar Position

ROYALS LOSE TWO

Kemp Wicker Loses First Game of the Year to the Orioles

(By the Associated Press)

Regardless of what else may happen in the International League this season, it appears unlikely that either the northern or southern section of the circuit will overpower the other half to any appreciable extent.

Today's standing shows the first division equally divided between northern and southern teams. And although a couple of doubleheaders can produce big changes, the four top teams look as if they might stay up there.

Jersey Giants won a doubleheader Sunday from Newark—and they had to in order to hold their lead. Rochester Red Wings and Baltimore Orioles remained tied for second, just one game behind by beating Syracuse and Montreal, respectively, in twin bills. Buffalo Bisons took two from Toronto to hop over Montreal and Newark into fourth place.

The position of the Bisons is perhaps the biggest surprise found in the first division. Ollie Carnegie came up with the blow that beat Toronto in yesterday's first game 4-3 when he belted a long hit with the bases full in the 10th inning. His team-mates took the hint, putting together bursts of six and nine runs to take the second game 16-9.

After pulling a season-record crowd of 15,218 into Newark's Ruppert Stadium, Jersey City pulled out two decisions by the home run route, 8-6 and 5-0. Johnny Dickshot hit for the circuit in each game to account for five runs while Jimmy Vernon belted one with the bases full in the opener.

Rochester had to go 11 innings to take the opener from Syracuse 5-4 on two hits a balk and an error plus Mike Ryba's fine relief pitching. Then young Fran Riel hurled three-hit ball to take the nightcap 8-3 with the aid of an early assault on Cy Blanton.

Kemp Wicker, Montreal's mound ace, suffered his first defeat of the season when the Orioles touched him for four hits and two runs in the 11th to win 7-6. Then Baltimore blasted three more pitchers for 10 runs in four innings to take the nightcap 12-4.

General H. G. Winkelman, commander-in-chief of the Dutch army and navy, is shown at his desk. On his shoulders rests the responsibility for the defence of his country today.

When Bimelech won the 50th running of the Preakness on Saturday he upset any chances of Gallahadion turning the "hat trick" in American racing. The "hat trick" on the United States tracks is accomplished when a three-year-old thoroughbred wins the Kentucky Derby, the Preakness and the Belmont Stakes in succession. It takes a great piece of horse flesh to pull this trick. Actually only four three-year-olds ever rose to the heights of accomplishing the "hat trick" of turfdom in the U.S. A. They were Sir Barton, the Canadian-owned horse in 1919; Gallant Fox in 1930; Omaha in 1935 and War Admiral in 1937 and all hit the jackpot. "Big Bim" was a favourite to turn the trick in 1940, but Gallahadion upset the dope bucket in the Kentucky Derby. Sir Barton was a great runner, but he saw his finish when beaten in that famous matched race at Kennilworth Track in 1919 when Man o' War beat him. Incidentally Omaha was a son of a previous "hat trick" horse—Gallant Fox.

Possibly the greatest three-year-olds were Man o' War and Gallant Fox, but they did not go on to run the handicaps year after year as did Exterminator, Sun Beau and Seabiscuit. Take Man o' War for instance—he won eleven starts as a three-year-old, while Gallant Fox copped an even dozen, including a gruelling two mile gold cup run, where horses are horses. The Fox's winnings as a 3-year-old were $308,275.00, an all-time high. It is said that Gallant Fox, in two seasons, ran only 33 minutes, for an average of about $10,000 per minute or $16,500 a mile, which makes mile racing come rather high wherever the Fox was concerned. However, there will be no "hat trick" in American racing this year, after Bimelech's great run in winning the Preakness. Had "Big Bim" been himself at Churchill Downs one week previous, no doubt Col. Bradley's great horse would have joined Gallant Fox, War Admiral and the others, as triple winners as three - year - olds. Incidentally Mioland second in the Preakness, is a stable mate of the great Seabiscuit.

Insofar as the 50th running of the Preakness was concerned, it was Bimelech all the way. Andy K. bumped "Big Bimmy" at the start, but Jockey Smith righted the big fellow and he took the lead never to be headed and Smith did not so much as lay a whip or spur to the winner. Mioland came from nowhere to finish second, and Gallahadion, the Kentucky Derby winner of a week previous, was third. Jockey Smith says now that Bimelech did not like the Churchill Downs track and many who thought "Big Bim" was over-rated are inclined to believe Smith. Bimelech's time for the Preakness was 1.58 3-5 minutes, just two-fifths of a second under the Maryland classic record time. Had Bimelech been pressed on Saturday no doubt he would have established a record. In winning Bimelech earned $53,865.00 for his owner. The next big turf event in the U.S.A. for 3-year-olds is the Belmont Stakes, when "Big Bimmy" will again rule the favourite.

With the softballers having held the pre-season limelight in spring training for some weeks, the baseball diamondites will swing into the picture with their initial spring workout at the Collegiate Campus on Wednesday night. Belleville has a team entered in the Bay of Quinte League, along with Picton and the 47th Battery of Napanee, while efforts to include an interlocking schedule with the clubs in the Lake Shore League are in the making. In the meantime, however, the local management is anxious to have every boy in Belleville, who is anxious to play baseball, attend the spring training practices, as the Belleville entry has to be completely overhauled and much new and energetic blood added to the local roster before another baseball season rolls around. Two practices are on the card for this week, Wednesday and Thursday at the Collegiate campus.

It appears as though the heavyweight fight game is in such a slump at the moment that Joe Louis and past champions are now taking turns knocking one another in magazine articles. The boxing commissions can't collect taxes on such fights.

When Ernie Hamilton, of Montreal, told the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union (The Big Four) there would only be one football team in Montreal this season the news must have rocked the Peterboro rugby interests until they are chewing aspirins like Wrigleys. With Hugh Campbell at the helm the Peterboro rugby outfit is ready to sponsor a strong team in the senior O.R.F.U., but with only Sarnia and the Petes left, things look rather glum, to say the least. However, there is a movement on foot to subsidize both Cobourg and Dundas in the matter of senior grid entries, but from a distance this looks highly improbable. At their annual meeting the Big Four voted to back the C.R.U.'s recent ruling to the limit. After all why shouldn't they—the C.R.U. adopted the Eastern rules practically in their entirety.

"Heaven with a Barbed Wire Fence"

Going nowhere, with no one to turn to but each other, a hitch-hike girl and a boy "on the road" have got a nerve to be in love, but can you expect them to wait for heaven? Their situation makes for highly dramatic and interesting screen fare at the Capitol theatre, where "Heaven with a Barbed Wire Fence" is now showing. Jean Rogers, Raymond Walburn, Marjorie Rambeau, Glenn Ford and Nicholas Conte are featured in the cast. Ricardo Cortez directed. And on the same programe

"The Devil is Driving"

They found one fightin' prosecutor who was too hot to handle—when his sob-sister sweetheart turned on the heat! That's Richard Dix, star of Columbia's "The Devil is Driving."

He dared to pillory the playboys who painted the town red with wine, women and song—and stained the highways red with blood, terror and tears! These playboy killers cringed when this two-fisted D.A. cracked down! Here is one of the most shocking stories that ever scorched the screen with its flaming fury!

PREAKNESS WINNER

'BIG BIM"

Col. Bradley's great three-year-old, Bimelech, that, although losing the Kentucky Derby, came back to prove he was a great race horse and won the 50th running of the Preakness at Pimlico track on Saturday. With Jockey Smith up "Bib Bim" had little trouble in vanquishing the field as many of the entries threatened him, but the pride of the Bradley stables won handily and without whip or spur, covering the Preakness distance in 1.58 3-5 minutes, only two-fifths of a second under the record. Mioland was second and Gallahadion, the Kentucky Derby winner, third.

OWNER OF GALLAHADION ADMIRES TROPHY

Mrs. Ethel V. Mars, RIGHT, owner of Gallahadion the 3-year-old colt that won the Kentucky Derby, and her daughter, Mrs. Alan Feeney admire the trophy that was delivered to her four days after Gallahadion won the derby at Churchill Downs. A severe cold prevented Mrs. Mars from attending the Derby. In Saturday's running of the Preakness at Baltimore, however, Gallahadion finished third to Bimelech and Mioland in that order.

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, May 14
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

ADVERSE planetary influences dominating this day forecast sudden upheavals, commotion, stress and cross purposes generally, all precipitated without warning and with unpredictable denouement. Strange and critical situations seem to pop up from nowhere, and in their immediate adjustment there is little to be expected in the way of help from elders, superiors, employers or others who might be in a position to assist. Perhaps much finesse, tact or subtle influence might be brought to bear on such resistance.

Those whose birthday it is would find it well to be on guard for a year of disruption, disintegration, sudden reversals or an avalanche of sudden and unpredictable visitations, which may be breath-taking as well as dramatic. Those from whom wise counsel or solid assistance might be expected may not co-operate unless approached in a delicate, diplomatic or subtle manner, in which their emotions are sympathetically touched.

A child born on this day may have certain cleverness, peculiar sagacity or intuitions, but generally it may be restless, erratic, irresponsible and not prone to the "straight and narrow path," unless given rigorous training in youth.

Jean Rogers is a hitch-hike girl and Glenn Ford's "on the road" in "Heaven With a Barbed Wire Fence," now showing at the Capitol and on the same program Richard Dix in "The Devil Is Driving."

RECOVER FROM SHOCKS

Campbellford, Ont., May 13 (CP) Mrs. Ernest McCook and Miss Julia McArthur were recovering today from shock and bruises, received Saturday when they were knocked down by an automobile at a main intersection. The car was driven by Robert Melville, Stirling. After medical treatment, the women were taken to their home in Percy township.

New star team of Miriam Hopkins and Errol Flynn debuts in "Virginia City," roaring tale of the Old West, featuring Randolph Scott, now on the Belle screen.

NAZIS ATTEMPT

Germans Deny Allegation

(German authorities have denied that their parachute troops wear anything but their distinctive, grey-green cover-all uniform. Germany threatened Britain, France, Belgium and The Netherlands today through neutral diplomatic channels that any evidence of dealing with them in a manner "contrary to international law" would lead to severe reprisals.

(In an official interpretation of this warning, it was threatened that 10 Allied soldiers would be executed for every parachute trooper shot contrary to international law. A note from Premier Reynaud's office yesterday announced that any enemy parachutists found in France not wearing their national uniform would be shot.)

Very Well Informed

This source said the parachutists were very well informed about the localities in which they land and instances were reported in The Netherlands of their going directly to addresses of German sympathizers.

He said the number of German planes destroyed in air combats, by anti-aircraft and on the ground was believed to exceed 200. The number included Messerschmitt fighters shot down by the Royal Air Force, he said.

He denied there was any truth in a German claim that 20 British Spitfires had been shot down, saying only that one of that type had been damaged. (German claims were widened today in a report of German news agency that 36 Spitfires had been shot down in The Netherlands.)

TRAFFICACCOUNTS

John Green, 29, London district, died a few hours after the car in which he was a passenger struck a bridge near London. George Calbeck, 29, London, was charged with manslaughter.

Irene Ball, 16, Vinemount, Ont., died in Hamilton Hospital Saturday of injuries suffered when two cars collided. Eight persons were in the two cars and all others suffered slight injuries. One of the automobiles took fire and was destroyed.

Killed By Railway Engine

Charles Wakelin of Swansea, suburban Toronto, was killed when struck and mangled by a railway engine as he took a short cut home following a visit to his fiancee. He planned to marry next month.

Frank Smith, 48, Toronto, died of heart seizure a short time after he became involved in an argument in a Toronto hotel and was knocked to the floor by an unnamed man.

A well-known baseball player in Port Credit, Edward (Buck) Campbell, 27, died in a Toronto hospital of burns suffered in a boiler explosion at an oil refinery near Port Credit. Seven-year-old Ruth Farrow of Caledonia died of burns received when her clothes caught fire at her farm home.

At Pembroke, Mrs. Harry Felhaber, 38, died of burns received in her home when a coal stove exploded as she attempted to light it with coal oil.

The body of George E. Hull, 37, Dundas, was found in his automobile near Hamilton. A piece of hose attached to the exhaust pipe ran into the rear seat of the car.

Andrew Miller, 55, Toronto, died five days after a horse attached to the bread wagon he drove trampled him when it became frightened and bolted.

John Norrish, 80, Toronto, and Mrs. Matilda McCracken, 80, died of injuries suffered in falls in their homes.

ITALY REINFORCES

Italian authorities resumed requisitioning trucks for the second time since the outbreak of the war last September. A reliable source said 2,000 trucks were requisitioned in Rome alone.

There was an unconfirmed report the sale of foreign newspapers, including the Vatican l'Osservatore Romano, was to be prohibited in Rome.

Mussolini Busy On Sunday.

Premier Mussolini ordered further improvement of the line in a busy Sunday during which he conferred with high officers of the army, including those who command zones on the French border, on "military questions concerning their armies," as an official announcement phrased it.

Details of the fortifications have been kept secret, but they are believed to extend through the Brenner Pass and along the border with Germany as well as the French frontier.

Il Duce also found time Sunday to pilot his own bombing plane for two hours over the coast near Rome and out to sea to survey shipping.

Difference of Opinion Reported.

There were street outbursts among Italians yesterday and last night, nad differences of Italian opinion about the German entrance into Belgium and the Netherlands were widely reported. One woman who defaced an anti-British poster in Rome last night was roughly handled by a crowd, bystanders said.

In several instances, copies of the Vatican City newspaper, l'Osservatore Romano, which contained Pope Pius' expressions of support for the rulers of Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg, were torn from readers' hands by blackshirted Fascists. Onlookers said one remainder was ducked in a fountain.

Students seized copies of the Vatican City paper from some railway news stands.

Out of all this, the general belief in neutral quarters was that Italy was not yet ready to enter the war but was willing to try to help Germany to divert the attention of Britain and France.

Y. M. C. A. Thanked For Donation of Sports Equipment

Picton, Ontario,
May 11, 1940.

The Editor,

Through the kindness of the Y.M.C.A. who donated this equipment, the members of this Unit are now able to enjoy their sports to the fullest extent.

LOANS WITHOUT ENDORSERS

You can borrow $100 if you can pay back $7.78 a month

Here's a convenient way to borrow and a convenient way to repay. Household Finance is now making loans to employed men and women in this community on a helpful "fit-your-budget" plan. No endorsers or guarantors, no stocks or bonds are required. You may take as long as fifteen months to repay. Or you may repay sooner to reduce the cost.

Choose your own payments

Suppose that you need $100. You find this amount in the first column of the table below. Then read across, picking out the monthly payment which you wish to make. You will see that monthly payments of $7.78, for instance, will repay your loan in full in fifteen months. Or twelve monthly payments of $9.46 each will also repay a $100 loan if you pay on schedule. There is nothing more to pay. You may wish to borrow an amount not in the table. If so, just tell us how much you need and for how long.

You can borrow $20 to $500 if you can make these convenient monthly payments

Little Benny's Note Book

I was laying on the floor thinking about having to do my homework, and pop was sitting in his private chair thinking about having to go out with ma and play bridge, and I said, G wizzickers, some people have all the luck.

Present company excepted, as far as I'm concerned, pop said.

Meaning not him, and I said, Leroy Shooster is the guy I'm thinking of. Holey smokes that guy cant hardly breethe without being lucky, I said, and pop said, That sounds a little far fetched, and yet I'm sure if he ever stopped breething he'd star being unlucky.

Jimminy crickits he cant hardly walk a block before he finds something without a owner, I said. Holey smokes he couldn't be unlucky if he tried. G roozalem, pop, do do know what happened to him one time? He slipped and fell down on the payment, and all anybody elts would of got for their trouble would of been a big scrape on their chin or something, but when Leroy Shooster stopped sliding the end of his nose was right on top of a dime, I said, and pop said, Well, constant good luck isn't always such a good thing.

Well G wizzickers, pop, why isn't it? I said, and pop said, Because it's apt to fool the so called lucky person into believing that life is just one big bed of rosy horse shoes, and later on the shock is too much for him when he finds out that some of the horse shoes are rusty and have sharp nails still sticking in them. Why, what good fortune has descended on Leroy lately to cause all this depression on your part? he said.

He went and sprained his ankle and he's having more fun than little with his crutches, I said, and pop said, Yee gods, do your lessons.

Wich just then ma looked in the room with her hat on and pop got up against his will.

Amsterdam Has Two Air-Raid Alarms and Parachute Troops Dropped by Enemy Quickly Dispersed —Fifth-Column Snipers Cleaned Up During the Night

Amsterdam, May 13 (AP)—The Netherlands high command reported today a withdrawal of its forces "with slight losses" at Ijessel Meer (Zuider Zee) while to the south German and Dutch troops were engaged west of the Ijssel River.

The Ijssel River flows north through Gelderland Province, East Central Netherlands, parallel with and about 30 miles from the border with Germany.

The high command's communique, broadcast from Hilversum 40 miles west of the Ijssel, said:

"German troops which crossed the Ijssel are in contact with the Dutch in West Gelderland.

"At Ijssel Meer the Dutch have withdrawn with slight losses.

"In the south of Rotterdam there still are some Germans, but they are without artillery.

"Dutch aviation is putting up a brave defence against a much larger enemy air force."

motorized forces launched new attacks on all positions. Belgian troops are fighting in close liaison with British and French forces."

Refugees streamed out of this tense capital as Belgian troops, entrenched in second line positions, battled fiercely to stem the German drive which yesterday penetrated the Albert Canal defences and reached a point 45 miles east of the city.

Officials said the situation at the front appeared "stabilizzed" and that Brussels was in no immediate danger from land attack.

Premier Hubert Pierlot said the German push had been halted near Waremme, about 20 miles southwest of the Dutch border at Maastricht, through which the Nazis advanced to strike at the Belgian frontier.

Breached Albert Canal

The Germans were reported to have breached the Albert Canal defences on a 5½ mile front, driving a salient into the Belgian lines just south of the historic fortified city of Liege.

The spearhead of the Nazi thrust extended 13 miles west of Liege, thus threatening the flank of the ancient city—which fell to the Germans 26 years ago after three days of bitter fighting.

Pierlot said that the Liege forts had successfully fought off heavy frontal attacks, and it appeared that except for the break at Maastricht the Belgians were still holding the Albert Canal line.

A Belgian communique said the Germans had attempted to cross the canal by means of boats at one point but had been beaten back by heavy fire.

The communique disclosed that French troops are fighting beside their new Belgian allies in the front lines.

"A French counter-attack against enemy motorized units was successful," it said. "A great number of enemy tanks were destroyed."

Roads leading north from the French border were choked with Allied troops moving up to the front. The government maintained strict supervision over the civilian exodus from Brussels to prevent its interfering with the movement of these reinforcements.

The capital, already attacked from the air a half.dozezn times, was subjected to numerous air raid alarms yesterday. In Louvain and Antwerp, which also have been bombed, sirens screamed frequent warnings.

Behind the lines Belgian troops were kept busy mopping up German parachute troops which were dropped in widely scattered areas during the weekend.

German aerial activity was heavy, and troop concentrations and lines of communication were subjected to a heavy rain of bombs.

20 Nazi Planes Shot Down

It was officially estimated 20 Nazi planes had been shot down over Belgian territory yesterday, and at least 100 Saturday.

Foreign Minister Paul Henri Spaak told correspondents that while the situation was serious the government was not discouraged and that morale remained high.

Premier Pier'ot said the Germans effected their first crossing of the Albert Canal Saturday opposite Maastricht, about 15 miles north of Liege.

He said the officer in charge of this sector was killed by an aerial bomb before he was able to carry out orders to destroy two bridges across the canal. The second in command hesitated to execute the assignment, and in the interval, German motorized units poured across the waterway, gaining a foothold from which they were able to break through the Belgian defences.

Later, Pierlot said, a Belgian officer made a suicide dash through the German lines and blew up one of the bridges.

Supported by Tanks

The German drive westward through the breach in the Albert Canal defences was supported by "an enormous mass of tanks and aircraft," Pierlot said.

CAUGHT IN FIRE NET

Toronto, May 13—(CP)—A 20-year-old woman leaped from the window ledge of a third-storey room in a house on Church street last night after keeping a crowd of 100 watching in the rain for 30 minutes. She was caught in a fire department net and escaped injury.

Police said the woman was crouched unclothed on the ledge.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 13 (CP).—Toronto Exchange today registered low spirits. Losses ranged up to nearly three points in the indices, selling slowed down after mid-day. Prices at noon were at their lowest level of the year.

Losses in the industrials were registered in points among the leaders. Bell Telephone dropped four and point losses were scattered through the steel, paper, beverage and textile groups.

In the golds Lake Shore at 21 was down 1½ to its bottom price in about ten years. Macassa, Sigma, Preston, Central Patricia, Powell Rouyn, East Malartic, MacLeod-Cockshutt and other leaders of medium-prices declined 10 cents to 25 cents. Nickel and Smelters lost a point or more. Steep Rock at 2.10 was down 37 cents.

Western oils declined widely.

WALL STREET

New York, May 13—(AP)—Pessimism over shifting European battle lines received the principle blame for another stock market relapse today and around noon losses were extended to as much as 8 points for a few pivotals.

The speed of the drive, particularly against stocks known to be widely held abroad, led some brokers to conclude that foreign liquidation may have been a factor.

Canadian issues were a bit sluggish. Hiram Walker held steadily while Dome mines, McIntyre and Distillers rested unchanged. Canadian Pacific and Lake Shore mines dipped fractions. Canada 4s, among bonds, dipped 5-8 point.

WAR TO VICTORY

In a seven-minute speech he recounted the formation of the war cabinet and appointment of service ministers "in one single day on account of the extreme urgency and rigor of events."

He said his war cabinet of five members, including opposition leaders, represented the unity of the Nation. He said he would submit a further list of ministers to the King tonight.

War Secretary Anthony Eden told a questioner in the House that he hoped to make an early statement on "immediate formation of a voluntary corps composed of older men armed with rifles and Bren guns for instant action in any locality" in Britain in view "of the imminent danger of enemy parachutists landing in this country."

Mr. Churchill emphasized the seriousness of his task of cabinet-making by stating: "We are in the preliminary phase of one of the greatest battles in history. We are in action at many other points — in Norway and in Holland and we have to be prepared in the Mediterranean."

It Is Victory At All Costs.

On the question of Britain's aim, Mr. Churchill said in ringing tones: "I can answer in one word—it is victory—victory at all costs in spite of all terrors."

He warned, however, that there were "many, many long months of struggle and suffering" ahead.

Members of the House generally approved the declaration of the Prime Minister.

Sir Percy Harris, Liberal, said Mr. Churchill had "the necessary vigor and imagination for the task ahead."

H. B. Lees-Smith, Labor, praised the Prime Minister's "fighting and stirring and noble words which he has addressed to the nation."

British Unity

Mr. Lees-Smith announced to the House the Labor party conference vote at Bournemouth approving participation in the cabinet. He said Britain's unity was gained "by discussion, persuasion, good will and good sense, not by the concentration camp, the rubber truncheon, and the executioner's block."

He added that the parliamentary form of government demonstrated it was "the most civilized in peace and the most formidable weapon of control in war."

James Maxton, Independent Labor, said he opposed the motion and did not approve of the government. He declared no one could deny Mr. Churchill's personality and courage, but said he could not see the "wonderful motive power supposed to have been produced by the change in positions" of Messrs Churchill and Chamberlain.

W. P. Spens, Conservative, welcomed the new government and evoked an outburst of cheering when he praised Mr. Chamberlain for "the example set to the country" in resigning.

Lloyd George Praises 'Old Friend'

David Lloyd George, Liberal, supported the motion and offered personal good wishes to his "old friend—the new Prime Minister."

Congratulating the country on Mr. Churchill's elevation "at this very critical, terrible moment," Mr. Lloyd George lauded the Prime Minister's "glittering, intellectual gifts, dauntless courage and profound study of war, his experience in its operation and direction."

With emphasis, he added: "They will all be needed now."

"Friends of freedom and human right throughout the world wish him God-speed," Mr. Lloyd George declared. "The sacrifices of Britain and her Empire will be at his disposal."

Sir Stafford Cripps, Labor, warned that a "substantially" one-party Commons might lose interest in the votes and "also in the administration of the affairs of the country." He suggested an overhauling of the nation's democratic machinery, a remark made amid cries of "no!"

Laborite Claims There is Shortage

Ben Smith, Labor, said there was "a lamentable shortage of the things that our armed forces are much in need of today."

George Lambert, Liberal National, praised Mr. Chamberlain as a "great Englishman" who showed "fine self-sacrificing patriotism."

Sir Irving Albery, Conservative, criticized "certain Privy Councillors" who, he said, turned last week's debate on the Norwegian campaign "into a political manoeuvre."

Australian Pilot Downs Six in Past Three Days

London, May 13—(CP Cable) — The Exchange Telegraph Agency's correspondent with the Royal Air Force in France reported today that one young Australian fighter pilot has downed six German aircraft in the past three days, bringing his total bag since the war began to 11.

The pilot got two Dorniers on Friday morning, the first day of "total war," one Messerschmitt 110 Saturday, and two Henschel army co-operation aircraft and one Messerschmitt 109 yesterday.

The correspondent added that "this is typical of the work being done here by our fighter pilots."

Yesterday the same pilot, with other members of his flight, battled with five Messerschmitt 110s—the formidable cannon-firing type —and believes the R.A.F. formation shot down the lot.

3 Political Parties Represented in Win-War Gov't

Churchill Prepares Britain for Mighty Counter-Offensive Against Germany

DUFF-COOPER'S POST

Three Fighting Services Are Administered by New Men—Eden Goes to War Office, Alexander Returns to Admiralty, Sinclair Becomes Air Secretary

London, May 13 (CP)—Britain's aggressive new Prime Minister, Winston Churchill, today rounded out his cabinet and prepared Britain for a mighty counter-offensive against Nazi Germany, while police rounded up foreigners who might possibly constitute a "Fifth Column" in the event Germany sought to land parachutists in Britain.

Mr Churchill set up a five-man war cabinet and filled most of the top jobs of his government. He reached into the camps of three political arties for the men he wanted for his "Win the War" government.

War Cabinet of Five

All members of the cabinet will be freed from departmental responsibilities to concentrate on the major task of drafting war strategy.

They are:

Prime Minister and Minister of Defence: Mr. Churchill.

Lord President of the Council: Neville Chamberlain.

Lord Privy Seal: Clement Attlee, Labor parliamentary leader.

Foreign Secretary: Viscount Halifax.

Without Portfolio: Arthur Greenwood, deputy Labor leader.

The three fighting services will be administered by new men. A. V. Alexander returns to the Admiralty post he held in the last Labor government. Sir Archibald Sinclair, Scottish laird who leads the Liberal party, replaces Sir Samuel Hoare as air secretary. Anthony Eden steps across Whitehall from the Dominions Office to the War Office.

Simon Lord Chancellor

Mr. Churchill named Sir John Simon to the position of Lord Chancellor, which carries with it the Speakership of the House of Lords. Sir Kingsley Wood succeeds Sir John as Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Alfred Duff Cooper, a former Conservative minister, became Minister of Information, and Herbert Morrison, Labor's "Prime Minister of London" became Supply Minister.

Sir John Anderson, Home Secretary and Minister of Home Security is a re-appointment.

Lord Lloyd, Colonial Secretary.

Sir Andrew Duncan, president of the Board of Trade. Re-appointment.

Churchill invited Ernest Bevin, general secretary of the powerful Transport Workers Union, to become Minister of Labor and assist in the direction of a drive to turn out munitions and war planes on a vast scale.

Mr. Bevin was expected to accept the appointment after consulting with union executives.

R. A. F. Bags 100 Foe Airplanes Over Week-end

A British communique, however, reported that the Royal Air Force had shot down approximately 100 German planes over the week-end and had helped check the Nazi push by bombing lines of communication.

British general headquarters said the "successful advance of the British expeditionary force into Belgium in conjunction with French forces is continuing as planned" and added that British mechanized forces had won an edge in initial skirmishes with the Germans on the Belgian front.

Minelayer is Missing

On the debit side of the ledger was an Admiralty announcement yesterday that the undersea minelayer Seal was missing and presumed lost. The Seal, which normally carried 55 men, was the eighth British submarine known lost since the war started.

The drive to step up the British war effort was accompanied by swift action to forestall any German attempt to invade England from the air with the aid of "fifth column" activity.

Acting on orders from the Home Office, Scotland Yard rounded up more than 3,000 Germans and Austrians living in 20 east coast countries and turned them over to military authorities for internment in concentration camps.

Police said that number of aliens undoubtedly would have to suffer as a result of the roundup, but that the government could not take a chance of missing any potential "fifth columnists."

Aliens in Coastal Areas

Every male alien between 16 and 60 living in coastal areas was ordered to report daily to the police. They were forbidden to use private motor vehicles or bicycles and must stay indoors from 8 p.m. to 6 a.m.

The sweeping reconstruction of the government, which gave Churchill the greatest power ever accorded a British Prime Minister, was generally well received by the Press.

Newspapers characterized Mr. Churchill's appointments as a happy solution of the crisis which caused Neville Chamberlain to resign as Prime Minister and predicted the changes would put new drive in the war effort.

Preparations were made meanwhile to shelter the stream of refugees which began arriving here yesterday from Belgium and Holland.

Twenty of London's 28 boroughs were designated as reception centres and the government took over the Wembley sports arena as a temporary shelter.

Plans were made to send some of the refugees to northern Ireland if they arrive in numbers too great to handle in England.

DUTCH COMMAND

Amsterdam had two air raid alarms and it was reported that German planes had dropped parachute troops.

The parachute troops were said to have dropped from several German planes that flew over the city after daylight. However, the army quickly had the situation in hand, it was reported, and the city generally was quiet.

Dutch troops, meanwhile, cleaned up fifth-column snipers in the southern section of the city, where there was fighting during the night.

Withdrawn to new positions in central and southern Holland, a determined Dutch army engaged German invaders in heavy fighting along a redrawn front, with 20,000 British troops bolstering their central positions and French reinforcements in contact with the Nazis in the south.

Cleared Out of Rotterdam

The Dutch High Command announced the army was "completely master of the situation" in the interior. Enemy parachute troops virtually were cleared out of Rotterdam, where they still held Waalhaven airport but were unable to use it because of heavy Dutch artillery fire. Elsewhere they were reported wiped out or "rendered harmless".

Strenuous measures were put into effect to guard against any further uprisings by traitorous or planted fifth-columnists.

Civilians in The Hague seat of the government, were ordered to keep their doors and windows closed. Assembling of three or more persons in the streets was forbidden.

Curfew already was in effect in The Hague. A new order from the Commander of the Army in the field banned civilians from the streets between 8 p.m. and 8 a.m. in all areas east of a line running from Amsterdam south to the Belgian border town of Zundert, and in the entire province of North Brabant, which borders on Belgium.

Rushed Across Meuse

The Dutch disclosed German troops had pushed their advance across the Maas (Meuse) and Ijssel Rivers at several points. An early-morning communique from the high command said that—

Netherlands border troops were withdrawn "virtually without damage;"

Dutch aircraft bombarded the Nazi columns:

French troops coming to the relief of the Netherlands' 400,000-man army engaged the enemy in the eastern part of North Brabant, where the Maas runs north just inside the German border;

British troops were reported occupying land and floodwater defence posts in Central Holland.

The Dutch also withdraw in the Nort ern Provinces, where there are no defence lines. But this was no more than had been expected, since the Netherlands' defence plans were built around the idea that the main stand would have to be taken behind the inundated central regions which form the chief line of defence.

Rotterdam Cleared

The Dutch retreat in the north also was effective in retarding the progress of the Hitler Blitzkrieg columns, the High Command said.

Stating that the clearing of Rotterdam "has now been nearly brought to an end", the communique said:—

"The airfield of Waalhaven has been heavily shelled by our artillery and in consequence has now lost all importance for the enemy".

Other parachute troops landed at only a few points in the interior, it announced, "but these have been rendered harmless. Some Germans who landed the first day of the war are wandering about and are being chased and annihilated.

"Some of them seized a few buses and took along Dutch citizens These Germans were rendered harmless by our armored cars," the communique said.

"It seems that German troops in Holland are not able to fight without being shielded by Dutch soldiers or civilians."

POLICE SEARCHING YOUTH

Owen Sound, Ont., May 13 — (CP)—Police pressed today their search for an unidentified youth who threw four-year-old Nancy Jean Read into the Sydenham River Saturday and then ran away. The child, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Read, was rescued by George Jackson and Ernest Morris who heard her screams. She was none the worse for her experience.

Funeral service will be held in All Saints Church and burial will take place in Beechwood Cemetery.

General Matthews was appointed Adjutant-General in August, 1938, and the arduous duties of his office, intensified with the outbreak of war, affected his health and he was confined to hospital for many weeks. He returned home to convalesce but recently suffered a relapse which led to his death.

He is survived by his widow, the former Helen Lesueur of Ottawa, whom he married in 1926, one son, David, and three sisters, Miss K. S. Matthews of London, Ont., Mrs. A. D. Hardie of Oliver, B. C., and Mrs. William Cato of Auckland, New Zealand.

He proceeded overseas with the 8th Infantry Battalion in 1914, and served in France and Belgium with his unit until wounded in 1915.

He returned to the 8th Battalion in France later in 1915 and was appointed Officer Commanding 8th Battalion, this appointment he held until he was wounded a second time in 1916. Promoted to the rank of Colonel while in command of the Canadian troops, Hastings, England, he returned to France, and was appointed to headquarters, 1st Canadian Division General Staff Officer, and continued in this appointment during the march to the Rhine.

Brigadier in 1938

He was appointed to a commission in the Royal Canadian Machine Gun Brigade in 1921, on a reconstitution of the Permanent Active Militia, and transferred to the Lord Strathcona's Horse (Royal Canadian) in 1923. Was promoted temporary Brigadier in 1932, and Major-General in 1938.

General Matthews formerly was Assistant Director of Military Intelligence and Director of Military Operations and Intelligence at National Defence Headquarters; District Officer Commanding, Military District No. 3, Calgary; and Commandant of the Royal Military College of Canada, Kingston, Ont.

For service during the First Great War, he was made a Companion of the Order of Saint Michael and Saint George, received the Distinguished Service Order, and on four occasions was mentioned in despatches. He also received the Croix De Guerre (Belgium.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

POLICE START DRIVE ON TRAFFIC VIOLATORS

Pursuant to the recent announcements made by His Worship, Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., relative to warnings issued regarding speeding and general traffic violations on Belleville thoroughfares, city police moved into concerted action over the week end with drastic results.

P.O. Wright apprehended Leslie Smallhorn of the Trenton R.C.A.F. as the latter failed to observe a local stop street sign and speeded directly into a through street. Detective Fred Izard apprehended one Joseph Garelick, of Montreal, in the act of speeding along West Bridge Street, while several other delinquents will also face motor traffic charges as the result of their alleged violations of the city traffic ordinances.

Constable Doug Ellis mounted the city motorists over the week end to inaugurate the city motorcycle patrol, which has been inactive since last October.

SEEDING OPERATIONS NOW WELL ADVANCED

All seeding operations on high land throughout the Belleville district is now well advanced with the occasional farmer in the Stirling and Oak Hills district reporting their seeding completed with the exception of buckwheat which is never sown until the early summer. Farmers residing in low-lying areas also report their seeding well along and many expect to be though within the next week.

An almost complete lack of rain permitted speedy work on the land this season as once the fields dried it was possible to continue spring's work almost without a break. The exceptional coolness of the weather also aided considerably in the rapid completion of the work as horses were not hampered by hot weather and flies which have been in evidence in other years.

TWO SMALL FIRES

A blazing rubbish pile behind Walker's Hardware store on Front St. occasioned the firemen a short run late Saturday afternoon but the blaze was quickly extinguished with only a couple of cans of water being required to put out the flames with no damage being reported.

At four-thirty o'clock this morning the roof of the C.P.R. "ducket" on South Pinnacle Street became ablaze as sparks from the stove settled on the wooden shingles. Very little damage resulted however as the blaze was discovered soon after the outset, and the flames were quickly extinguished by the firemen.

Mrs. James Lamberton Wins First Prize in Misspelled-Words in Contest

There Were Fourteen Words Misspelled in Ads of Special Section — Twelve Was the Highest Number Found

TWO TIE FOR SECOND

There were 14 misspelled words on pages 12, 13, 14 and 15 in the special "Clean Up—Paint Up—Fix Up" section of The Ontario Intelligencer last Friday, but the most that were discovered by the numerous readers who sent in their lists in the cash prize contest, was 12. First prize goes to Mrs. Jas. Lamberton, 166 Burnham Street, Belleville, who submitted a list of 18 words, but six of which were not counted as mistakes.

Second and third prizes go to Miss Helen McQuaid, 50 Geddes Street, Belleville, and Miss E. B. Duffield, 108 Chatham Street, Belleville, respectively, who each had a correct list of 11 errors in spelling. Both entries having arrived simultaneously, the decision had to be reached on neatness—and even at that, both are very neat writers.

The correct list of misspelled words is as follows:

Smith Hardware— drq (dry); anl (and.)

Arthur A. Sills—extrerior (exterior.)

Walker Hardware—Limted (Limited.)

McIntosh Bros. — fillet (filet); Criss Cros (Criss Cross); fillet (filet); waights (weights); mach (match.)

White's Hardware — paintnig (painting.)

Bishop's Seed Store—O'Hhara (O'Hara.)

E. D. Mott— veeners (veneers); Buildres (Builders.)

Hickey's Seed Store—Hvae (have)

Some contestants thought that the abbreviations of "Company" (Co'y) and that "Glorys" should have "ies." The first is a common abbreviation, while the spelling of the second is accepted as that appearing on seed packages. Neither of these words affected the outcome of the contest.

Contestants from outside points fared badly, not one getting within five words of the correct solution.

The Ontario Intelligencer wishes to thank the large number who took an interest in the contest, and to those who failed to win a prize—better luck next time. It should be added that the contestants will make no mistake by purchasing articles advertised in the special section.

Day of Big Nickel is Over Says Chairman Thompson at Band Concert

Appeal Made for Generous Donations to War Services Dep't. of Y.M.C.A.

MANY FINE NUMBERS

Appreciation of good music and the willingness to cooperate with the fine work being done by the War Services Department of the Y.M.C.A. was evidenced here last night when the Belleville Municipal Band under Lieut. Fred Jobson, and assisting artists offered a highly entertaining program to a capacity house at the Capitol Theatre.

Mr. Newton Thompson, president of the local branch of the Y.M.C.A. was chairman and in his opening remarks appealed to the large audience for their full support of war service organizations. "The time has come for us to put our shoulders to the wheel, tighten our belts and give all that we can. The day of the big nickel is over. We must dig down, and dig deeply if we are going to win the war," he said.

Again the individual and collective artistry of Belleville's fine musical organization was shown in the many numbers offered by the band. Exceptionally well done was the famous overture to "William Tell" as were several marches and the popular numbers "Scatterbrain" and "The Singing Hills".

Belleville's male octette, under the direction of Mr. Harry Moorman, delighted the large audience with several selections, while Mr. James Bankier was called back after his rendition of several patriotic vocal numbers.

An artist who is rapidly gaining popularity with his mastery of the piano is Eric (Jimmy) Corradi, scenic artist of the Capitol Theatre who received the plaudits of the audience with his clever renditions of several popular numbers.

Another feature of the concert was the appearance of the Belleville Collegiate Glee Club under the baton of Mr. George Maybee. This clever group of boys and girls showed evidence of fine training and vocal ability with an outstanding performance.

The management of the Capitol Theatre, police, firemen and all artists who assisted in the program were cordially thanked by Chairman Thompson during the program.

Nearly $60.00 was realized.

Mother's Day Service At Aiken's Church

3rd Sidney. — Aiken's Church on Sunday was a profusion of potted plants and flowers, including beautiful lillies sent from Bermuda by Mr. Garnet Grills in memory of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Grills.

The Mother's Day service was in charge of Mr. Stanley Spafford, superintendent of the Sunday school.

Bible readings were given by Mr. Harry Seeley and Mr. Ronald Jones. A story, "The Unseen Guest" was told by Miss Clara Wilson. The address, "Having Christ in our homes" was given by the pastor, Rev. L. W. Scott. Homes built on the foundation of love, with four walls of truth, obedience, courage and service, homes where Christ abides, were homes where Christ's benediction will abide, said Mr. Scott.

The greatest reward for any mother or parent is to see their boys and girls growing up serving their Lord and their church.

During the service, Anna Marilyn Brickman, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Brickman and James Wilbur Jones young son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Jones were baptized by Rev. L. W. Scott.

Appropriate music by the choir, with Mrs. Harleigh Hamilton at the piano, added to the beauty of this Mother's Day service.

Rev. L. A. Gregory Special Speaker For Mother's Day

The Rev. Leland A. Gregory, of Toronto, General Secretary of the Board of Religious Education of the Baptist Convention for Ontario and Quebec, was the guest speaker at Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, Sunday morning for the Mother's Day Service under the auspices of the Intermediate B.Y.P.U.

Referring in his sermon to the terrible happening in the world today, Mr. Gregory said it was in precisely such times as these that the children of God shall reiterate the thing that has stirred the hearts of men down through the ages, the vision of a better order of civilization, promised by God through the mouths of the prophets of old and by Jesus Christ.

Through the bondage of Egypt, the tramplings of Babylon and many other periods of oppression the children of God could still see that vision and hear His promise amid the dine. As in the days of Moses, Esther and Mordecai the course of history will be changed still again in these days of great danger if we arise and do the will of God. We must not lose the vision nor turn a deaf ear to the word of God, asserted the speaker.

A gracious welcome to the pulpit was extended the Intermediate B.Y.P.U. by the pastor, Rev. Claude Troupe Olmstead, which was replied to by Miss Jean Cook, president of the organization. Scripture was read by Oscar Post and W. Hales offered the morning prayer. The Anthem, "Sing with Grace Unto the Lord" was pleasingly rendered by the intermediate choir and Miss Anna Hogle sang very sweetly "The Holy City." The guest preacher was introduced by Mr. W. Hales.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, May 13 (Special) — Police here experienced another quiet week-end and there were no reports of accidents on Saturday or Sunday. While motorists kept to the straight and narrow pedestrians watched their P's and Q's with the result, that the community was free of minor or serious mishaps for the first time in a number of months. Even boatsmen were more than careful and a goodly number of Trentonians took to the water yesterday for their first time this season. There seems to be more activity than usual along the waterfront this spring and water-taximen are looking for big business with the coming of summer. Young Bill Holmes is one of the local boys who has purchased a motor boat for pleasure purposes, the youth secured A. LaMorre's speed boat in a cash deal recently.

Timber Toppers New Champs

Allore's Timber Toppers are the new bowling champions of the town league and celebrated their victory at a banquet at the Royal Hotel on Thursday evening. At the banquet each member of the team was presented with a green and yellow leather windbreaker, the Allore crest was attached to the pocket of each jacket. Louis LaMorre captain of the 1940 winners spoke at the banquet. The Timber Toppers defeated Cities Service in close contests to take the Trenton crown.

Softball Tonight

The 1940 softball schedule gets underway here tonight when Canadian Dougnut and Benedict Proctor share the opening game honors in a ceremony which will be attended by Mr. Andrews the president of the Fried Cake Firm, who is coming in from Toronto for the special occasion. The league executive has planned a gala opening and the famous R.C.A.F. band may be in attendance. Neither team has been seen in action this term but talk on the street indicates that both sides are strong enough to win the pennant and will no doubt be in the playdowns when fall rolls around this year. Strong opposition can be expected from the R.C.A.F. however and if everything pans out as anticipated the Air Force will be represented by not one classy outfit but by two high calibre squads. The Bata Shoe is not to be overlooked in this softball race and the boys from Batatown will likely be the dark horse, who invariably comes from nowhere to steal the show and the pay-off money. Wooler and Quinte Transports critic says will be associated with the leaders throughout the season, which promises to be the greatest in the history of the game in Trenton.

Carnival Nets Legion $400

Sims Carnival Show sponsored by the Trenton Branch of the Canadian Legion paid the veterans $400, to play at Bayshore park for four days last week. The outfit left town on Sunday after a fairly successful session.

Building Programs Progressing Rapidly

There is plenty of building activity in Trenton and almost everywhere you go you see workmen busily engaged erecting new factories or living quarters. At the south end of the town the McFarland Construction Company has all but completed the new Crosse and Blackwell plant expected to be opened during the month of June. The long steel stack was put up last week by the John Inglis Company of Toronto. A half a mile away another gang of workmen erected a new smoke stack at the premises of the Trenton Dyeing and Finishing Company. William Huffman of Trenton erected the stack at the Dye Works. In the downtown area Messrs Richard Whitley and Gerald Weaver are building a sixteen apartment building, the new structure is taking form at the corner of Queen and Dundas Streets opposite Dr. J. W. Farley's fine residence.

It was reported yesterday that a new addition has been planned for the Lotus Cafe on Dundas Street, workmen have already started to enlarge the popular eatery. On Murphy Street the Lee Mallory apartment houses are being rushed to completion and will soon be open for occupation. A report is prevalent that the Mallory apartments have already been rented. Mr. Bert Strong is erecting a private home on Middle Street for Mr. Mallory and the Trenton business man will be moving into his new quarters shortly. On the east side of the river Mr. John Stacey is building two stores and four apartments for Mr. Donald Bonisteel a local grocery merchant.

Cadet Inspection Wednesday

Trenton High School cadets now affiliated with the Royal Canadian Air Force will be inspected this Wednesday by Captain P. A. Millett, district cadet officer for M.D. No. 3 with headquarters at Kingston. The ceremony will take place on the campus and Captain Millett will be accompanied by Wing Commander J. A. Sully Officer, Commanding Trenton Air Station No. 1. Later Captain Millett will be presented with the first report on the Trenton High School Air Cadet Corps to the Department of National Defence. Flight Sergt. Thompson, the corps instructor has the cadets in splendid shape for the inspection.

J. A. Sutcliffe Builds New Store

In the downtown section of the town next to the Selrite Store, Mr. J. A. Sutcliffe has about completed a new store, workmen are expected to start placing the modern front into position this week. Above the Selrite Store, Mr. Sutcliffe has opened several new apartments.

COUNTER-ATTACK

visit to the new war fronts in the low countries.

Called Greatest Attack

French dispatches called the German drive "the greatest attack in history," but expressed confidence it could be checked now that the main Allied fores were entering the lines.

Advance guards of the French columns which dashed into Belgium Friday immediately after the German invasion already were in contact with the enemy, military dispatches said.

The Belgian command credited French troops with a counter-attack against the Germans, while the Dutch reported the French were fighting in their province of East Brabant as well.

Troops in the great French series of Maginot line fortresses fought off a series of German attacks which lengthened the battle region to 300 miles, from the northern border of The Netherlands, through Belgium, Luxembourg and along the main French front.

Broken by Germans

The first defences of the lowlands, on the Ijssel River in The Netherlands and the Albert Canal in Belgium, were broken by the German assaults, but the defenders were reported falling back to new positions. (Here 28 words of dispatch censored.)

On the French front the Germans shifted their attack from the Vosges mountain region to the Warndt forest around the central Saar sector, but the main lines appeared unchanged.

Aerial activity remained intense, with the French command announcing destruction of 30 German planes in France Sunday.

Paris had two air raid alarms early today, one for an hour shortly after midnight and the second for 35 minutes at 5.35 a.m.

Communique Issued

This morning's regular communique said:

"In Holland and Belgium enemy attacks redoubled in violence, particularly in the region north of the Albert Canal, between the canal and the lower Rhine, as well as in the region southeast of Tirlemont and in the Belgian Ardennes.

"On the Franco-Luxembourg frontier from Longwy to the Moselle there were no notable changes, despite intense shelling. More to the east there was nothing to report. At the end of the day and during the night, German columns were attacked with bombs and machine guns by our air force. 12 German planes were shot down during the evening of May 12."

The second communique reporting Defence Minister Daladier's visit charged that German fliers were bombing non-military objectives. The communique follows:

Visits Defence Posts

"National Defence Minister Daladier went yesterday to the northern frontiers and to Belgium where he visited various command posts. The Allied troops which went into action immediately against the German invaders of Belgium and Holland are displaying magnificent courage throughout. Their chiefs are facing events with remarkable coolness.

"Despite air bombardments which have struck at many cities and localities of no military interest, the frontier populations are animated with equally admirable resolution.

"Throughout France and Belgium our troop and war supply convoys are following one another with perfect regularity in impeccable order, acclaimed on crossing cities and villages by inhabitants hastening their passage.

"During this trip to Belgium, Daladier, accompanied by ranking military notables representing the French and British commands, went to greet King Leopold of the Belgians."

Kept Constantly in Shelters

There also were alarms in western and central France during the morning. Residents of Nancy, where German planes struck Friday and Saturday, were kept in shelters by one alarm after another most of Sunday.

The alarm and heavy anti-aircraft fire roused Paris civilians from their beds this morning.

Voluntary evacuation of women, children and cripples from Paris again was under way as in the first days of the war last September. About one-third of the city's usual population of 3,000,000 already was in the country, and many more were following.

Change Closing Hours

The closing hour for cafes, restaurants and theatres in Paris was changed from midnight to 11 p.m.

The Allies' answer to the mass use of German parachutists has been creation of vigilante units and mop-up squads as a sort of interior militia, it was disclosed.

The parachute troops' principal value appeared to be to create confusion in the interior and attempt seizing of airdromes by surprise, holding them if possible until troop transport planes could land.

While varied dispatches told of parachute troops disguised as peasants, as low country soldiers, and even as clergymen, France announced that any such person caught in civilian clothes or in a French uniform would be summarily shot. All civilians were warned to watch for them.

Joachim von Ribbentrop, Germany's foreign minister, is shown in this radiophoto as he told foreign news men of the German invasion of Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg.

YOUTH CHARGED WITH ROBBERY

Stanley Archer Allegedly Found in Possession of Quantity of Cigarettes and $21.00 in Small Coins Taken From Belle Billard Room

Belleville police apprehended a local youth on charges of robbery, before the actual breakin and robbery were reported, early Sunday. P. C. Taylor was patrolling city streets in the police cruiser when he observed a man run down a laneway off Coleman Street upon his approach. The officer abandoned the police cruiser and gave chase. Later he arrested Stanley Archer of this city.

Later at the police station a quantity of cigarettes, lighters and $21, all in silver coins, were found in Archer's possession, it was stated by the police. Further questioning by Sergeant Arthur Harman and subsequent investigations by P. C. Taylor revealed the fact that the Belle Billiard room and cigar store situated at 356 Front St., had been robbed.

The coin box of a pin machine had been pried open and all of the cash removed, while practically all of the stock of cigarettes in the front store was gone. Large numbers of packets of cigarettes and chocolate bars were found strewn along the path over which P. C. Taylor chased Archer, it is said.

Today in police court Archer was charged with robbing the store and his case was enlarged for one week, Archer being held without bail.

Entrance was made into the store by means of breaking a rear window leading into the cellar. The marauder left through a rear door, according to the nightwatchman at Boyce's garage, who saw a man emerge from a nearby alleyway shortly after 3.00 a.m. Sunday.

City police are convinced that two persons were involved in the matter and investigations are still pending.

POLICE COURT

Charged with entering the premises of the Belle Billiards, 356 Front Street and committing the indictable offence of theft, Stanley Archer of this city, appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., in today's local police court but was not asked to plead, Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., being granted a week's enlargement in the matter pending further police investigation.

Sidney Wynn and William Ryan, two transients, who were arrested by city police on charges of intoxication last week, admitted their guilt today and were given 14 days, to date from the time of their arrest.

T. B. Watkins, Toronto plasterer, tendered a written plea of guilty on a charge of careless driving, after pleading in open court last Friday his innocence. The minimum fine was assessed and paid.

Two residents of Carlow Township, appeared charged with an offence in the home where children under the age of 16 years resided. Both pleaded not guilty and were remanded in custody to appear in county police court at Bancroft on May 28 next. The man and woman were arrested by Provincial Constable S. Palmateer following complaints of neighbours. They were held in custody and the children given into the care of Children's Aid Inspector T. D. Ruston.

A domestic case concluded the proceedings.

Paris, May 14—(CP—Havas) —The greatest battle of all time was joined today in Southern Belgium and along the Franco-Belgian and Franco-Luxembourg borders.

Along the Meuse River for 70 miles from Liege to Namur and from Namur to Sedan, just across the frontier, great masses of Nazi troops have come up behind the fast forward-thrusting motorized columns which cut their way down from Liege during the past 36 hours.

Across Luxembourg and through the Ardennes Forest the German Army has come up to meet the main Allied forces assembling along the line deliberately selected to stop the German offensive.

Today from Liege to Sedan and from Sedan eastward in the

Lightning and radio! Radio sets and listeners may be adequately protected from injury by lightning by providing each antenna with an approved lightning arrester, located either outside or inside the house, but as near the point of entrance of the wires as possible. A water-pipe system makes an excellent ground and is preferable to most others. Probably the next best is burying a large metal plate in moist soil. If the soil is dry the plate should be larger and pipes or rods driven into the ground and connected to the plates should be added. In all cases, however the form of protection should be in accordance with the electrical code used by the local authorities

Where is Ex-Kaiser?

Berlin, May 14 (AP)—No definite information is available here concerning the whereabouts of former Kaiser Wilhelm, who has been in Holland since the end of the first Great War.

Adolf Hitler has made no statement of his attitude toward the Kaiser. The view of the foreign office appears to be that the former monarch must express some wish regarding his future before any pronouncement is made here.

There are reports, however, that members of Hitler's personal bodyguard, the so-called "Leibstandarte," are on their way to Wilhelm's refuge at Doorn.

CANADIAN PRESS GIVES ONLY FACTS

W. Rupert Davies, President, Praises News Gathering Agency

Kingston, Ont., May 14—(CP)—Establishment and development of the Canadian Press as a co-operative news-gathering organization has been the most important step in the progress of Canadian newspapers since the beginning of this century, W. Rupert Davies, Editor of the Kingston Whig-Standard and President of the Canadian Press, told the Ontario-Quebec Circulation Managers' Association last night.

"The biggest obstacle in the development of the Canadian Press was the cost of covering by leased wire the geographic gaps in areas where there was insufficient population to support daily newspapers.

"It was in the last war that the National service that can be performed by newspapers in times of emergency was first thoroughly appreciated, both in Great Britain and Canada."

The Canadian Press was affiliated with The Associated Press, the largest news-gathering agency in the world, and there was not a city of importance in Europe in which there was no A.P. representative. Further, when Canadian troops go to France, there would be two special correspondents with them, representing Canada's great news-gathering organization.

"The Canadian Press, which supplies the Canadian newspapers with their news, is a factual service and not an interpretative service. The Canadian Press does not speculate nor read into news its own interpretation. It gives to the reading puplic the facts. Its great aim is to serve the Canadian people with authentic, reliable news. The Canadian people can rest assured that as the war progresses, The Canadian Press will spare neither time nor expense adequately to represent them on the battlefronts of Europe."

3 Pupils Suspended For Refusal to Salute The Union Jack

Pembroke, Ont., May 14—(CP)—Pembroke Board of Education last night endorsed the action of Principal J. E. Bevens of Centre Ward Public School in suspending three pupils for refusing to salute the flag or sing the National Anthem.

William E. Brose, father of two of the children, and Otto Ashick, father of the other, told the board they were members of a religious sect which forbids worship of idols and obeys laws prescribed by God in the Bible. They contended that the patriotic exercises in schools was "worship of idols."

"It is peculiar in the light of 'fifth column' activities in other countries that this should come up now," M. S. Fellowes, Chairman of the Board, said during consideration of the suspension. The Board decided that when the parents signified their willingness to have the children abide by school regulations they might send them back.

Principal Bevens said the children persistenly refused to sing "God Save the King" or salute the flag so he invoked the Public School Act, which allows him to suspend pupils for "persistent opposition to authority."

Brose said today he stood firm in his religious beliefs as one of Jehovah's Witnesses in Judge Rutherford's International Bible and Tract Society and would not send his children back to school.

Battle of the Tanks Won by the French

(Copyright, 1940, by The Havas News Agency)

With the French Forces in Belgium, May 14 (CP-Havas).—French officers who took part in yesterday's tank battle between St. Trond and Tirlemont described today how the French tanks arrived at express speed in time to halt a German column striking into the heart of Belgium.

One of the German "Panzerdivisionen" which cut the Polish army to pieces was sighted speeding westward along the Belgian national highway which leads on past Tirlemont to Louvain and Brussels. At its head travelled a squadron of motorcycle scouts, followed by motorcycles with sidecars, each mounting a machine-gun.

The motorcyclists were assigned to the role played in the last war by crack cavalry units of Uhlans which scoured the invaded countryside ahead of advancing German infantry.

Next came a section of armored cars, each mounting machine guns, light artillery and carrying two-way wireless. Behind the armored cars were the officers of the Panzerdivisionen in automobiles.

The main body of the column was made up of hundreds of light, medium and heavyweight tanks followed by batteries of light anti-tank artillery and one battery of heavy calibre field guns.

The objective of the German division, the French knew, was to cut communications between hard-pressed Liege and Allied troops coming up to reinforce the Belgian defenders. The region in which the German column was sighted was ideal for a tank battle. It was made up of rolling plains with few natural obstacles, criss-crossed by a network of roads. The little anti-tank guns which are the nemesis of tanks were at a disadvantage, because they need some sort of cover behind which to take shelter from the charging monsters.

Abruptly the motorcyclists at the head of the German column wheeled about and sped back toward the invader's main body. A wireless-equipped car flashed the word from one end of the column to the other. The Germans had sighted the French ahead of them.

LARGE PORTION OF HOLLAND NOW IN NAZI HANDS

Germans Claim Mastery Over Two-Thirds of Country After Four Days of Fighting

300 MILE FRONT

Berlin, May 14—(AP)—Claiming mastery of two-thirds of The Netherlands after four days of lightning warfare, the German Army fought along a 300-mile front between the North Sea and the Moselle River today to meet massed Allied forces in a battle expected to prove one of the most decisive in history.

Nazi military leaders, claiming a steady advance along the entire front, declared the fighting thus far, in Holland and Belgium, fierce as it has been, is a prelude to a struggle which may dwarf the first battle of the Marne.

This conflict is expected to take place somewhere in southern Belgium, where the Allies are reported massing their combined armies for a stand.

The German radio claimed destruction of more than 1,000 enemy airplanes in the first three days of the "real" war.

(French official sources said the Germans had lost at least 400 planes up to noon yesterday. The Allies say their losses are comparatively light.)

HUGE PETROLEUM STORES ARE FIRED AT AMSTERDAM

Official Announcement by Dutch States Measure Taken for Defence

NAZIS FAIL AT DIKE

Netherlanders Put Up Heroic Defence of 16-Mile Dike Repulsing the Enemy

Amsterdam, May 14 — (AP) — Huge petroleum stores in Amsterdam were set afire today by the Dutch as a defence measure, it was officially announced, as the Dutch army defending western Holland fell back to its main water defence line.

The Mayor of Amsterdam broadcast a message to the citizens of the Dutch capital assuring them that there was no reason for anxiety as the fires in the harbor district were started by the military authorities as a precautionary measure.

The principal conflagrations were at petroleum storage places in the western part of the harbor and the Battafsche Petroleum Depo across the harbor from the central part of the city.

Nazi Thrust at Zuider Zee Dam Repulsed

The Dutch high command reported that a German thrust at the huge 16-mile dam across the Zuider Zee, which holds back the North Sea from the Zuider Zee (Ijsselmeer), had been repulsed.

A communique said the attack on the dam was preceded by artillery fire for an hour.

The high command report also said German planes attacked ships of The Netherlands navy yesterday along the north Holland province, which is a peninsula lying between the Zuider Zee and the North Sea.

Five planes which came over the Dutch naval base at Den Helder were shot down yesterday.

Earlier today the high command announced the Dutch army had taken up positions in the strong defence line in Utrecht province, immediately south of the Zuider Zee.

The communique was issued by General Henri Gerard Winkelman, commander-in-chief of Holland's land and sea forces and the highest representative in Holland of the Dutch government, which now is in England.

He announced that German forces in control of northeastern provinces had failed in an attempt to capture the vital 16-mile dike separating the Ijsselmeer (Zuider Zee) from the North Sea.

BRITISH, FRENCH FLAGS BURNED BY ITALIAN STUDENTS

Duce Acknowledges Demonstrators' Greetings but Maintains Silence

London, May 14 (CP)—Informed quarters in London today said that British consuls in Italy are advising British subjects who have no good reasons for remaining to leave.

Such advice is given only upon inquiry, these quarters said, and there is no general recommendation.

Rome, May 14 (AP). — Students burned British and French flags on a simulated coffin before the British Embassy today in a new outburst of anti-Allied demonstrations.

Earlier they had demonstrated at the French Embassy and then marched across town to Porta Pia, a gate in the Roman wall adjacent to the embassy.

Troops stood guard before a huge throng in front of the French Embassy after about 5,000 others had massed under Premier Mussolini's balcony and clamored for a speech.

Several thousand school boys, ranging in age from 12 up, carried the coffin wrapped in the French flag with an umbrella on top, a caricature of France labelled "Poor Chamberlain's Fisherwoman" and another of Britain with the title, "Her Boy Friend".

BITS OF BOMBS SHOW THEM GERMAN

Basel, Switzerland, May 14 (AP) —The Swiss government today ordered its minister at Berlin to protest to Germany over the bombing of a Swiss railroad near Delemont on May 10 and to demand payment of damages. A communique said that examination of shattered bits of some 27 bombs dropped on Swiss territory showed beyond doubt that they were German.

'Winged Words' in Churchill Speech On 'Wage the War' Praised by Press

London, May 14 (CP)—Winston Churchill's first speech in parliament as Prime Minister was hailed by the Morning Press today as auguring well for the Allied cause.

"Our parliamentary institutions have never shown to better advantage than in yesterday's brief and unexpectedly summoned sitting of the House of Commons," The Daily Telegraph said.

"Mr Churchill could not have hoped for a more encouraging reception than that which the House of Commons accorded him with practical unanimity.

"In asking for its support of his government and his policy, his words were few, but they were winged words which unfailingly reached their mark.

The Will and the Spirit

"His policy was defined in the single phrase, 'to wage war,' his aim in another phrase, 'victory at all costs.' The will and spirit of the British people could not have been more succinctly and more forcibly expressed."

The Daily Express said: "Blood, toil, tears and sweat." The Premier hides nothing of the sacrifices which will have to be made before victory is assured.

"The British people will respond to his realism. They recognize that the war of bombs is beginning and that the war of phamphlets has ended. They know the perils which Allied cause."

The Daily Herald said: "What is now essential is that the Labor party in parliament, though using to the full its right of access to the Labor ministers, should preserve the vigilant attitude toward the government which it has preserved in the days of official opposition.

New Government an Entity

"It should consider the new government as an entity, as a body of men who have dedicated themselves to achieving victory as speedily as victory can be achieved.

"It should take the attitude that this country will be as much in need of parliamentary guidance and control as a government wholly composed of Labor's opponents."

The Times said: "Mr. Churchill's brief speech was in every way worthy of a war leader in difficult and anxious times. He will inspire the whole nation to sustain and support him in the struggle.

"Again, just as Clemenceau in the darkest hours of the last war gave France new resolve with the praise, 'Je Fais La Guerre,' so Mr. Churchill yesterday defined the spirit of his government in the single phrase, 'to wage the war.' With that spirit no one can doubt that the government and the nation will achieve victory."

London, May 14—(CP-Cable)—The military position in the south of Holland is "undoubtedly serious" it was announced here today while the German and Allied forces in Belgium were jockeying for position for a big battle east of Brussels.

Liege has not fallen into German hands although it is likely that one of its northern forts, Eben Emael, may have been captured.

Liege may be isolated and cut off but "we believe there is fighting going on in the citadel and that there is no reason to believe that Liege has fallen or need fall in the near future," a military spokesman said.

Frontier is on Maginot Line Says Newspaper

Buenos Aires, May 14 —(CP—Havas)— "Our frontier is on the Maginot Line," the newspaper El Sol headlined today above an article declaring American neutrality cannot permit the Americas to remain indifferent while the fate of civilization is at stake in Europe.

"The brutal invasion of Holland and Belgium," El Sol said, "produced a deep impression in Argentina.

The Argentine has already chosen its side. When moral, legal and spiritual values are at stake, we must adopt a definite attitude. That is why, defending its own sovereignty through American coordination, the Argentine must solemnly proclaim that the frontier of civilization is on the Maginot Line."

Afrikanders Angered Over Holland Invasion

Cape Town, May 14 — (CP)—Growing anger over Germany's invasion of The Netherlands among the Afrikanders, whose forefathers came from Holland, was indicated last night when two of the leading Transvaal members of the Opposition Nationalist group telegraphed to Prime Minister Jan Smuts offering their full support and services to further his war policy.

Indications were that General Smuts, who rode into power last autumn with a clear, but small majority in the South African assembly, would have a much more substantial majority now.

Observers said that the German invasion of the Lowland countries had brought home the dangers of Nazi aggression to the most Nationalistic groups in the country.

Immediately after the invasion the Nationalist Press, including the newspaper Vaderland, organ of the Opposition leader General J. B. M. Hertzog, bitterly denounced Germany.

"This crime will not be forgiven by the civilized world," Vaderland said.

BELGIAN GOV'T CAN EVACUATE IN SHORT TIME

The Government at Brussels is Expected to Quit Capital During the Day

PREPARE TO FLEE

Brussels, May 14 —(CP—Havas) —The Belgian Government prepared today for possible evacuation of this capital at a moment's notice. (The Dutch government arrived at London today from The Hague).

Government archives were packed and sent to places where they could not possibly fall into the invaders' hands.

Long lines of Belgians gathered outside the city's banks following proclamation of a moratorium on all payments limiting withdrawals to 5,000 francs every two weeks.

Despite a reassuring radio broadcast by General Henri Denis, Belgian Defence Minister, the government was expected to quit the capital during the day.

Parachutists Lynched

A number of German parachutist troops dropped over the Brussels area were captured by civilians and lynched.

A train loaded with 650 German prisoners of war was machine gunned by Nazi planes today a few minutes after it passed Tournai, in Hainaut Province. First reports said 20 of the prisoners were killed.

One of the German parachutists dropped to the ground late this morning only a few yards from the offices of the Belgian News Agency in Brussels. He was seized by a crowd and literally torn to pieces when he attempted to open fire.

"I give my word of honor that Brussels is in no way threatened," Defence Minister General Denis told the Belgian people by radio.

SUMMER CAMP LIFE IS DESCRIBED

Life at Kilcoo Summer Camp was interestingly described by Miss Edith Looker at a campfire meeting of the Senior B.Y.P.U. in Victoria Avenue Baptist Church on Monday evening.

The members, dressed in camp togs, sat on blankets and artificial grass around a cunningly arranged artificial camp fire which reflected its warm glow on the circle of faces, the whole imparting a realistic camp atmosphere. Popular camp songs were sung with gusto, led by Miss Looker, who then told of the Kilcoo Camp program. Rest, recreation, Bible study and spiritual atmosphere combined to make the Baptist Summer Camp one of the greatest thrills of her life, stated Miss Looker, who for the past two years has attended the camp.

At the close of Miss Looker's talk, motion pictures in natural color were projected on the screen, revealing in full measure the beauties of Kilcoo Camp, which is situated in the lovely Muskoka District.

TO TAKE CENSUS OF DOMESTIC HELP

The seriousness of the shortage of domestic servants, both trained and untrained, has reached such proportions in Ontario that a census will be taken of applicants and employers by the Ontario Department of Labor, employment officials stated here today.

Belleville is affected by the shortage as is other cities and communities of this part of Ontario. At present there are thirty applications for domestic help on file here with no immediate prospect of them being filled.

With the navigation season slowly opening up, increased activity is being noted at Government Dock. The first cheese of the season was unloaded at the warehouse over the week-end on Monday the boxes were receiving their final checking over before shipment via. the "Glen Allan" to Montreal. Since the buoy carried "Grenville" was in during the latter part of last week, the oil tanker "Peter Campbell" has docked at the Belleville harbor. She came in Sunday afternoon with a cargo of gasoline for the Shell Oil Company.

LOCAL CARPENTERS LEAVE FOR C. BORDEN

Eight city carpenters left today for Camp Borden where they will be engaged for some time in the construction of new buildings for war purposes. Skilled labor, however is still scarce in the district, according to Superintendent W. Ross of the employment office here, through whose registrations the carpenters were secured.

STORAGE BUILDINGS GET COAT OF PAINT

The city barns and storage buildings will be resplendent in the near future in a new coat of paint. City workmen started today to give the buildings their new 1940 apparel covering the corrugated steel sides of the building with bright aluminum paint. The roof will be painted green. The interior steel frame of the barn will also be given a coat of aluminum paint.

MOTORCYCLE POLICE ARE QUITE ACTIVE

No arrests were reported in Belleville during the past 24 hours, although city police were busied investigating several cases that have been under surveilance for some time. There was even a marked decrease in the number of transients seeking shelter at the police station last night when only nine were given sleeping quarters. The city motorcycle patrol continued to check delinquents traversing city streets, however, and in several incidents summonses will be issued to the offenders for minor infractions of the city traffic ordinances.

JERSEY COW GIVES MEN A MERRY CHASE

A Jersey cow caused a mild furore in the vicinity of the Canadian National Railway station today when she broke loose from her moorings in a nearby pasture field and gave spectators and railway employees a merry chase before she was finally captured.

The presence of a shunting engine manoeuvring freight cars along the right of way, added to the excitement, as the frightened animal dashed across the tracks with at least a half dozen men in pursuit.

COUNTY ROAD WORK NOW WELL UNDER WAY

Spring operations for the repair and preparation of the roads of the county system are now well under way, County Superintendent W. L. Langlois told the Ontario Intelligencer today. Stonecrushers and three graders, including the new equipment recently purchased are now working full time.

Crushed stone is being placed on the Tweed-Sulphide road and also that highway connecting Stoco and Bogart. The Crookston-Tweed and Madoc-Foxboro roads are in the process of resurfacing, while parts of the system are being prepared for the application of oil and calcium chloride dustlayer.

Township roadwork is going on apace, and repairs made to those parts of the system affected by winter conditions. It is not known as yet whether construction of new highways in the county will be a part of the 1940 program.

GARAGEMEN FAVOR UNIFORM RATE ON GASOLINE

Revealed at Meeting Several Operators Selling Gas at Lower Rate to Transport Companies Than Paid by Ordinary Motorist

HELPFUL MEETING

The regular monthly dinner meeting of the Garage Operators' Association of Hastings and Prince Edward Counties was held at the Queen's Hotel last evening. Following a sumptuous supper served by the hotel staff the social side of the evening was enjoyed as the garage operators joined in community singing with Mr. Sam Irvine acting as song leader and with Mr. Leo Riggs at the piano.

Mr. Ivan Scott, as Chairman of Program, called on Mr. Bruce Sills who gave several instrumentals on the musical saw and also on the accordian, climaxing his performance with the rendition of that old favourite, "The Beer Barrel Polka."

After extending a hearty welcome to the guests of the evening and also to the garagemen, Mr. Jack Trudeau, as President of the Garage Operators' Association declared the meeting open and varfous reports of different committee chairmen were given.

Mr. Bill Davies as Chairman of the Apprenticeship Committee recalled that the apprenticeship exams for mechanics would be held this year on the 15th of June and advised all mechanics wishing to try their exams to do so now as it was not known when the tests would be held again. Mr. Ivan Scott told his hearers that the garage operators were making an effort to make the meetings educational so that members would have something of benefit to take home with them. He stressed the importance of good attendance among the members and assured that the association was willing to give cooperation to all garage operators in the district.

Reports Received

Mr. Jack Trudeau gave a brief report of the Provincial Directors' meeting held in Toronto on the 28, of April, explaining that among other business a committee had been appointed to work in conjunction with the labor department to assist garages to get licences. There had also been some discussion re the gasoline code among garage operators he said.

Throwing the meeting open for general discussion it was revealed that several garages in this district were depending almost entirely on sales of gasoline to transport companies. These sales were all made at a reduced rate to what the ordinary motorist is forced to pay and the association favours a uniform rate for gasoline to all motorists whether fleet operators or not. However, inasmuch as all operators in this district did not belong to the association, nothing could be accomplished.

Flat Rate Charges Advocated

Flat rate labor charges were also discussed and a number of local operators revealed that they had been using this system for some time and it was found to be entirely satisfactory. It is the aim of the association to have a uniform price for doing a certain job on a certain make of car.

By far the greatest interest was evinced when the question of bringing the "Safety Lane" automobile testing equipment to Belleville some time during the summer. With this testing equipment it is possible to give brakes, lights, steering, axles, etc., a thorougn test and the only cost to the association would be the expenses of the supervisor who travels with the equipment. The "Safety Lane" should be operated in co-operation with the Police Department it was pointed out, and it was further revealed that in many cases when the police sent cars to garages to have their brakes and lights looked after the operators in many cases effected only temporary repairs. The police are not interested in the cost of putting a car over such a test, but when the car was found deficient and sent to the garage for repairs it was up to the garageman to keep the car in the garage until such repairs were effected.

Interested in Safety

The police are interested in safety but must have the co-operation of the garage operators. It was their duty to send the motorists out properly equipped it was pointed out. It was decided to appoint a representative committee to contact police departments in view of getting their co-operation and to arrange the details for bringing the "Safety Lane" equipment to Belleville. Following the testing of local cars it was suggested that the statistics of findings be forwarded to the Department of Highways so as to hasten the compulsion of motorists putting their cars over such testing equipment periodically.

Mr. John Lewis introduced Mr. Walter Walker as the guest speaker of the evening. Mr. Walker gave a very interesting and informative lecture on the fundamentals of carburation, stressing strongly the value of a complete carburettor checkup. With the use of lantern slides to show the important parts of the carburettor, Mr. Walker coincided his remarks to give his listeners a thorough incite into the fundamentals of carburettor servicing. Following the lecture the appreciation of the association to Mr. Walker was expressed.

R. E. Houston's Home Entered by Burglar

Becoming more daring in his exploits, Belleville's phantom burglar not only entered the home of R. E. Houston, 252 Ann St., late last night, but audaciously entered the premises a few moments after Mrs. Houston had retired for the evening. During past episodes of entering local private homes on the east hill, this daring marauder has confined his efforts to entering homes, ransacking the premises and leaving without stealing anything of material value, while the residents were absent.

Last night, however, the phantom burglar, who has mystified the police with his daring break-ins of late changed his tactics to turn second-storey man and climb atop a porch outside Mr. Houston's home to gain entrance by sliding a kitchen window aside and entering through the open window. Mrs. Houston heard a disturbance downstairs and investigated. As she descended the stairs Mrs. Houston called—"Who's there?" giving the marauder warning and he disappeared without even so much as being seen. To date Belleville's latest edition to the crime world, has broke and entered six homes in the east end of the city, stealing only small sums of silver coins, and has continued to keep his activities clouded in mystery.

As soon as Mrs. Houston realized a burglar was in her home she immediately notified the police. Two police cars, one bearing Sergeant Harman and P. C. Arnott and the other P. C. Evans and a police reporter hastened to the vicinity of the break-in and for over two hours scoured the streets and byways of the east hill, but without avail. Again the burglar had completely disappeared under the cover of darkness.

Mrs. Houston informed police the burglar was not in the home sufficiently long enough to commit robbery, there being some silver coins left untouched on the kitchen table. Today Chief Kidd admitted he was puzzled in the matter. "What is so mystifying is the fact the man never steals anything of great value, but apparently is merely entering the houses for the excitement gained," was Chief Kidd's analysis.

Controllable Factor In Seeing is Light Says Ross Stiver

"You cannot alter the seeing task, you can improve the vision with glasses, but the only controllable factor in seeing is light," Ross R. Stiver, of the local Public Utilities assured the members of the Y's Men's Club as guest speaker last evening when speaking on the subject of "The Science of Seeing."

"The evolution of we humans, up until about 100 years ago, provided us with eyes to see with ease at a minimum of 20 feet, but suddenly we were called upon to do close work at 15 to 20 inches thus a greater strain on the eyes. Eye causing a greater strain on the eyes. Eye glasses became prevalent and are universal in the matter of relief to eye strain today.

"Today a day's work of eye strain has been increased to 16 hours, which includes the evening reading of the paper, magazine or book after an eight-hour day at the lathe or whatever vocation you may be employed. With this additional eye strain it is important, that the proper lighting be provided while using the eyes in order to assure the minimum amount of strain. Light is the only controllable factor towards relief of this strain and light can be tailor-cut to do any job with the least discomfort and improve the efficiency of the operator and lower the cost of production," assured Mr. Stiver as he gave statistics as to the proper lighting needs in various size rooms to lessen the eye strain.

"The smallest electric lamp made today is the size of a grain of wheat and used in connection with medical science, while the largest lamp is about three feet high, 20 inches in diameter and consumes 50,000 watts per hour. This would provide current for 40 average homes or operate a large broadcasting station," added Mr. Stiver, who concluded his educational talk by answering numerous questions supplied by the club members. The speaker was introduced by Y'sman Lorne McDougall and tendered the thanks of the club by President Harold Vaughan, who later announced the annual Y's Men's summer dance would be held this year on June 5th.

Fine Speckled Trout Caught Weighing Two and Half Lbs.

There are still speckled trout to be had in the lakes of the northern part of this district. Irrefutable evidence of this fact was seen today when Mr. Harry Bateman, 9 Albion Street brought a handsome specimen of the red-speckled variety to the editorial rooms of the Ontario Intelligencer.

Nineteen inches in length, weighing two and one-half pounds, the speckled beauty was outstanding in its fine coloring, a distinct reddish shade blending with red and silver speckles.

The fish, one of the largest caught thus far, was one of a catch of seventeen, hauled in by Mr. Bateman, Harry Leitch, Tamworth, and two friends. Vieing with it, was another of the silver speckled variety that tipped the scales at two pounds seven ounces. The remainder of the catch weighed in the vicinity of one pound each, with none being less than ten inches in length.

The fine haul was made in Mackie Lake near Denbigh, Mr. Bateman said, adding that his prize catch, which he intends to have mounted, gave him a strenuous tussle before being hauled into the net.

CONDITION OF INJURED TRIO SAID IMPROVED

The condition of Joseph Elliott, Frankford, Sidney Cottrell, and George Ferguson, victims of a Sunday motor accident on the Belleville-Trenton highway, was reported by hospital authorities today to be good.

The trio were occupants of a car which went out of control west of the city and crashed into a tree, injuring seven passengers.

Inpending Great Battle May Influence Future Course Of War, Many Persons Believe

(By Guy Rhodes Canadian Press Staff Writer).

British, French, Belgian and Dutch troops opposed Germans along a wide Lowlands front today, striving valiantly and apparently with considerable success to hold back Hiter's blitzkrieg hordes until the Allies can muster greater strength in the two little countries.

The Dutch and Belgians were reported isolating and dealing with German parachute troops, dropped at strategic points throughout their countries, while the Dutch mercilessly rounded up "fifth column" forces planted in The Netherlands months ago.

Each hour the defenders can hold the Germans back means a gain for the Allies, for the Nazis had the initial advantage that goes to the aggressor in a lightning surprise move. Apparently the Germans realized this, as French authorities reported they had doubled the strength of their offensive in an unsuccessful attempt to establish themselves quickly.

On the Eve of a Great Battle

Many believed the various battles now in progress are a prelude to one of history's biggest fights, an engagement that may influence the whole future course of the war, perhaps giving an indication at its end who the victor would be.

This was not taken to mean that the war would end with the end of the first great battle, but that the contestants were throwing so much into it that its outcome would give a clue to their relative strengths.

From information available so far it was not clear just how useful the Nazis were finding their parachute troops.

Coping With Nazi Parachutists

Their use in densely populated countries, obviously, would be more hazardous than in sparsely settled lands such as Norway. Early reports indicate police and civilians are coping with them with considerable success.

Nevertheless the seriousness of their employment was seen in War Minister Anthony Eden's announcement in the House of Commons that he hoped to make an early statement on "immediate formation of a voluntary corps composed of older men armed with rifles and Bren guns for instant action in any locality" in Britain in view of "the immediate danger of enemy parachutists landing in this country." So far the Germans seem to have made no attempt at parachute landing in Britain.

Re-Evacuation May Be Necessary

As a matter of fact they have been expected in some country districts ever since the war started. Squires and farmers in some localities have cleaned their old shotguns and rifles and dug ammunition from cupboard shelves, ready to give any aerial invaders the hottest possible reception.

One thing that must irk British officials is the discovery that it may be necessary to re-evacuate thousands of children and mothers who got bored with country life last fall returned to cities against the advice of authorities. These people were told at the time that there was no reason to believe that Britain would not experience devastating air raids just because none had occurred up to then.

Prime Minister Churchill told the House the nation had before it "an ordeal of the most grievous kind... many, many months of struggling and suffering."

He offered no encouragement to those who hope for a speedy victory, holding to an attitude to which the British government has adhered since the beginning of the struggle.

Miss Marjorie Frost of Vancouver, daughter of Mr. J. G. Frost, has returned home after an absence of seventeen years. She will spend several months in Tweed.

Special services in honour of Motherhood were held in Tweed United Church on Sunday morning and evening. Rev. H. L. Morrison referred in his address to Lord Haldane, Secretary of State for War in the British Cabinet in 1914, who in spite of the many duties devolving upon him in the busy life which he led, for fifty years found time to write daily to his mother; and to Lord Northcliffe, famous newspaper publisher, who, regardless of where he might be, either telephoned, telegraphed or wrote to his mother every day. The choir assisted by Mrs. Dorothy Goldie of Peterboro, sang "Love Divine". In addition to the solo obligato in the anthem, Mrs. Goldie also sang most feelingly, "Little Mother of Mine". At the evening service a choir composed of mothers of the congregation led in the singing, and also contributed two numbers.

WORKING TO MAKE TELEPHONE SERVICE Better...

WHEN this Company began 60 years ago, only part of the money needed to develop the service could be raised in Canada. The American Bell Telephone Company agreed to provide the remainder—about one-third of the capital required.

The relationship thus begun with the Bell System across the line has continued ever since. Today the American Telephone and Telegraph Company owns about 23 per cent of this Company's stock.

The connection has been invaluable both to this Company and to telephone users in Canada. The great research department of the Bell System — the Bell Telephone Laboratories — has evolved a continuous series of improvements in every department of telephone service. These have been available for our use in Canada, so that telephone service in the Dominion has kept abreast of the latest developments. Costs to the user are the lowest in the world for comparable service.

Canadians use the telephone more frequently than the people of any other land — a fact that is directly related to the ready access we have always had to improvements in equipment and operating methods, and to the economies made possible by scientific research!

FIGHT ALONGSIDE GREAT DEMOCRACIES AGAINST WORLD FOE

One of the high notes which has been struck in the war has been the recognition by The Netherlands and Belgium that their only hope lay in instantaneous cooperation with the democracies. No siren voice from Germany, no Goebbels song could make them see Germany as justified. They understood Germany and Hitler, the enemies of civilization.

The world of justice can never forget the bravery of the Dutch and the Belgians as they have lined up with the democracies against the mad thrust of the Germans who know no law. The people of the Low Countries will be remembered in history along with those of Norway as heroic peoples daring to defy the Nazi forces. They trusted not in German promises or "protection," they knew the forces from east of the Rhine would foul every land which they touched. The Dutch, the Belgian and the Norse peoples fight for the civilization they are confident will triumph at the war's end. They took the plunge into war for the sake of justice. They realized that justice in order to triumph must mean strength in numbers as well as mean strength of principle.

Belgium in 1914-18 under King Albert won an important name. Again under King Leopold she will add glories to her reputation, the glories of service and defence of all that is right. So it is with the Dutch and the Norwegians. Likewise with the Poles, and the Czecho-Slovaks. And so it will be with the unfortunate Danes, doomed by the swift thrust of the Huns to adject slavery until the free nations strike the chains from off the lands where the despised foot of the German now crushes freedom.

To run down these smaller states is somewhat similar to the act of a gangster dashing to his goal or fleeing justice in driving a death car over women and children in his path and shooting wildly in crowds of people.

Never in history was a powerful nation so great a coward and so despised as Germany is today. Never did the free nations shine with greater glory than do the smaller democracies of Europe as they rally to their democratic friends, Britain and France, in a great company battling for preservation of freedom.

BRITAIN STANDS UNITED

Britain was never divided on the essential fact that there is but one object—to wage this war to victory over Hitlerism and Naziism.

Her discussions of last week were not a sign of division. The unanimity with which all parties are associated and the presence of the former Prime Minister, Mr. Chamberlain, in the war cabinet of Mr. Churchill prove that. If further proof were needed it was the instant action of Britain in going to the aid of Belgium and Holland on their appeal for support against the invader Germans.

To every Briton, whether of low or high estate, there is but one issue, to fight the war to that finish which is victory. In the words of Mr. Churchill, the object is to fight on to victory in spite of all terrors. Victory with a just peace as British Labor says, is the true and one object of the Allies.

Mr. Churchill has received the unanimous support of Commons and Lords in the great task he has taken upon himself.

The New Prime Minister spoke to the House of Commons of "an ordeal of the most grievous kind" and "of many months of struggling and suffering." He made it clear that there was no hope of early peace and speedy victory and on this point he held to the view that the British Government has had from the beginning. His presentation of the situation was a challenge to the highest effort ever placed before the British people to free the world from the enemy which threatens civilization.

NAZIS TYPICAL GANGSTERS

The war has now reached the stage which permits a clear understanding of the despicable character of the plotting and machinations of the Germans. On the first day when Hitler's troops defied international law under a flimsy excuse and invaded Holland, the Germans were, it is said, planning the kidnapping of the Queen of Holland and the Government of the country which was foiled. So stated the Amsterdam correspondent of the C B S whose story was published in Friday's newspapers across the world.

The Royal Family of Denmark, now under German protective' domination, are no doubt virtual hostages.

The story of the German aviators gunning for King Haakon of Norway when he and his son escaped the invaders is another sidelight of the grim character of the Nazi mentality. But the Norse King did not fall before the Hun bullets nor did the Huns capture him.

These are samples of gangsterism when it is practised by a nation.

No stone will be left unturned by Hitler and that company of Nazis including Himmler, the Gestapo chief, to win by trickery and violence. No one would think of chivalry when mentioning the names of the Nazi group members.

What exemplars of human conduct these men are! Yet these are the men Pan-Germanism would put into the capitals of the world to rule mankind. No barbarian invaders of history carried more of the spirit of evil than the Nazi government. Attila and his Huns are clouded by the modern examples of Hitler and his Nazis.

Yet with all this brutality, the Nazis are not subtle. They are tricky, they resort to violence of the worst kind, but they are not brilliant. Hitler breaks his promises with agility, probably believing in them himself more than anyone else ever did. Nazis are everything that a decent and honorable nation is not. They are the barbarians in government. They carefully planned war for conquest.

The Fateful Hour

The first feeling of the people of this heartsick country must be sheer inability to believe that the thing long feared has actually happened, even though the evidence is spread before our eyes. Hitler has unleashed his total war. He has struck on the main front. He has staked everything on a gigantic gamble which, if he wins, will mean the end of freedom and democracy and culture throughout all Europe in our time.

If ever a war was made deliberately and brutally, without cause and without justification, it is this war which Germany has made on Belgium and the Netherlands. The claim of the Reich Government that these small nations had failed to observe a strict neutrality is belied by the facts in the record. It is not for that reason that bombs are falling now on a gentle countryside, and spreading death and destruction through cities as fair as any in all Europe. It is because Hitler chose to strike where he thought the Western Front was weakest; because, in his mad desire to get his hands on the throats of France and Britain, he had not the slightest scruple about violating the pledges he had given to the Lowland countries; because these countries in themselves are integral parts of the western world—our world, the democratic world, the world in which men live under systems of government deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed—and because Hitler means to destroy that world if he can do it.

The American people will know how to evaluate the broken German promises, the brazen disregard of treaty obligations, the obscene falsity of Nazi self-justification, the ruthlessness of Nazi war. They will find in the experience of Belgium and the Netherlands a moral for ourselves; a moral to put our house in order, to strengthen our defenses, to prepare ourselves against the consequences of German success which might spread war across the Atlantic or Pacific to our own hemisphere.

This is the fateful hour. We in America who live behind the defenses of the Western European nations which are the outposts of our own kind of civilization must watch with deep anxiety to see whether the line will hold. Hitler told his armies yesterday that this is victory or death for Germany. It is also victory or death for decent standards of international conduct and the democratic way of life.—N.Y. Times.

Canada's Cheese

Despite all past experience, Canadian dairymen still refuse to learn one of the most obvious lessons. Once again the industry finds itself with a butter surplus on its hands that is particularly embarrassing in wartime.

There is one cause for satisfaction. The Natural Dairy Council is being more and more thoroughly sold on the idea of cutting down on butter production, and is urging strongly that the farmers turn more of their milk into cheese. It is to be hoped that the campaign will bear good fruit.

Canada, of course, makes good butter, but not good enough to justify the emphasis placed on it in this country. In the British market, the New Zealand product holds a leadership that cannot be challenged; particularly as the price is aided by Government subsidization.

It is in cheese production that Canada shines. Old Country buyers rank Canada's cheese ahead of all the rest of the world, and if once our dairymen will allow themselves to be convinced that this is the proper destination for the bulk of their surplus milk, much will have been done to bring about the proper balance in our dairy industry.—Windsor Star.

Monkeys of Monkeys

In this corner there were two standard American babies. In that corner there were two full-grown monkeys, in the prime of their intellectual development. In the middle was Dr. Ben Weinstein of the University of Wisconsin, waiting to see which team could outthink the other. And today Dr. Weinstein was happy to report that the humans outstripped the monkeys all the way.

The children were mere infants, it was explained, only 34 and 37 months old. But the monkeys were four years old, which is the best they ever get.

Yet the children, asked to select patterns that would correspond to other patterns, and thus demonstrate that they understood the concept of "sameness" made the monkeys look like monkeys. Dr. Weinstein was so impressed that he concluded children must know more than they say.—Chicago News.

Hitler at School

The following is from the pen of a man who was at school with Adolf Hitler at Linz in Upper Austria. What he says adds new and interesting details to the recognized biographies of Hitler.

In the month of July 1904 two boys sat in the back row—known as the dunce's row—of the third-form class-room at the Realschule in Linz. The two boys were the teacher's bugbears. One was named Otto Galluschek, the other Adolf Hitler.

The school year was ending in a spell of extreme heat. The holidays were at hand and discipline was already greatly relaxed. Dr. Leopold Poetsch, professor of History and German grammar was talking about the Samnite wars, pausing every now and then to mop his brow with a large bandanna handkerchief. To hold the interest of his noisy class taxed the professor severely.

"Hitler and Galluschek," he said, addressing the noisiest of the boys at the back, "you really have no cause to be so pleased with yourselves. You, Hitler, have again failed in German and it is doubtful if you will be allowed to take the exam again. If you follow my advice, you'll give it up and leave school.."

Adolf Hitler leapt to his feet and banging his fists on the desk, shouted: "You've got a down on me! I'm as good as Abels, anyway."

Had Special Victim

Abels, one of the two Jews in the class, and a pale-faced timid boy with reddish hair, suffered under three disadvantages. To begin with, he came first in the alphabetical list of names and had therefore to be ready at any moment to answer the teacher's questions. Secondly, he was a well-behaved, diligent, even over-industrious boy, anxious to atone by extra knowledge for his unfortunate Semitic name. Thirdly, he had Adolf Hitler for his classmate. Hitler was the eldest boy in the class (he had spent two years both in the second and third forms) and, with his friend Galluschek, used to bully and intimidate any boys who were physically weaker than himself. Little Abeles was Hitler's special victim.

I have a very clear recollection of what happened on this hot July day of 1904 at the Realschule in Linz. Although this happened long ago and memory is apt to revise early impressions when they concern a world famous figure, yet the events of that day are clearly fixed in my mind. No hatred of Hitler the man has been allowed to colour this picture of Hitler the boy as engraved on my memory. He was a sullen, suspicious, underhand character, boorish in his manner and untidy in his appearance, strangely prone to tears when blamed by his teachers.

"A Miserable Jew"

"Read some good book to improve your German style," Professor Poetsch added, on the occasion to which we refer. To this Hitler retorted: "Books indeed! Literature is only what one Jew has copied from another!"

Everyone in the class knew that Hitler was here quoting words spoken in public by a well-known Viennese anti-semite of the day. There was loud laughter at this impudent sally as well as at the conviction with which Hitler uttered it.

"Sit down," said the Professor. But Hitler was disposed to prolong the scene. Besides, he evidently meant to leave school, having no hope of promotion to the fourth form. So he remained standing and called out: "It's funny that Abeles should know more German than I do!"

"Be quiet," said Professor Poetsch, "and sit down."

"I shan't," answered Hitler, "You're a miserable Jew." (Juden Knecht)

This was another phrase current among Viennese anti-semite demonstrators and had doubtless been read by Hitler in the newspapers. The yells of delight at this altercation between pupil and teacher could have been heard all over the school and a moment later the door opened and in walked the headmaster.

Dr. Commenda had come to ascertain the cause of so much noise, and, taking in the situation at once he said:

"Ah! Hitler and Galluschek, of course."

Professor Poetsch explained what had passed, adding: "And he called me a 'Judenknecht!'"

At this Hitler, with tears of rage in his eyes, shook his fist as he shouted: "It's not true! That's a lie! I never used the word "Judenknecht'."

"What!" said Dr. Commenda. "Are you accusing Professor Poetsch of telling lies. He will hardly have invented such a thing."

A Lie, A Lie, A Lie

"It's a lie, a lie, a lie," the boy protested, repeating the words three times. I swear I did not say it." He was pale and trembling, his eyes filled with tears.

The headmaster looked first at one, then at the other, then at the whole class. He was uncertain what to think and said Professor Poetsch: "Tell me, Dr. Poetsche. Did you perhaps mishear him? The boy swears he did not use that word."

"Impossible that I misheard," answered the Professor. "Hitler used the word 'Judenknecht'."

The headmaster walked up to Hitler and, fixing his eyes upon him said: "Look me straight in the face and tell the truth."

Hitler looked at the headmaster and said: "It is a foul lie to say I used that word!"

"You worthless scamp," cried the Professor, unable to control himself. "You're no better than a ruffianly anarchist!"

Dr. Commenda, begged Dr. Poetsch to calm himself. He then sternly ordered the excited class to be quiet, and, when silence was restored, proceeded to conduct an enquiry.

"Galluschek," he said. "you're sitting next to Hitler, you must have heard what he said."

"I heard nothing," Galluschek answered rudely. "Hitler said nothing."

An electric current passed through the whole room.

Professor Poetsch stood with a look of horror on his face. He wiped his glasses with shaking hands, then passed his handkerchief over his brow.

"This is getting more and more mysterious," said the head-master. Then he turned to another boy. "Wondrak, what did you hear?"

"I . . . I . . really don't know . ." he stammered, looking from Dr. Commenda to Hitler, from Hitler to Professor Poetsch.

"Jakubek," said the headmaster to another pupil: "You tell us."

Professor Poetsch looked at Jakubek almost in fear. Before Jakubek could answer however, Hitler shouted: "It's a lie, a foul lie." Jakubek then murmured: "There was such a noise, I really heard nothing."

"A Conspiracy"

Dr. Poetsch again lost control. "This is a conspiracy. You must have heard, Jakubek, Hitler spoke perfectly distinctly."

To prevent this enquiry from breaking down altogether, the headmaster was obliged to appeal to the unhappy professor. "I must ask you Dr. Poetsch, not to influence the boys. I am now addressing the whole class: Who heard the insulting term?"

No one spoke! I, too, kept silent, though I can still hear after 36 years, the exact tone in which Hitler hurled his term of abuse at the teacher.

As for little Abeles, he hid his head in a book, terrified.

Hitler Triumphant

Hitler was triumphant. Dr. Commenda who was too able a schoolmaster not to see where the truth lay, sought for some means of escaping without loss of prestige to his subordinate.

And when, listening to the wireless the other day, I heard someone call Hitler the biggest liar in history, I recalled every detail of that July day in 1904.

When Hitler became Chancellor, Professor Poetsch was invited to Berchtesgaden, but the old man failed to recognize the former pupil. Was he afraid perhaps to identify the imperious Hitler with the impudent lout of 1904?

Hitler's school friend, Otto Galluschek, became an insurance agent, and died in 1918 by his own hand, he was found hanging from a door after being sentenced for frauds practised on women and bigamy.

Hitler is fond of Linz, his childhood's home. In "Mein Kampf" he describes the "overwhelming impression" made on him by a performance of "Siegfried" at the local theatre.

The Siegfried of Linz was for Hitler "a radiant Teutonic figure" which filled his imagination ever after. The singer was a certain Wilenski and he had a very firm voice. What an irony of fate when Hitler learned many years later that this "radiant Teutonic figure" was in fact a Polish Jew and former synagogue chorister!—United Correspondents, London.

Removing an Object from the Eye

When a mechanic gets a speck of steel in his eye, the workman who does the first aid for the factory calls the physician or sends the patient to the physician's office. Only a physician, or a nurse trained in this work, should attempt to remove a piece of steel imbedded in the eyeball. The physician, by the use of a magnet, may be able to remove the speck of steel without difficulty but if not he puts a couple of drops of well diluted cocaine into the eye, removes the speck with a special instrument, and then puts a few drops of castor oil into the eye to soothe it.

However, the commonest object that gets into the eye is a tiny cinder or a speck of dust.

As soon as the cinder or speck of dust gets into the eye, the eye begins to water which is Nature's way of washing the object down to lower part of eye or into the corner. Just allowing yourself to "cry" for a minute will often bring the object to a point where it can be readily seen and removed by the corner of a clean handkerchief or a piece of tightly rolled gauze.

If object is in lower part of eye on eyeball or lower lid it can be readily seen and removed if the patient is told to look upward as you pull the lower lid downward.

By having patient look downward as you lift upper lid any object on the eyeball can be seen if the light is good. If no object can be seen and patient tells you that he feels as if something is scraching the upper part of his eyeball, the object is on the inner side of the upper lid.

The upper lid has hard tissue—cartilage—on its edge. This makes it a little difficult to turn the lid to expose the object. However, if you stand behind the patient, as he looks downward, and hold the point of a pencil on the upper part of the lid, the lid can be turned backward. If the object is on the inner side of the lid, it can be removed with the pointed piece of gauze.

The thought then is that when an object gets into the eye, the ears should be allowed to flow for about a minute, which may be all that is necessary to get rid of it. If this does not remove it to the inner side of lower lid, then search and removal must be made as suggested above.'

Don't use anything harder than the soft guaze.

On a Paris Railway Station

PARIS, May 11.

The soldier stands face to face with his girl, his hands on her waist, under her jacket. The officer holds his girl by her arms. The soldier kisses his girl unashamedly. The officer kisses his girl with his eyes. None of the four speaks at all.

x x x

The French are talkative people. On the crowded platform hardly a word is heard. What is there to say now that has not been said before? What is apprehended that was not long since apprehended? What has come that was not awaited?

"Sincerely trusts"...... "Conscience of mankind"........ "Respects neutrality...... "Rights of non-belligerents." .. ....

Hitler's troops without warning crossed the frontiers of Luxemburg, Holland and Belgium Friday, May 10, 1940, at dawn. They dropped into Holland in Dutch uniforms, from parachutes. Men from Mars.

"We shall breed a new race out of an elite, trained to hardness, cruelty, violence; supermen, leading masses. On them we shall found a new Reich that will last for a thousand years.

"The supermen will be ingenious, treacherous, masterful. The masses will be uniform, with arms that rise and fall rhythmically, voices that cry hoarsely, rhythmically, 'Seig Heil!"

"First the men from Mars, and then the masses. Breed them, mothers! Prizes for the most fertile! Equality for the illegitimate! Born in love or lust or for a bonus, all are equal, all alike, one folk, one Reich, one Fuehrer."

x x x

The soldiers on the Paris railway station are uniformed, but they are not uniform. Men of yesterday, why has each of you a different face? You, so diverse, so individual; you, with the ascetic bones and the cynical eyes; you, little soldier with the gleeful mouth of a peasant epicurean; you, lovers of books and you, lover of your girl, and you with the nervous lips—you have got to meet the man of tomorrow, No. 1135, type B.

The soldier holds his little girl on his shoulder; she has big, wet black eyes, like the eyes in a drawing by Laurencin. He strokes her hair—the hair of his individual little girl, a French child, precious, rare.

"The French birth rate is stable, the small family is the rule. The family is the basis of society. One has the number of children that one can support and educate."

"This one is clever and shall go to the lycee."

x x x

"Demographically speaking, the French are a dying race. There are 42,000,000 French and 80,000,000 Germans. The Third Reich needs room for its growing population."

"Make room, little father, make room!" Nobody smiles, nobody sings. "What! No Tipperary? No Madelon?"

A woman in black holds her son in her arms. Tears flow down her face. His lip trembles slightly. The women of Sparta exposed their weakling children to the elements. They sent them into battle with the cry, "Return with your sword or on it!"

But Homer, whose name is given to the age of heroes, was blind.

"Man for man the French army is the best in the world."

The boy is nine years old. He stands apart, while his father and mother say something to each other, swift and low. He wears his Sunday suit, He cries bitterly but without noise.

"Nazi youth do not weep."

x x x

The whistle blows. The officer holds his girl's cheek to his. The soldier kisses his girl on the mouth. Just once more!

Nobody watches any one else. No one pretends. No one is pretending anything.

"Kill a Boche for me, darling." Didn't they say that in the last war?

No one says a word about Boche or killing. Not a word. Not a flag. Not a salute...... not an au revoir. They pull apart, and the men crowd into the cars. They wear good woolen uniforms and good thick boots.

They look through the open windows— a thousand faces, a thousand different faces, not one like another, not one common expression, not one replaceable face. Now, at last, they smile, kindly, comfortingly, understandingly. The women and the girls stand together, but each alone, each surrounded by a little space of loneliness and separateness, each alone in her tears.

The train begins to move. The men wave. The women wave and weeping, smile.

No one calls "Vive la France!"

There goes France.

Sassafras Tea

Away west in Indiana an old-timer is leading a campaign for revival of the habit of drinking sassafras tea. He and his associate missionaries are making speeches about it, distributing leaflets and giving away little bundles of the faggots.

There was more than faith in grandma's belief in sassafras; she knew it was good for the whole family and for almost anything that ailed them. If they were not ill, it kept them well. Served hot and sweetened with honey or sorghum, it conveyed such an aroma to the nostrils that it made one eager for the first gulp.

In the natural state sassafras leaves are gummy and bitter, and grandpa preferred them to chewing tobacco. But sassafras had many uses. It was employed as a yellow dye, for thickening soup, for making beer and even for making perfume It seemed odd that a product with such manifold properties should have fallen into disuse.—Stratford Beacon Herald.

That Man, Hitler

According to German newspapers, Herr Hitler has selected the little town of Munster, in Westphalia, as the spot where he will dictate terms to Great Britain and France. The Fuehrer should be reminded of the milkmaid who counted her chickens before they were hatched, and also that it was Westphalia in which the treaty was signed that ended the Thirty Years' War, in 1648. Incidentally, France gained Alsace by that agreement. Broody Adolf's dreams of conquest are making him lose his sense of proportion. if he has that sense.—Montreal Gazette.

News of Trafalgar

Complaints have been made recently of delay in issuing news of events at sea (and everyone sympathizes with the anxiety of those whose relatives are involved), but at least the news when given officially is authentic and the period of waiting is much shorter than in the past.

In the case of the Battle of Trafalgar, for instance, fought on October 21, 1805, it was not until November 6 that Mrs. Fitzherbert could write to a friend with the news that "the Prince has this moment received from the Admiralty an account of the death of poor Lord Nelson....I think you may wish to know the news, which upon any other occasion might be called a glorious victory." — Manchester Guardian.

'Banks, War-Time Economy' Subject of Address at Rotary

S. G. Hazell, Manager of Bank of Montreal Branch, Toronto, is Principal Speaker

BANKS PRAISED

Canada is just as much fighting for its existence as a free democratic state as if it were placed geographically within the sound of German gunfire, declared Mr. S. G. Hazell, manager of the Yonge and St. Clair branch of the Bank of Montreal, in addressing the noonday meeting of Belleville Rotary Club yesterday. To win the war there would be greater calls upon the financial resources of the people, and the speaker hoped that the burden would be spread equally and that all would willingly accept the sacrifice.

Mr. Hazell's address was entitled "Banks and War-Time Economy." There was, he said, only a partial realization of the significance of the struggle in which the Empire and its Allies are engaged. It is a fight between all our people and the peoples of the enemy countries. The outcome would depend largely on the economic strategy employed.

Since Confederation the chartered banks of Canada had been the main support of the Dominion's financial structure. In times of peace the banks had been largely responsible for the growth of business and systematic savings of the people. They had fostered domestic and international trade, had extended credit where it could be safely employed and protected the nation's monetary wealth in times of stress.

Three Billions on Deposit.

People thought the banks too conservative, but the steady growth of deposits was indicative of sound business practice. At the beginning of the last Great War deposits had totalled about a billion dollars. Today, said Mr. Hazell, the total was close to three billions. Through all crises the banking system of Canada had remained unshaken, providing assurance and security.

"The financing of this war will call for unprecedented expenditures," said Mr. Hazell, "the funds for which can be obtained only in three ways, viz: taxation, borrowing the real savings of the people, and inflation."

He deplored any possibility of the third measure, pointing to effects on the financial structure of France when inflation was permitted.

The chartered banks already were fitting into the nation's war-time economy, said Mr. Hazell. The banks are rendering valuable assistance in providing funds to keep the wheels of war-time industry revolving and keeping a watchful eye to steer producers clear of financially unsound production policies.

We are fortunate, the speaker declared in having a Central Banking Authority which, with the assistance of the chartered banks, could control natural resources to better effect than in the last war.

Exchange Rate Stabilized

One instance of the effect of the Central Banking Authority was cited by Mr. Hazell, that of the Foreign Exchange Control. Balances of foreign currencies held in Canada had been retained and could be used for the payment of essential foreign commitments. In this way the exchange rate had been stabilized.

In conclusion Mr. Hazell declared:

"In recent years our democratic system has been attacked from without and within, not always altogether without cause. The enemy boasts openly that it has run its course, and there are philosophers who have been saying for the past twenty-five years that the whole of western civilization is declining.

"In the last war the Allied armies stood their ground on the field of battle and again the youth of the Empire and of our French Allies are prepared to defend our liberties with their lives.

"By themselves they will not win the war—victory will not be won on the field alone; you and I and our neighbours who are too old to wear a uniform again must serve at home without one.

"We believe in the justice of democratic government, but that is not enough.

"It will be necessary for us to back our faith with all the economic resources we can muster—if we do that, and steadfastly resolve to preserve the ideals of true democracy, we shall still prevail."

The speaker was introduced by Mr. Tom Dredge, local manager of the Bank of Montreal, and the thanks of Rotary was voiced by Past President McLean Haig.

Jack Deacon rendered a much-appreciated vocal number.

DECISION UP TO UNION MEMBERS

General Motors and Employees Reach Proposal to be Submitted

Oshawa, Ont., May 14—(CP)—Louis Fine, chief conciliation officer of the Ontario Labor Department, announced Monday that final settlement of a dispute involving the General Motors of Canada Corporation and approximately 3,500 company workers, as represented by the United Automobile Workers of America, will be left to the union membership.

Following a concluding conference between company and union representatives here last night, Mr. Fine said in a statement that "a proposal has been worked out respecting amendments to the existing agreement which will be submitted to the Oshawa membership for ratification on Wednesday or Thursday of this week."

Mr. Fine said that the Union Bargaining Committee and company officials reached "complete agreement" but that the ultimate result will be decided by the membership.

Clauses under consideration as amendments to the present agreement were not disclosed, but were understood to include wage increases for day workers and amendments to seniority clauses.

Three weeks ago a vote of union members called for a strike unless the company was willing to negotiate with representatives of the union, an affiliate of the Congress of Industrial Organizations. Conferences opened 17 days ago.

Representing the company was Harry Carmichael, Vice-President and General Manager, and J. B. Highfield, General Plant Manager, while the union was represented by a committee and J. L. Cohen, K.C., legal counsel.

SWISS GUARDING AGAINST SURPRISE

Learn Lessons From Use of Parachute Troops in Low Countries

By CHARLES S. FOLTZ, JR.
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Basel, Switzerland, May 14 (AP).—The Swiss, learning quick lessons from the lightning invasion of Belgium and the Netherlands, are giving particular attention to methods to cope with parachute troops, as they rush defence preparations at top speed.

Throughout this mountain nation there are thousands of persons not in the army itself who are organized to guard against armed men dropped from the skies and the subversive work of fifth columnists.

Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, even aged women, have their instructions to watch for parachute troops. They also know what to do if air raid warnings sound.

Old and Young Alert.

This correspondent came upon a 16-year-old youth and his 65-year-old uncle. The boy's father, brother and two other uncles were in the army, like all Swiss between the ages of 20 and 60. But the boy was too young and his uncle was too old for the army.

Both the boy and the older man kept a nearby radio tuned to Swiss stations. They were ready on a second's notice to carry out their job of cycling through the countryside to watch for parachute soldiers.

Elaborate precautions have been taken to prevent fifth column attacks against utilities and communications. Persons living in buildings opposite Swiss radio stations have been ordered to keep off balconies on that side of the house and to draw their shutters night and day.

Bank Moves in Alpine Village.

Even the Bank for International Settlements, which had headquarters here since September, has moved its records and business office to the little village of Chaeau d'Oex, in the Alps. That village is near Gstad, about seventy-five miles beyond the valley and series of lakes stretching from Basel on the German frontier to Geneva on the French frontier.

In the face of German concentrations north of her Rhine frontier, and equally powerful French forces massed on her Jura frontier, Switzerland has mobilized an army of more than 500,000 men.

MESSAGE SENT BY MR. CHURCHILL

Tells Prime Minister King "There Will be No Rest Till Justice Reigns"

Ottawa, May 14—(CP) — Prime Minister Winston Churchill of Great Britain said Monday in a cable to Prime Minister Mackenzie King that "The people of the British Commonwealth unite once more in arms to resist the terrible scourge of barbarism, and will not flinch or weary till duty is done and justice reigns."

The cable was in reply to one sent by Mr. King to Mr. Churchill when he assumed the premiership in succession to Neville Chamberlain, who also replied Monday, to another message sent by the Canadian Prime Minister.

The message from Mr. Churchill said:

"On accepting His Majesty's invitation to fill the office of Prime Minister, I send you my warmest greetings and thank you so much for your most kind message.

"The responsibility which has fallen to me in this solemn hour is lightened by the fact that it is shared by you and the other Prime Ministers of the Overseas Dominions. Our personal friendship, built in the course of many years, is now strengthened by association in a common task.

"The people of the British Commonwealth unite once more in arms to resist the terrible scourge of barbarism, and will not flinch or weary till duty is done and justice reigns."

The message from Mr. Chamberlain said: "I am deeply grateful to you for your telegram and for the support and help which you as Prime Minister of Canada have given me throughout my period of office. I know the same cordial relationship will exist between you and my successor."

Centenary

Centenary—Centenary has lost one of its most beloved members, in the passing of Mrs. Margaret Ray on Tuesday last. By her winning smile and gracious manner she endeared herself to both young and old alike. She will be greatly missed in the community and church life, where she was always a willing helper. Sincere sympathy is extended to the family.

There was a good attendance at the special Mother's Day service at the church on Sunday. The church was decorated for the occasion with lovely flowers. A special feature was a duet by Evelyn and Dorothy Ray "In Memory" a song written especially for Mother's Day by Douglas Holton. Rev. Mr. Mercer's remarks were especially appropriate for the occasion and also the music by the choir.

Seeding operations are well under way and the weather though cool, is very favorable for the work.

Mrs. Eggleton is spending sometime in Toronto.

HOSPITAL CARE IS THE BEST CARE

By McKEOWN'S Drug Store

People who dread hospitalization have never experienced the feeling of security, of noiseless and expert attention, the smooth running efficiency that surrounds the patient in the hospital bed.

A doctor's calm, professional attitude, a nurse's sympathetic skill, the comfort of carefully designed beds, immaculate linen, order, peace; all these are immeasurably soothing, comforting, healing. Hospitals are scientifically equipped not only for physical care, but for cheerful, friendly stimulation of the mind.

If the doctor says hospitalization is necessary, accept his advice. In the end you will be glad of the experience because you will have broadened your outlook to understand one more phase of living.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Birth Announcements

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Will you be good enough to give me some advice on sending out birth announcements? Is it proper to send them to those close friends who will be advised by telephone?

2. In your opinion, do you think sending announcements is like asking for a gift?

3. Should they be sent to relatives even though we never see these relatives?

P. V.

1. It's proper to send birth announcements, although the majority of people notify relatives and close friends by telephone, by telegraph or by letters.

2. No, I don't regard birth announcements as a "bid" for gifts, and I truly do not think that the majority of people would ever consider them in this unattractive light. Relatives and friends are happy to be told the news, and they respond to the announcement in a natural, friendly way.

3. If the parents of the baby are planning to broadcast the news with a generous number of cards, it would seem to me that these relatives should be included in the list.

High Mass Wedding

x x x

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please tell me what a man and his wife should wear when attending a High Mass wedding. After the ceremony, the wedding breakfast is being served at a nearby hotel, with only the family and a few close friends invited. The bride is a cousin of mine.

R. A.

To this morning wedding you would wear a street-length dress with a coat, or a suit or ensemble, the skirt of street-length. You would, of course, wear a hat, and should keep it on during the wedding breakfast. Your husband would wear a business suit, preferably a dark one.

x x x

Distant Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My daughter is to be married in another state as the young man will be unable to come here. All of their friends live in this town, and I would like your advice about cards. Should I send invitations or announcement cards? Perhaps it would not be necessary to send any?

Mother.

You don't tell me what kind of wedding your daughter is to have, and so I cannot give you definite answers to your questions. If, as I judge, she is going to be married with only a few guests present at the ceremony, it would be a convenient plan for you to send announcements of the marriage. Of course it is not necessary to send announcements, but, under the circumstances of your daughter's marriage, it seems to me that you would find them of very special convenience.

Enclosed with the announcements your daughter might like to have you send "At Home" cards, giving her future address.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Thought Her Engagement Was As Binding As Marriage

There are some men in this world who do not value a love so unselfish that there is no such word as "NO" in its vocabulary.

The girl who writes the following letter states the case much better that I or anyone else writing along the same lines could sum it up:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I am coming to you for suggestions, as I am much troubled, and what I have been through is undermining my health. I read your column daily, so I shall watch for your answer. I don't want you to write me personally because the family might see the letter.

"I've been going with a man for the past four years. I was devoted to him and in that time I must say he has never hurt my feelings. I've been absolutely true to him, and during those four years I never accepted any attentions from any other man. I even dropped my girl friends because he expected my exclusive companionship.

"Whatever he suggested for me to do I always did, to please him. He didn't want me to spend any money on presents, for he said it was a waste of money. He didn't think I should buy expensive, or even good-looking clothes, and I agreed just to please him. My whole life was planned not to give him a moment's displeasure.

"He had a terribly hard job and as he is the oldest of his family and they needed his help very much, I urged him to give them more of his pay, and I even chipped in and gave him part of my pay envelope, for I lived at home and Mom was very liberal about letting me keep most of mine. I was willing to wait years for him, until he could afford to marry. I loved him so much.

Deep down in my heart I knew I was doing wrong when I gave in to his pleading that an engagement is as binding as marriage, but I'm just a one-man girl, and I believed everything he told me. After that he began going with another girl, and he has told me that he doesn't want to see me any more. I asked him why, and he said I was not his type of woman.

"I asked him what he meant and why he thinks he loves this other girl more than me. The inference is that I gave myself to him and he does not believe in that.

"What shall I do? It's so hard for me after four years, to gather up the broken pieces of my life and go on. I can't get him out of my mind. I would do anything to get him back.

Despairing."

You'll have to force yourself to get this man out of your mind and take an interest in everything which will help you to forget. He belongs to the "gimme" type, and from your own account of him he is nothing but a monument of selfishness and egoism. If you married him, you'd probably spend the rest of your life wondering why you ever did it.

The fact that he was willing to take money from a girl speaks for itself. The name for men of that type isn't a pretty one. He wanted you to give up all of your friends and you did, which is always the height of folly. You gave him yourself, and he turned to a girl who knew how to say "no."

Please acquire some of this young man's selfishness 'til the wound hurts less. Get the becoming clothes he never wanted you to have. Join all kinds of clubs and organizations, where you'll meet new people? Join a bowling club; the good hard exercise will help you to forget. Invite people to your home, be popular and don't sit around mooning over the best luck that ever happened to you — the loss of a thoroughly selfish, unreliable young man.

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, May 15

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

ACCORDING to a most benefic chain of lunar transits, this is a day of brilliant prospects for productiveness, progress and prosperity, with all things moving happily in the direction of fulfilled hopes and wishes. This good fortune will mostly be the fruition of patience, perseverance, steadfastness and industry. Those in power and influence are disposed to bestow rewards, tokens of preferment and generosity which will stabilize the fortunes, secure the future and enhance prestige and personal popularity. It is a time to reach for such high goals and gratifications.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a year of splendid opportunities for attaining high goals, with fulfilled ambitions, increased fortunes, enhanced personal standing and honors, while friends in high places are ready to bestow rewards of merit and recognize sound achievement. It is a time for putting over major programs and campaigns, with the assurance of all worthwhile objectives being bounteously and happily secured. It is a year for great deeds.

A child born on this day may be bounteously endowed for attaining a high place in life through industry, steadiness, responsibility and progressive and ambitious aims, backed up by much ability, talent and nobility of character. It should be unselfish, kindly and magnanimous.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Health Superstitions

Primitive peoples all have peculiar superstitions connected with pregnancy and the birth of children. Those cited in previous columns seem to have been interesting to readers and today I am citing a few more.

One old custom was to starve the mother for a day or two when the baby was expected. This was supposed to make the baby so hungry that it would hurry out into the world to look for something to eat. In many backward communities a few persons still believe that labor comes on just when the baby decides to be born.

One superstition I have heard about but never actually encountered, requires a mother to expose her back and her abdomen to a blazing fire every day for thirty days after the birth of her child. She is supposed to make sure that the fire was no more than two feet away from her and she must also spend a certain specified length of time before that fire.

I suppose this would do no harm as long as the fire wasn't too big and too hot and it might be beneficial for it makes certain that the mother gets plenty of rest after her baby is born, which is rare amongst most primitive peoples. Even here in our own part of the country, women will often be found out in the fields working a couple of days after the baby is born.

In some countries, a slow, protracted labor is blamed on a perverse baby, and the midwives grow angry at it and the mother too, for not wanting to "part company." Bouncing a prospective mother in a blanket was one way once used to hurry along such a prolonged labor.

I have had an old grandmother tell me about ridiculous superstitions that were believed when she was a girl. She would laugh at how ridiculous they were, and then in the next breath indicate a belief in some superstition just about as ridiculous.

For example, an old belief in this section was—still is in some sections—that if a little boy plays with matches, he is sure to wet the bed. Surely that is as big a piece of voodoo nonsense as you'll run across anywhere. Another deep-rooted hand-me-down is that if you cut a baby's hair before he is a year old, it will make him weak. I have never been able to get to the bottom or the origin of this, yet I've been in homes where they'd sooner see the whole family bald than have a baby's hair shortened. One might suspect the Biblical story of Samson of having something to do with this superstition if the men also declined to get hair cuts.

There is a superstition, or a saying based on what used to be a superstition, that is well known. "My ears are burning; someone is talking about me." It used to be held that if your right ear burns, someone is saying nice things about you. But if the left ear burns—well, look out, for they are slandering you.

Of course, what causes one or both ears to burn is that for some reason more blood is circulating through them. So if you want to feel the satisfaction of having your right ear burn, just massage it with your hand for a moment or two. Presumably, someone will begin saying nice things about you right away.

An Ear For Beauty

By HELEN FOLLETT

GIVE teacher your ears; we'll talk about them. Now that we use them to hold back our sidelocks instead of hiding them beneath them, it is high time we considered what can be done to make them prettier.

Surprising how many different patterns Mama Nature has for ears. Some show extended lobes, some round, fat ones, others no lobes at all. The hearty eater has ruddy ears, the girl who is suffering from malnutrition may have sound receivers so pale they look almost transparent.

The soft tissue in front of the ears is often the stamping ground for the first wrinkles. Watch that territory; if there is a sign of a crinkle, work diligenly with the massage, tapping, patting, slapping.

Give your ears their proper quota of powder when fluffing it over your celestial countenance. If the lobes are a bit large, touch them with dark-colored rouge which will cast a shadow. When artificial blushes are used on cheeks and chin, the lobes should be included.

Don't wear heavy earrings; they can ruin the contour of the prettiest listeners. Pendants are most becoming to plump, round ears, button designers best for those that are long and narrow. They make proportions better.

The plastic surgeon can correct outstanding ears; he takes a little tuck in the back of them. If this defect is present in childhood, the head should be bandaged at night, or a cap of tapes worn.

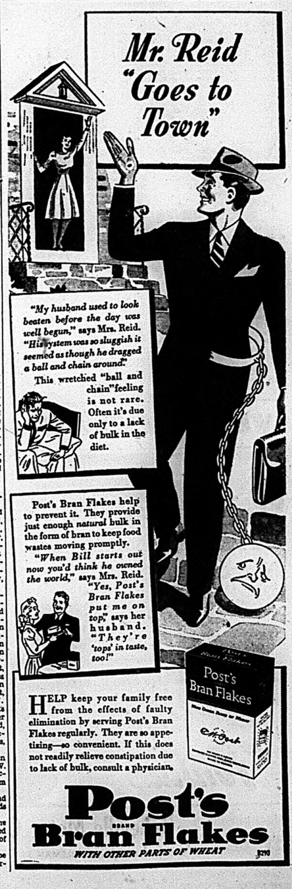
The career girl who has a hectic day, comes home tired as a hound dog is in no condition to enjoy her dinner or digest what she eats properly.

Let her jump into a warm bath, relax there for 10 minutes give herself a scouring with a heavy brush. After a one minute cold shower, a rubdown with a coarse towel and a friction with a fragrant bath tonic, she will feel tip-top.

Changing the frock makes dinner a more festive occasion. It puts one's mental house in order, makes one forget the jittery day that has worn her to fine frazzles.

FAY HOLDEN . . . whose ears get their share of beauty attention

After being soaked in a new solution for five minutes, photographic films are developed by hanging in darkness from 25 to 30 minutes.



Mr. Reid "Goes to Town"

"My husband used to look beaten before the day was well begun," says Mrs. Reid. "His system was so sluggish it seemed as though he dragged a ball and chain around."

This wretched "ball and chain" feeling is not rare. Often it's due only to a lack of bulk in the diet.

Post's Bran Flakes help to prevent it. They provide just enough natural bulk in the form of bran to keep food wastes moving promptly.

"When Bill starts out now you'd think he owned the world," says Mrs. Reid. "Yes, Post's Bran Flakes put me on top," says her husband. "They're 'tops' in taste, too!"

HELP keep your family free from the effects of faulty elimination by serving Post's Bran Flakes regularly. They are so appetizing—so convenient. If this does not readily relieve constipation due to lack of bulk, consult a physician.

Gunner N. Shaddock Nearly Knocks Famous Britisher Off His Feet in London—Statesman Apologizes and Pauses for Chat

"CHUMMY FELLOW"

Somewhere in England,
April 25, 1940.

To The Editor,
The Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ontario, Canada.
Dear Sir:

I have had the privilege of reading some of your papers while I have been over here in England and I thought that I ought to write to you and tell you that I have really enjoyed reading them. My name is Norman Shaddock, and I am a gunner in the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery, "A" Battery, which originated in Kingston. I am a Belleville boy and have been away from home for nearly two years now, in the army. My family still lives in Belleville.

Our regiment left Kingston, about 11 p.m. on the 6th of December, and landed in England on the 17th of Dec. We were greeted with the old reliable English fog and rain, and it stayed with us for the best part of a month. The weather brought quite a lot of us Canucks down with the flu, for the first part of our stay here. At present the weather is fine, but it is very undecided. It never fails to rain when we go for a walk on a Sunday afternoon. I believe that Easter Sunday was the best day we have had here so far this year and I was sorry to learn that there was a cold snap over home on that day.

The people of England are really treating us as if we were their own children. I have had the privilege of having tea at a number of homes, and have never met better people. I believe that there is no finer people in the world.

Sees London

I have been forunate enough to have had quite a few weekends in London, and also a 5-day pass. I saw all the sights in London, and believe me there are a great many of them. I saw Buckingham Palace, the Parliament Buildings with its Big Ben, Marble Arch, Hyde Park, and saw the Prime Minister taking his morning walk in Hyde Park, and I went to church in Westminster Abbey, and saw many more sights.

Meets Eden

I believe the biggest thrill I have had here since I have been here was at the world famous Madame Tussaud's Wax Museum. While walking around with a few chums of mine, we nearly knocked a man over top of his child about 12 years old, who was with him. Before we had a chance to say anything he apologized, and asked us if we had any idea who he was. We replied that we didn't and you could have knocked us over with a feather when he said, "I am Anthony Eden and this is my 12 year old son." We had a swell chat with him for nearly 15 minutes and he is one of the chummiest fellows that I have ever met. He made us believe that he was just one of the boys. We secured his autograph and I sent mine home to my father, and I hope that he got it.

There is only one other Belleville boy in our regiment, besides myself. Our camp is only about 4 miles from that of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment from Picton, and I have seen a number of my friends there. There is also a Belleville boy named Jack Holland over here with the Royal 48th Highlanders from Toronto. The H. and P. E.'s have one of the best softball teams over here at present and they are mostly made up of the boys from Belleville.

Hockey Popular

I have attended a number of hockey games held at Harringay and Wembley Rinks, and they play quite a good brand of ice hockey over here. The rules are a little different and the game has to be played a bit cleaner, and although this makes the game a little faster, the game is not as good to watch. Our Regiment team which consists of seven men of the former Kingston Garrison team in the Van Horne series and a few others have improved a lot since they came over here. They have played nearly 30 games and have won about ten, tied about 4 and lost the remainder. In the last nine games though, they have won 7, tied 1 and lost 1, and it is good to see what a difference a little opposition makes in a hockey team. For the benefit of your Sports Writer, Mr. Ken Colling, I will say that I believe our team could come back home and beat any Intermediate team in Central Ontario and give any senior team a run for their money.

We are quite at home in the Big Places in England. When we go to London we are able to get first class lodging at reasonable prices at some clubs founded for troops, by the British Legion, and several other organizations. Getting around London is easier than finding your way around Belleville. The tube system, which is similar to the subways in the States, is really a wonderful travel system. All you have to do is know where you want to go, and then go into the tubes and in a short time you are there. The blackout is not as terrible as some people seem to think. We are getting quite used to it by now and are quite able to get around in it.

Canadians Can Dance

There are numerous big dance halls for the benefit of the troops, and they really take advantage of them. The Canadians got quite a compliment from the English newspapers, when they told the British public that they would have to improve their dancing before criticizing the Canadians. One lady correspondent says, "While visiting one of the larger dancing halls in London I was privileged to be able to dance with some Canadian soldiers, and must say that most of them danced just like dancing instructors."

I don't want to give you the idea that all we do over here is to play around, because we have to work very hard during our training periods. It is generally only when we are lucky that we get a chance to enjoy ourself. We are on the go from 8 a.m. in the morning till 5 p.m. at night and sometimes are out all night on training schemes.

One thing that I should like the people over home to get straight is that London really must be the largest city in the world. It has not many high buildings in it, as the highest one I could find was only 17 stories, but there may be some higher than that. It is enormously spread out though, and would probably take a month or so to see all of London. Another thing is that you could probably not find a clear stretch of country that was not within four or five miles of a town or village over here. There is generally nearly always a village in sight wherever you may be. That is all for England this time.

Thanks Anonymous Sender

Someone from Belleville, has been sending me some Intelligencers and forgot to include their name for some reason or other and I do not know who it is, but I should like to thank them very much for this and let them know that I really appreciate it, as it keeps me up with the home town news.

I believe I shall have to close now sir, but before doing so would like to wish you and your paper and all my friends in Belleville, all the best of luck, and if anyone would like to find out anything of this country I would only be too glad to tell them about it if they would drop me a line or two. I hope you will be able to find space to print this letter. I remain,

Yours truly,
Norman Shaddock.

Late Pte. L. Keech Popular With Pals

The following letter has been received by Mrs. Pat Cornell, 61 S. John St., Belleville, sister of the late Private Lee Keech who died at Cambridge Hospital, Aldershot England on Feb. 6th, 1940 from Basil Smith of L'Amable who is also stationed at Aldershot.

Aldershot, April 23, 1940

Dear Arlie:

I am very sorry not to have answered your letter more promptly, but it took a little time to get these pictures developed, hence the delay I was unable to get any of the funeral as I was one of the bearers. One of our officers took some pictures of the funeral but he has been found unfit for military service and is being sent back to Canada, so he isn't with us any more.

I have gone twice to the Convalescent officer's home since receiving your letter to see if it would be possible to get some of the pictures to send to you, but have been unable to find him in. I will try again however.

I wrote your mother as soon as I got her address from home and have suggested to some of the boys that they do the same. It is hard to write letters here though.

It came as a terrible shock to us all as there were about half a dozen of us who were always together, Harry Boyd and Corporal Spiers from Oshawa, Jack Blyth, from Colborne, Roy Taft, Lee and myself. On the last night of January a bunch of us went down street together, took in a show and sort of made an evening of it and I never saw a man who seemed to enjoy himself more than Lee did that night. The next day he didn't feel very smart, but we all had bad colds at that time and were feeling rotten enough, so he didn't go on sick parade. We fellows went to the hospital to see him as often as they would let us in.

It hit us all pretty hard as I don't think there was a man in the regiment who had more friends than Lee.

My thoughts and sympathy were and still are with you people.

Very best regards,
Sincerely
Basil Smith,
C4253,
H. and P. E. Regt.,

Letters From the Troops

Madoc—The following letter has been received by Mr. and Mrs. Percy Holland from B. Edwards of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and formerly of Madoc:

Aldershot, England

Dear Percy and Mrs. Holland:

Thanks for the swell box of goods you sent me, it sure was swell, the same evening that it came I made a pot of coffee in our rooms and the aroma must have travelled all over the barracks, because before it had finished steeping. I believe their were five other fellows besides the six that bunk in my apartment in room also, the English may know how to make tea but coffee making is an art they have yet to acquire. Well, I do hope you are all quite well and keeping fit, the winter which you have had must have been as severe as ours over here was, for this country it was very hard, all of the rain pipes and the eavetroughs in this country are made of cast metal and of course you can realise how everything bursts wide open people tell me that the gardens are at least one month behind any other year, which they can remember. Our training during the last two weeks has been quite strenuous, quite a few night schemes which has meant doing without a lot of sleep, still this is war, so I expect they are trying to harden us for what may yet come. We have been given to understand that it will not be long now before we can expect a move, so I guess that means we may get a little action yet. All of the men have been and are acting wonderful. Of course there are one or two who kick and grumble continuously, one becomes used to such as these, on the whole my men are 100 per cent and I can bank on them for anything in fact without boasting, I think "B" Company is the best in the Regiment. The food which we get here is very good, not fancy but substantial and plenty of it, even when we are on schemes for two or three days, the field kitchens are supplied with lots of good food. The breakfast consists generally of porridge with sugar and milk, bread, butter and either bacon or sausage and jam, and tea also is served. The noon meal is always a hearty one, beef or liver with onions, potatoes, brown gravy and beans, tea again is served. The evening meal is the lightest, baked beans, fried potatoes, bread, butter ,tea with a dessert of rice or custard. I am telling you this because I thought you might like to know how the men are treated.

For the last three Sundays there have been excursions for the men to different parts of England which we think they may be interested in. The first week they were taken to Windsor where they saw the castle and other historic spots the next week they were taken to Brighton, a summer resort on the coast, they were taken by guides all over. Last week Portsmouth was chosen as the point of interest and Nelson's flagship was more than given a great going over. This trip proved so successful that it has been decided to go again this coming Sunday, 28th, so as you see the boys are being given every kind of consideration. The people here are very friendly. I hope you won't find this letter too dull. The boys are being well cared for and I thought you might like to know just how they are being treated. Well folks, please write again and let me know what happens around the old town, I still think it is the best in the world and again thank you for everything and please write soon. Yours as ever,

No Censorship Of Speeches Given In Parliament

By ROSS NUNRO

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, May 14—(CP)—A determined 19th Parliament opens its first session next Thursday to cope with some of the gravest problems in Canadian history and an outstanding group of new personalities will assist the political veterans in legislating for a country at war.

Realties of total war in Europe and the German invasion of the Lowlands have made profound impressions on the Parliamentarians and the capital anticipates a fast-moving, businesslike session as the government strives to expedite increased Canadian aid to the Allies.

There will be no censorship of speeches in either House and expressions of opinion will not be curbed by fear of violating the defence of Canada regulations. Newspaper reports of speeches will be untouched by the censor's pencil.

The treasury bench will be altered with Trade Minister MacKinnon moving down to the front-row from the second row seat he held as Minister without Portfolio and State Secretary Casgrain stepping down from the Speaker's Throne to sit with his cabinet colleagues.

German Aviator Says Dutch Anti-Aircraft Artillery Caused Heavy Nazi Losses

By MAX HARRELSON

Associated Press Staff Writer

Amsterdam, May 14 (AP)—Under tremendous pressure from mechanized German columns in the north, the centre and the south, the army of The Netherlands today carried its fight against Nazi invasion into the fifth day although its Queen and its government had moved to England.

In the north, Nazi troops stood on the eastern shore of the Ijssel Meer (Lake), in position to attempt to march across the well-defended 18-mile dam that converted the old Zuider Zee into the new land-locked lake.

In the centre, the enemy admittedly had gained a grip on a small sector of the Grebbe line, the floodwater defences east of the city of Utrecht which run south from Ijssel Meer and are only some 35 miles from Amsterdam. They constitute the chief protection for the official capital, the former seat of the government at The Hague, and the principal seaport, Rotterdam.

In the south, German troops advancing with rapidity, marched west through the province of North Brabant, then struck north across the strategic bridge over the Hollandsch Diep, at Moerdijk, and into vicinity of Dordrecht, only 12 miles southeast of Rotterdam.

Situation in Rotterdam

In the southern section of Rotterdam, presumably around Waalhaven airport, German detachments still were "resisting stubbornly" against the Dutch efforts to dislodge them which have been going on since these Nazis troops were landed in one of the opening moves of the Lowland invasion last Friday.

To penetrate this far across the country, virtually cutting it in two, the heavily motorized German column apparently had forced its way through the defence system in the Peel Marshes, across the Maas River from the German border.

Gaining the bride at Moerdijk put them in control of an important line of communication. This bridge which spans the Hollandsch Diep, one of the principal outlets of The Maas, not only connects the northern and south portions of the country, but also is on the principal railway line between Belgium and The Netherlands' principal cities.

The Dutch hoped for Allied relief from the German pressure, at least in the south. French troops two days ago were said to have contacted the Germans in the eastern portion of north Brabant, the province which borders on Belgium, and today they were said to be receiving reinforcements.

In the east, the exact position of the German forces which had cut into the Grebbe Line was not known.

The latest communique from the Dutch high command said the Nazis first had won a section of the line only to lose portions of it to Dutch counter-attacks, but that the Dutch had been unable to hold their re-won positions in the face of renewed attacks.

Germans Admit Heavy Losses

In only one respect did the communique claim success. It said that a captured German flying officer had admitted the "excellent firing of our anti-aircraft artillery" was responsible for heavy German air losses.

The communique also paid tribute to "several units of the army and Royal Navy," saying they had "by their heroic behaviour carried on the best traditions of our people, which are also reflected in the determined attitude of the citizens."

With the entire royal family, headed by 59-year-old Queen Wilhelmina, and including Princess Juliana, Prince Bernhardt and their two daughters, Beatrix and Irene, safely transported to England and The Hague abandoned as seat of the government, authorities continued their round-up of persons suspected of "Fifth Column" activities.

The arrest of 300 in Amsterdam yesterday made a total of 900 taken into custody since the war began.

London, May 14 (CP)—A Netherlands army communique broadcast from Holland and heard in London today said:

"The northern provinces are fully in the hands of the enemy.

"Efforts by the enemy to take the enclosing dam of the Zuyder Zee (Ijssel Meer) which connects the province of Friesland with the province of North Holland, in which Amsterdam is situated, have been so far frustrated.

"Rotterdam on the north side of the River Maas is in our hands. Den Helder, the northern part of the province of North Holland which is the main military base, is in our hands.

The position of the province of Brabant is uncertain. The province of Zeeland is in our hands. Our frontier troops have been withdrawn to the water line.

"Our air defence organization is still working despite losses which have been sustained.

"The struggle is difficult, but the fight is worthwhile. It is a fight for our independence and existence for the freedom which was won centuries ago by our Prince of Orange."

LARGE CROWDS ATTEND OPENING OF SIM'S SHOWS

Belleville Collegiate Band Marches to Show Lot to Open Week's Festivities

CLEAN ENTERTAINMENT

In keeping with their motto of originality, versatility and general modern entertainment, the renowned Sims' Greater Exposition Shows moved into Belleville and erected their midway tents on the Cricket Field Monday for a week's engagement sponsored by the Belleville Beaches Association. A parade, headed by the Belleville Collegiate school band, officially opened the week's program of fun and frivolity as the band marched the main streets of Belleville playing martial music and terminating their parade on the circus lot, where the youthful musicians were the evening's guests of Manager Freddie Sims last evening.

President Reg. Moncrieff of the Belleville Beaches, welcomed the parade and officially opened the carnival, the revenue from which will materially assist the splendid work of the beautifying of Belleville's waterfront and the Beaches project.

The conventional glitter and glamor of the whirling bright lights of the Sims Shows attracted a large opening night crowd of well over 1,000 persons, with the school kiddies of Belleville enjoying special privileges, as provided personally by Mr. Sims in the matter of reduced rates for all rides and amusements on the lot. The merry-go-round, that old-age attraction of amusement for both young and old, proved as popular as ever, while the ferris wheel, merry-mixup and kiddies' auto rides were the mecca of attraction under ideal carnival weather.

The feature free attraction of the Sims Shows this season is Leo Plourde's high aerial stars, a thrilling act performed 66 feet above the good earth with aerialists whirling and performing trapeze acts. Along the midway can be seen "Fearless Edna", a petite young lady who enters a cage of poisonous snakes which she handles and caresses in a most carefree manner. The Club International, with songs and dances of all nations, proved entertaining to the adults, while the kiddies were at home in Oswald's Variety Shows, where the "Human Frog", a contortionist featured, along with Polly, the medical enigma and a clever dog and animal act. The conventional sword swallowers of the carnival are not forgotten and again for the kiddies is the Penny Arcade.

The Coney Island Spectacle, direct from the New York World's Fair brings to Belleville many strange features, including acts of levitation and a mental telepathy performance by Madame Gertrude, who personally demonstrated her ability for the benefit of the press when introduced by Mr. Gauthier, assistant manager of the Sims Shows.

Standing with her back to the lone reporter, Madame Gertrude asked him what month he was born in, the scribe whispered the month into President Reg Moncrieff's ear and immediately Madame Gertrude exclaimed—"July", and added, "the date is the 29th", all of which was uncannily true.

THREE FAVORITES SURE STARTERS IN KING'S PLATE

Dark Comet, Frobisher and Hood Best Liked by the Talent to Take Guineas

TWELVE TO START

Practically All of the Starters Will Have Final Workout on Wednesday

Toronto, May 14—(CP)— Training activity tapered off today as eligibles for the 81st running of the King's Plate Saturday were rested prior to final speed trials over the full distance.

Main topic hinged about the number expected to trot to the post in the nine furlongs gallop for the King's 50 guineas and the biggest slice of a $7,500 added purse. A consensus placed the starting field at 12.

Unless something develops between now and post time, the three favorites, George Hendrie's Dark Comet, Parkwood Stable's Frobisher and Jack McIntyre's Hood, appear sure starters. Other probables are: H. C. Hatch's Curwen; J. E. Frowde Seagram's Silvos; J. G. Fair's Meddle Mark; Dave Garrity's Katie Bud; Erindale Stable's Star Gaiety; Harry Giddings' Ring Wise; Miss M. A. Kane's Willie the Kid; William Bovaird's Brown Lion and C. George McCullagh's Mons Memories.

Most sentiment favors Dark Comet, a big brown gelding by Dark Hero out of Candy Star. He was installed winter-book favorite and workouts to date show he has lost none of the speed that carried him to victory in the Mrs. Orpen Cup and Saucer, final 1939 juvenile test.

Frobisher and Hood are expected to furnish the chief opposition. Both have progressed during training preparations and need only one or two more stiff breezes before being declared fit.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, May 14 — (AP)—If George Preston Marshall was a baseball instead of a football baron, he'd go a long way to get Zeke Bonura and Buck Newsom. Estimates each is worth 75,000 paid admissions. . . . Mail box: R. G., Lake Villa, Ill., last heard of Alabama Pitts he was playing with a semi-pro nine in North Carolina. Broadway books still favour the Yanks, but at a much shorter price —4-5 instead of the 7-20 opening quotation. Prof. Artie McGovern, who conditioned the Dodgers, is back from a South American trip.

Rue De Sockerue: Jenkins vs. Armstrong has struck a snag. Jenkins won't sign at over 138 and Armstrong insists on 140. They'll probably compromise on 139. . . . Mike Jacob, who let an option on the Boston Garden go by the boards, has been getting balder and balder ever since Armstrong and Paul Junior netted $32,000 up there. . . . Johnny Paychek is anxious to prove he isn't as bad as all that and wants to fight Red Burman free gratis on the Louis - Godoy card. . . . How about giving the guy another chance?

THE "BIG TRAIN" WINS ANOTHER VICTORY

Walter Johnson, who achieved baseball immortality as one of the greatest pitchers of all time is now getting his name in politics' win column. He is shown seated after winning the primary battle for Republican nomination to the house of representatives from Maryland's sixth district.

FLYING FINN TRIES OUT TRACK

Taisto Maki, world's champion distance runner of Finland, shown testing the cinder path in the Coliseum at Los Angeles shortly after his arrival. He will meet Greg Rice and other distance men in a two-mile grind, which will be the feature of Finnish relief games to be staged the night of May 17.

GOLD CUP WINNER — Black Sweep, a gelding, is winner in the Virginia Gold Cup race at Warrenton, Va. Or Else is second.

RELIEF HURLER FORCES HOME WINNING RUN

Toronto Leafs Manage to Win a Game, Taking the Orioles 5-4

ORIOLES HAVE POWER

Baltimore is Second and Wins Their Pace by Heavy Clouting

(By The Associated Press)

For a team that is tied for second place and in a good spot to strike for the lead, Baltimore Orioles probably have the most remarkable defensive-record in the International League. And that circuit, it might be noted, doesn't offer any very fine defensive performances this season.

Baltimore's biggest advance has been made in the past week, in which the Orioles won five out of eight games. Yet in that stretch the club has played only one errorless game and had only four of its starting pitchers go the route. The Birds have made 16 errors in their last seven starts, four of them yesterday.

They have made up for these lapses with power. In those eight including four homers by Nick Etten and two by Bill Nagel. The Orioles succeeded in blowing a 5-4 decision to the last-place Toronto Maple Leafs yesterday after overcoming a three-run deficit, but that still left them tied for second place as Rochester Red Wings dropped an 8-4 decision to the league-leading Jersey City Giants.

Syracuse Chiefs knocked over Montreal 3-2 in yesterday's other game to take over fifth place from the Royals. Newark and Buffalo were idle.

Baltimore's defeat came in a rather remarkable performance. Rookie Charlie Lauenstein held the Leafs to three hits in seven innings and left the game trailing 2-1. Toronto nicked Ken Trinkle for two runs in the eighth, then the Orioles came back to tie when Nagel belted a homer with two aboard. In the last half of the ninth. Two singles and an intentional pass loaded the bases, then Trinkle walked Eric Tipton and forced in Toronto's winning run.

CORNWALL BOXER IN FINALS

Montreal, May 14—(CP)— Jerry Blanchard of Cornwall, Ont., holder of the Dominion Amateur Flyweight crown, punched his way into the final of a Golden Gloves boxing tournament here Monday by gaining the decision in a 118-pound bout against Willie Mergler of Montreal.

In the final today, Blanchard will meet Johnny McKenna of Montreal who gained a three-round decision over Maurice Dussiaume of Timmins, Ont.

PACE AND SALICA MATCHED

Toronto, May 14—(CP)—Georgie Pace of Cleveland, bantamweight titleholder, and Lou Salica, New York, will meet here May 27 in a 15-round championship bout, it was announced last night by Jack Corcoran, fight promoter. Pace retained his title when the pair fought to a 15-round draw here about two months ago.

SPORT ODDITIES

Kansas City, May 14—(AP)—Sports oddities that won prizes in a nationwide contest sponsored by a magazine devoted to the problems of the coach:

To K. H. (Ken) Somerville, director of physical education at Monticello, N. Y., High School went the top award.

He told how Cooper, a Monticello high jumper, scraped off the bar as he attempted to clear 5 feet 4 inches. The bamboo barrier fell to the ground—and bounced back to the identical pegs from which it had been pushed.

x x x

Another New Yorker, Roger M. Clouser of Retsof, won honorable mention with his description of the perfect "bank" shot in basketball.

A York Central forward started cutting for the basket in a game with Geneseo High but lost his balance and couldn't get his hands up in time to catch a pass. The ball hit him on the top of the head, bounded against the backboard and dropped through the netting for two points.

REGINA GRIDDERS WILL FIELD TEAM

Edmonton Eskimos Will Not Operate in Western Canada Union Due to War

Regina, May 14—(CP)—Regina Roughriders, 16 times champions of Western Canada football, will field a team in the Western Interprovincial Union again this year despite financial difficulties which threatened to force withdrawal. Decision to remain in the union with Calgary and Winnipeg was reached by the executive last night. Manager Jack Lockhart told the executive estimated expenditures for the 1940 team will be $15,500, nearly $5,000 less than in 1939 when the club suffered a $5,000 deficit.

Edmonton, May 14—(CP)—Edmonton Eskimos of the Western Interprovincial Football Union will not operate this year after two seasons in the league which produced the present holders of the Canadian Senior Championship, Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

Decision to drop out of competition for a year was announced last night by Nick MacPhee, retiring President of the Edmonton Sports Booster Club.

Present indications are the union will carry on this season with Calgary, Regina and Winnipeg, the three clubs that formed the union in 1936.

The Edmonton Club at its annual meeting last night unanimously agreed to disband for at least one year because of the war, lack of Edmonton material and inability to import a large number of players, MacPhee said.

BELLEVILLE'S DULLEST YOUTH BEATS OTHER BOYS FOR JOB

Everyone thought him the untidiest, most slovenly boy in town. The more he was rebuffed, the duller he seemed to become.

Soon, he had to find a job and it seemed so hopeless. His mother pressed his pants, made sure he'd washed behind his ears and combed his hair—but still he just didn't seem to shine. Then she had an inspiration. The reason he didn't shine was because his shoes were dirty. Two minutes with Nugget Shoe Polish made such a difference that his whole personality seemed to radiate in response—and he won the job. Nugget is the most popular shoe polish in Canada because of its outstanding polishing and preserving qualities.

CINCINNATI REDS AND THE CARDS PLAY 8-8 DRAW

Johnny Mize Hits Three Homers and Joe Orengo of Cards Hits One

RECORD TIED

Bill Werber Gets Four Doubles to Tie Major League Record

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

The little game that wasn't there, a phantom baseball battle as far as the National League was concerned, was probably the lustiest 14-inning interlude that ever ended exactly where it started.

It was an 8-8 tie between the league-leading Cincinnati Reds and St. Louis Cardinals with darkness finally halting the show. It also was one of three games played in the Majors yesterday, the others likewise being in the National League with the New York Giants beating Boston 11-5 and Brooklyn downing the Phillies 6-3.

It's a story begun April 23 when a flood washed out a contest the Cards had scheduled at Cincinnati. Later someone thought of using the open date both teams had on Monday, May 13, when they would be heading east together after playing a series in St. Louis. The newspapers were notified. Fans were told. It was a special ladies day and 9,370 women thronged Crosley Field. But the National League office in New York didn't know anything about it.

No Umpires Assigned

President Ford Frick didn't assign any umpires.

Larry Goetz, one of the league's regular staff of arbiters was located enjoying a day off at his home in Cincinnati, and summoned to duty. Coach Jim Wilson of the Reds and pitcher Lon Warneke of the Cards were pressed into service on the bases.

Manager Bill McKechnie kept it unique by sending Johnny (double-no-hit) Vander Meer to the mound for the first time this season. Before he could get anybody out in the fourth he had 4 walks and five hits, including three home runs.

This was only the overture. Johnny Mize hit three home runs and Joe Orengo one for the Cards. Bill Werber of the Reds tied a Major League record by getting four doubles.

In the first of the 13th Mize hit his third home run and the Reds rapped right back with a run on a pinch double by Bill Hersberger and a single by Werber. That was the way the game ended an inning later.

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

DID YOU KNOW THAT no matter how rabid and daffy Brooklyn baseball fans may be, they were perfectly justified in their contentions when celebrating Tex Carleton's no-hit-no-run effort against the Reds recently, as "no hitters" are somewhat of a rare variety among Dodger baseball statistics. . . It was 'way back in 1925 when the "Daffinessmen of Brooklyn" saw their last "no hitter"; Dazzy Vance turning in the trick exactly 15 seasons ago. . . . Fifteen years is a long time to wait for a baseball accomplishment; but then the old Robins haven't won the National League since 1920. . . . And that the Reds won the National League in 1919 and then had to wait 20 years for another pennant. . . . The Dodgers won the bunting in 1920, so will history repeat and bring the Brooklyn fans another flag 20 years later — 1940? . . . Curly Krug, Peterboro' gridder, was in the city over the week-end when he told Pete Beach he was hanging up his football cleats.

Unless the youngsters show some initiative those who are willing to assist in the sponsorship of baseball in Belleville will toss the issue to the winds pronto. Those who benefit by playing the game throughout the season should shoulder some of the burden of organization early in May. It is our firm belief that Belleville should abandon all O.B.A. aspirations and centre activities on the organization of a city junior ball loop, with all games played somewhere in the vicinity of Pine Street school grounds, where baseball once flourished as a district or zone game. However, the majority desire O.B.A. competition and we will lend whatever assistance we can through the local sport pages. In the meantime the season's initial practice will be held at the Collegiate campus tomorrow evening and a special invitation is extended the youth of the city to interest itself in the playing and promotion of the game in Belleville.

Efforts to organize an Industrial Softball League will be made at the Y.M.C.A. Thursday night. Those interested should plan to attend.

At Princeton University during the 1938-'39 athletic season, receipts, most of them from football, totalled $324,102, while the cost of coaching and outfitting 62 teams in 16 sports and of upkeep of grounds and buildings amounted to $312,132. The writing off as a sports equipment inventory of $20,563, however, caused the accumulated deficit to mount during the year to $105,186.

Credit those phenomenal Dodgers with another baseball feat. Although it was sometime ago, do you remember when an all-time pitching record was set by Carl Hubbell, New York Giants, when he whipped Pittsburgh Pirates 5-2 at New York three years ago today, scoring his 21st straight victory? King Carl eclipsed Rube Marquard's mark of 20 straighters set in 1911-12. The lean fastballer's string was broken the following May 31 when Brooklyn batted him out of the box.

When Harry Hibbs, veteran Birmingham and English international soccer football goalkeeper retired a few weeks ago, the Birmingham Club presented him with a purse of $3,000.00 for services rendered in the past. No matter what happens British sportsmanship is never forgotten and "on the fields of Eton, wars are won."

Now that senior baseball is firmly entrenched in Peterborough, perhaps the old C.O.B.L. towns could do their "bit" in assisting Canada's war effort. What we'd like to see is an all-star game between the present-day Petes and a team composed of ten-year players selected from the old C.O.B.L. That is to say players who played at least ten years in the old Central League would turn out enmasse in Peterboro' in a game with all net proceeds to go to the Red Cross or any other worthy war charity organization. The bringing together of these stars of yester-year would doubtless prove a great attraction in Peterboro' with a galaxy of such players as Al Heckman, Max Swanston, Ray Rose, Freddie Ash and others from Peterboro, Bob Chalk and the Hill boys from Port Hope, Dick Turpin, Billie Skitch and the boys from Cobourg, Walt Gerow from Napanee, Del Cherry, Joe Daly, Jim Arniel and the boys from Kingston as well as the Mills boys, Wicky Ross, Babe Casey and others from Belleville. Such a game would bring a goodly sum for war charities and also bring together the veterans of the old Central League once again. It's a natural.

Wrestling fans will welcome back Pedro Valdez, the lithe Mexican grappler, who made such a hit with the patrons at the Hume Arena last fall. Valdez was poorly matched in his last bout here when he was beaten by "The Masked Marvel," who out-weighed the agile Mexican by easily 80 to 100 pounds. However, on Friday night Valdez meets "Speedy" Williams, the fast Detroit lad, who gained much respect for his scientific manner of wrestling here on the opening card of the season. "Nibs" Palmer, formerly of Montreal and now with the Air Force, is also included on the card. Palmer made a decided hit with the fans last week and it was by popular demand that he was included on this week's card.

The Canadiens, Detroit Red Wings and New York Americans are all commencing the early construction or rebuilding of their 1940-41 rosters. None of these clubs would waive on Bucko McDonald, Toronto defenceman, which would indicate the former Detroit-Toronto rear - guardsman is headed for the minors, however. Manager Jack Adams promised to give several of his Indianapolis and Omaha recruits up for a thorough trial while Dick Irwin and Red Dutton are going to the open market seeking additional playing strength. The remaining clubs are sitting pat.

SPORT SPICE—Toronto reported its fourth season's golf ace yesterday......All of which reminds us that the champion Belleville Golf trundlers are going to try their hand at golf Thursday evening at the east end course......It's even betting that Pat Drumm and Evan Barlow will wish they were on "Stub" Barrett's alleys before the No. 1 hole is reached......In the City of Niagara Falls sixty minor league baseball teams will be sponsored this summer, while in Belleville one cannot find a sponsor for one teen-aged team ......The minor delinquency, which is rising in Belleville, is an unknown quantity in Niagara Falls ...... New York Giants chalked up their sixth consecutive win yesterday......We wonder why the local softballers are so anxious to enlarge their grouping......After all would it not be more beneficial to operate a strong five-teamed loop, rather than a lop-sided seven or eight-teamed league?

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

26 Merchant Ships Of Nazis Seized In Dutch Indies

London, May 14 —(CP)— A British naval source said today 19 German merchant ships were seized by Netherlands authorities in the Dutch East Indies and seven in the Dutch West Indies.

This source said five other German ships were mined and sunk by the Norwegians or scuttled or set afire by their crews between May 6 and May 11.

He placed the total tonnage lost to the enemy between those dates at 171,049.

The British source said each of the 31 ships the Germans lost during this period was of less than 10,000 tons.

The Nordnorge, a Norwegian ship of 1,991 tons used as a troop transport by the Germans, was reported sunk by a mine off Norway.

Only one British ship of about 6,000 tons was sunk by the enemy in the week ended May 5, he said, while there were no Allied or neutral losses in the same period.

SOFTBALL LID IS PRIED OFF IN TRENTON

"Do-Nuts" Win Opener 29 to 10 Over Benedict-Proctor

Trenton, May 14 (Special)— A rabid crowd of softball fans saw the 1940 season open here with a bang last night when the much talked about Canadian Doughnut nine handed Benedict and Proctor a terrific 29 to 10 beating in a game that went the route—nine innings. Mayor O. G. Alyea figured in the opening ceremony and pitched the first ball to Mr. Andrews, president of the Doughnut firm. Mr. Andrews reached Mayor Alyea's offering for a Texas leaguer which dropped in behind second base out of reach of the centre fielder. Catching duties went to councillor Kenneth Couch who had little chance to show his wares with the Doughnut president at bat. The game finally got underway at seven o'clock and was only a few minutes old when slugger "Jiger" Ellis polled a Free twirler out into the Bay of Quinte for a home run. Two base runners ahead of Ellis crossed the plate in front of him, and the score at the end of the inning was in favor of the Fried Cake team. The Doughnut lads held the Silver-plate boys in their half of the inning but the Proctor outfit threw a scare into their smart-playing rival in the second round when desperate batmen reached Bruce Burtt's speedy delivery for four hits and as many runs. The Fried Cake artists recovered, however, in the next frame and slugged home six runs to take an undisputed advantage. The Silver-plate boys made a last inning bid in the ninth but could not drive in enough runs to overcome the Doughnut team's long lead. Coach Stain's charges belted Free for five runs in the eighth but went scoreless in the closing stanza. The teams:

Canadian Doughnut: Morin, cf; A. LaMorre, c; C. Ellis, 2b; V. Burtt, lf; Cain, ss; J. Heaney, 1b; S. Ellis, 3b; G. Bell, rf; B. Burtt, p.

EMMA GOLDMAN, ANARCHIST, DIES

Philosophies Brought Her Prison Terms and Deportation From United States

Toronto, May 14—(CP)—Emma Goldman, internationally - known anarchist and lecturer whose philosophies brought her prison terms and deportation from the United States, died here early today. She was 70 years old.

A Russian-born Jewess who became known as "Red Emma," Miss Goldman always denied she was an advocate of violence, but from the time of the Chicago Haymarket bombings on May Day, 1886, until the United States entered the last war in 1917, her name was linked at least indirectly with many acts of violence.

She went to the United States from her native land with her family at the age of 15 and lived for a time in Rochester, N.Y., where she married Jacob Kersner in 1887 and shortly afterwards became a supporter of anarchy and radicalism. Deported to Russia in 1919 after serving a prison term for obstructing the war draft, she denounced Bolshevism as tyrannical and travelled about Europe for several years, lecturing.

Early in 1934, Miss Goldman made her first appearance in Toronto and was granted a 90-day visa to visit relatives and friends in the United States, ending a 14-year exile from that country.

During lectures in Toronto and the United States that year she described Hitler as a "menace," and predicted that the "Hitler regime will go down to defeat" because of public opinion in Germany.

LIEGE FORTS HOLD

Franco-Luxembourg border region north of the Maginot Line through Montmedy and Longwy to the Moselle, a distance of more than 120 miles, the first great battle of the war has begun.

The official army communique today said the Germans, driving past Liege, had moved southeastward 32 miles to Namur and 40 miles farther on to the vicinity of Sedan. Behind them have come the main German forces. Late dispatches from the front said fighting was in progress in the towns of Longwy and Sedan.

Deep Salient Formed

The Liege Forts are still holding, the communique said, and form a salient deep in the centre of the invading German forces. The column moving west from Liege suffered a terrific blow from the onslaught of French tanks in the clash of the steel monsters near Tongres yesterday. Today the French victory in that first great battle of tanks was clearly established. The German losses were enormous.

In the north in Holland the Dutch Army appeared to be in a grave situation. The Dutch line of resistance was forced close to Arnheim and the Nazis drove forward on both sides of the Rhine toward Rotterdam, whose fall appears to be imminent. The Dutch are still fighting fiercely, however, in the peninsular like square formed by the Provinces of old Holland and marked off by the cities of Utrecht, Amsterdam, and The Hague.

Over the entire front a gigantic air battle raged. The French communique said that late yesterday 16 additional enemy planes had been brought down, making the day's total verified at 31. Today huge squadrons were engaged on both sides over the front and over the interior of the Low Countries.

While the northern and eastern sections of the front thus blazed into action, the Alsace and Lorraine sectors of the Maginot Line had a comparatively quiet day. The Germans launched two fair-sized attacks on the plateau east of Forbach and several local actions occurred east of Wissembourg, in the Lauter River section.

Reconnaissance Flights.

Allied Air Forces carried out reconnaissance flights deep behind the zone of battle and also successfully attacked convoys and German communications between the Rhine and the Dutch and Belgian frontiers, causing heavy damage and losses among the German troops moving from the right to the left bank of the Rhine.

Reach Meuse Monday

The German troops began reaching various points along the Meuse late yesterday morning. The Allied command expected that by today sufficient forces would have been brought up by the foe to attempt a crossing. This is the act that would bring the main battle forces of Germany and the Allies into a frontal collision.

The German southern wing, advancing from the Moselle through Luxembourg and the Ardennes to the Meuse, appeared to constitute the stronger of the Nazi armies converging on the battlefront. It includes large infantry forces and at least two tank divisions which were sent out in advance as soon as the force crossed the Moselle. The tank columns are being followed by infantry, heavy artillery on tractors, and accompanying auxiliary units.

Advance Quite Difficult

The advance through the Ardennes was made amid great difficulties caused by the efficient job of destruction and obstruction carried out by French and Belgian regarding units which fell back in the path of the advancing Nazis. As soon as the Germans reached the Belgian border they spread out fanwise to approach the Meuse and join the other columns moving down from Liege.

Along the eastern sector, from Sedan to the Moselle, fighting has begun in the zone in front of the Maginot Line proper. Naturally the precise location of the Maginot Line remains a secret but it can be stated definitely that the towns of Sedan and Longwy, where fighting was in progress today, are north of the French fortifications. The Germans are using large tank forces, artillery and air planes to attack the French positions.

The official morning communique said:

"The German attack is developing with increased violence. There was nothing important to report in central Belgium. The enemy reached the Meuse from Liege to Namur and Sedan. The last city was evacuated and particularly fierce fighting took place in its immediate environs as well as in the region north of Inant.

The battle continues rom south of Longwy to the Moselle. Enemy attacks were repulsed in the vicinity of Wissembourg.

"Our troops and Allied troops are fighting valiantly against the enemy, who is making extremely intense efforts, particularly with tanks and aviation. At the end of the day of May 13, sixteen enemy planes were shot down. They must be added to the total given for the evening communique of May -13 (15). During the night our air force carried out many reconnaissance flights."

Fighting Sized Up.

Military observers sized up the trend of the fighting to indicate that the Allies would make their stand in "the great battle of the west" on a line along the Meuse River from Givet, France, north to Namur, Belgium, thence further north to Louvain.

The French said Nazi mechanized columns had been halted in the greatest tank battle of all time and officially tabulated the German air losses at 400 planes in the first three and a half days of violent aerial activity.

"Mere preliminaries," is the way a French War Ministry spokesman described continual air battles, infantry drives and the gigantic mechanized engagement in which the French assertedly dispersed between 1,500 and 2,000 German tanks in the Belgian Ardennes Mountains, north of France, where the Nazis sought to cut Allied communications.

The "real" struggle for possession of the Netherlands and Belgium, he said, will come on the new Allied line.

First Tank Battle.

Military commentators said the Ardennes fight yesterday was the first in history in which two such fleets of "land battleships" had matched tactics and guns.

Sketchy dispatches told how the tank battle was fought in bright sunlight on a flat terrain between Tirelmont and Tongres where the machines were able to manoeuvre freely.

The French corps ,en route to the battle line after the invasion Friday, rushed into engagement at full speed, it was said.

The dust raised by the encounter could be seen from afar. The roar o the tanks' guns could be heard for miles.

Nazi Losses Heavy

A French staff officer said a battle between "the full weight of the Allied mechanized army and the full weight of German armored divisions may come now within a few days." Two French divisions, reinforced by some reconnaissance elements, were reported to have been pitted against two German divisions in the Ardennes battle.

The French reported Nazi losses in men and material there were heavy.

Advices from the front said the German offensive appeared to be general north of the Moselle. Observers cited three objectives which the German general staff might have immediately in mind:-

1. To divide the liaisoned fronts of the Netherlands and Belgium in a drive to the coast.
2. To win the left bank of the Meuse River and drive on Brussels.
3. To force the French defences along the Luxembourg border where the German army corps got a running start through the defenseless Grand Duchy.

Following Out Plan

It was emphasized by a spokesman of the French War Ministry that slow withdrawals by British, French, Dutch and Belgian troops could not be considered a retreat because that action merely was the following out of a pre-arranged plan of strategy.

Reports of some specific actions told of a bitter battle for the French town of Longwy, at the Belgian border, with the French still holding the town.

Along Luxembourg, the battleline was described as being partly in French, partly in Luxembourg territory.

Communiques of the Belgian high command did not give the outcome of yesterday's engagements, but said that constant German pressure along the entire Belgian frontier had been met with "stiff resistance". Belgian troops were said to be holding their positions "everywhere."

MILITARY POSITION

There is no confirmation here of a German attack on the Maginot Line though the position around Sedan is obscure.

Warned Against Over-Optimism

Warning strongly against over-optimism about the campaign, this source said that in Belgium British troops now are cooperating with the Belgians in covering Brussels.

He added that a great battle is developing in the area east of Brussels.

"It will be a few days yet," this source said, "before we can estimate the, position," in this phase of the war.

The German attack was described as bearing to the west rather than to the south, and observers here expressed the view that the smash at Sedan—which the Germans reached today—is part of the drive against Belgium, rather than the beginning of a blow against the Maginot Line.

Bristol Beufort in Action

British authorities disclosed for the first time last night that the Empire had unleashed against Germany's "total war" the Bristol Beufort, a "Jack-of-all-trades" air-craft capable of bombing, fighting and reconnaissance work. The machine is armed with guns forward and a power operated "blister" amidships, allowing it to fire broad-side, something no other bomber in the war can do.

While refugees from Holland and Belgium streamed into the United Kingdom King George and Queen Elizabeth set an example of hospitality by turning Buckingham Palace over to the 59-year-old Dutch Queen who had crossed the North Sea in a British warship to escape German attempts to bomb or kidnap her and her family.

King Meets Queen Wilhelmina

The King met Wilhelmina last night at dingy Liverpool Street station, kissed her suntanned, ruddy cheeks and asked her to stay at the palace while he and Queen Elizabeth went to Dorsetshire on a visit.

Wilhelmina stepped off the train wearing a plain blue suit and carrying a service respirator slung over her shoulder. With her characteristic firmness she fought back tears that threatened to roll down her cheeks when she greeted her daughter, Crown Princess Juliana, and her son-in-law, Prince Bernhardt, who had arrived a few hours earlier with their two baby princesses.

The announcement that the Dutch government had been transferred was made at The Hague, the seat of The Netherlands government, last night, at the time Queen Wilhelmina arrived here.

Queen Meets Ministers.

At Buckingham Palace, Queen Wilhelmina received the Dutch Ministers who arrived in London first, among them Foreign Minister Eelco N. Van Kleffens, who came here by plane several days ago, and the Colonial Minister, Charles J. I. M. Welter.

Meanwhile, British troops rushed to stiffen the resistance of the Belgians, who appeared to be falling back from the salient formed by the River Meuse (Maas) and the Albert Canal, toward a shorter and more easily defended line.

The Admiralty announced that British warships were helping the Dutch and Belgian forces by bombarding plane-landed German troops on the coast.

An Air Ministry communique last night said the Royal Air Force shot down 40 or more German planes in battles over the low countries and bombed German troop columns in Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg. This brought the number of German planes reported shot down by the British since the start of the German invasion last Friday at approximately 135.

It was British communiques which revealed the R.A.F. has been using secret types of planes.

Until the war spread to Holland and Belgium, the British Spitfires, Hurricanes, Wellingtons and Blenheims bore the brunt o the war in the air.

A Bristol Beufort took part in the attack on the German-occupied Waalhaven airdrome near Rotterdam. The Beufort is said to be capable of "300 miles per hour plus."

The new bomber carries a crew of four—pilot, navigator, gunner and radio operator.

Specially designed for rapid manufacture, the Beufort is known as the "Jack of all Trades" of the R.A.F. It can be used as an ordinary long-range bomber, torpedo bomber, or general reconnaissance plane.

Britain's "mystery" fighter plane, the Boulton Paul Defiant, is reported also to have got in deadly work against German bombers in operations over Holland and Belgium.

Equipped with a power-operated multi-gun turret aft and an unknown number of machine guns forward, the Defiant is expected to be a valuable defence weapon in the event the Germans launch mass bombing raids on England. Its after turret is designed to swing easily at high speeds, thus permitting a broadside attack on a formation of enemy planes.

"total" war, was met at St. Pancras Station by a representative of Foreign Secretary Viscount Hallifax and members of the Dutch legation.

(Announcement that the Dutch Government had left The Hague was made last night at Amsterdam, but its destination was not disclosed.)

It was not immediately indicated whether The Netherlands Government planned to establish a provisional "capital" in England.

Queen Wilhelmina came here yesterday. She had been preceded earlier in the day by Princess Juliana, her consort, Prince Bernhardt and their two infant daughters.

The Netherlands Minister to London, Dr. Michiels Van Verduinen, said the Queen left Holland against her wishes, solely because her advisers convinced her of the importance of avoiding capture by the Germans and the disintegration of her government.

He said the Queen's original intention had been to go to the south of Holland, which is strongly fortified. But before she could get there the German Intelligence Service learned of the proposed move and the area was heavily bombed.

The Minister said Germany had commanded that Queen Wilhelmina and her government be taken "at all costs."

Dutch naval, military and air force attaches accompanied the ministers, and some 200 civilian refugees were on the same train.

HON. R. B. HANSON

candidates, Mr. Hanson was chosen to act as temporary House Leader by the group of 39 supporters of the Conservative cause, returned in the March Dominion election.

It is expected a National convention will be held after the forthcoming session of parliament to choose a permanent successor to Dr. Manion.

Joseph Harris, who has represented Toronto-Danforth in the House of Commons since 1921 and was one of the candidates for leadership when Dr Manion was chosen at the National convention in July, 1938, was reported to be the runner-up in yesterday's voting on a temporary House Leader.

A Private Caucus

The caucus was held in private with only elected Members of the House of Commons attending. Brief statements were given out through John R. MacNicol, Toronto-Davenport, caucus chairman.

It was reported, however, that only two or three votes separated Mr. Hanson and Mr. Harris in the final ballot. Others in the running were Howard Green, Vancouver-South, Clair Casselman, Grenville-Dundas, and Hon. Grote Stirling, Yale .

Denton Massey, Toronto-Greenwood, also a candidate for national leadership at the 1938 convention, was on the list for temporary leader but reported to the caucus for a few minutes to have his name taken off. He is a flying officer in the Royal Canadian Air Force and said his service duties would prevent him acting if elected.

When the caucus opened, Dr. Manion, who had called it to pass upon the leadership question, submitted a prepared statement in which he offered his resignation but said it would be his duty to seek a seat in Parliament and continue as leader if his associates believed that course to be in the best interests of the party. He said his personal wish was to retire.

Accepted With Regret

Dr. Manion then withdrew so that the caucus would be free to discuss the situation frankly. The resignation was put aside pending choice of a temporary House leader which occupied the caucus until mid-afternoon when Mr. Hanson's selection was announced.

Mr. MacNicol emerged from the caucus last night with a brief statement that a resolution had been adopted acceding to Dr. Manion's personal wish to retire and accepting his resignation "with deep regret."

In keeping with the secret nature of all party caucuses, no details were given of the voting for temporary leader, and none on the debate concerning Dr. Manion's resignation. Mover and seconder of the resolution of acceptance were not named.

Mr. Hanson, who is a barrister, resident of Fredericton and a native of New Brunswick, is 61 years old. He was a Member of Parliament from 1921 to 1935 when he was defeated with the Bennett Government, and was successful in the elections last March. From November, 1934, to October, 1935, he was Minister of Trade and Commerce.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 14—(CP)—Prices tumbled from the opening on Toronto Exchange today. The second hour brought a moderate rally which was of short duration and renewal of the decline took prices back to their lows of the morning. Turnover expanded to 433,000 shares for the first three hours.

All Industrials weakened, seniors posting losses up to a point or two. The slump kept step with New York.

All Senior Base metals slipped to new lows, some for several years and many of the Golds touched low for the last three years.

Royalite weakened 2 points to 23, its low for some years and Home at 1.70 and Calgary-Edmonton at 1.50 were down.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, May 14—(AP)— Another boiling stock market, mostly on the selling side, today exemplified continuance of pessimism over war developments.

In two heavy selling waves in forenoon leaders were thrown overboard for losses of 1 to 7 or more points. Sporadic attempts were made to rally the list and, here and there, prices were above the lows near the fourth hour with a smattering of plus marks in evidence.

Early liquidation was attributed mainly to indications the Allies are having tough going in Holland and Belgium.

Bonds weakened and commodities were irregularly lower. "Free" sterling improved.

Lack of support for motor stock was depressing, both General Motors and Chrysler being well down from the start. A few aircrafts, rails, coppers and specialties put up a show of resistance.

With the exception of Lake Shore Mines, up 1-2, Canadian issues tumbled in a body. Canadian Pacific, Dome Mines, McIntyre, Hiram Walker and Distillers showed losses of 7-8 of a point and less. Canada 4s, among bonds, were easy.

Prominent on the extension of the slide were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Sears Roebuck, American Telephone, Du Pont, Union Carbide, Westinghouse, Dow Chemical and J. I. Case.

Ahead at one time were American Airlines, United Aircraft, Loft, International Paper, Youngstown Sheet, Great Northern and Southern Railway.

Montreal Buying Helps Butter Prices

Toronto, May 14—Good buying at Montreal was reported as responsible for firmer butter prices on the Toronto open produce market yesterday while egg prices were irregular.

First grade Ontario creamery butter solids sold at a shade higher price in spite of continued quiet local demand. With Western offerings dried up in view of Montreal purchases, available supplies were not heavy here. The Ontario product traded at 23c per pound.

Fresh receipts cleared readily on the egg market, and prices improved in the graded section as they eased slightly in the retail division.

Montreal Produce

BELGIAN GOV'T

"All movements are continuing with methodical order and the future must be regarded with confidence."

No Panic Scene

The waiting lines before bank buildings were one of the few signs of anxiety in this capital. People were preparing to flee the city at short notice. There was no panic.

Memories of the refugee-clogged roads of First Great War days were still fresh in mind here. All were determined—if flight were necessary to leave under the best possible conditions. All were equally determined, however, to abandon their homes rather than live under German orders.

Brussels, completely blacked out, became a theatre for guerilla warnight. Sporadic gunfire was heard fare as Nazi parachutists dropped around the capital during the night. Sporadic gunfire was heard from almost every side. Detailed estimates of the fighting were not available.

Belgian Communique

Brussels, May 14—(AP)— Although resisting "energetically," Belgian advance forces were "compelled to retire" during the night, the Belgian High Command reported today.

A High Command communique said:—

"There have been numerous local engagements at different points of our positions.

"Our troops are resisting energetically the pressure of the enemy's forces.

"During the night advance elements of our troops were compelled to retire."

REPORT FORMAL NOTE IS SENT TO ITALY

Rome, May 14 (CP)—The French government was reported in political circles today to have sent a formal note to Italy. The contents were not disclosed.

BRITISH, FRENCH

Besides Italian flags, the students had one big swastika banner and another with the legend, "Down with the French Republic".

Most of the boys carried clubs, but apparently only for appearances. There was no effort to wield them. Interspersed in the crowd were several hundred school girls, striving to keep up under the burden of their school bags and books.

Il Duce Drives by Bonfire

Several thousand students were halted by a barrier of troops at the British Embassy, as they had been before at the French Embassy. Massing a short distance away, however, they set fire to the "coffin" and threw their clubs on it to make a bonfire.

Before they disbanded, a Fascist official in blackshirt uniform congratulated them on a "magnificent demonstration," told them their cry was "a war cry."

He declared France and Britain must understand that Italy would never remain a prisoner in the Mediterranean.

Premier Mussolini drove by the bonfire on his way home to lunch and was cheered.

In Milan, approximately 5,000 students paraded for more than an hour, cheering Mussolini and Hitler. The demonstrators attempted to reach the French and British consulates, but were turned back by infantry detachments.

Mussolini Appears.

Cheers and shouts for a speech brought Mussolini to the balcony. Willingly he acknowledged the demonstrators' greeting, but he maintained the silence which, he said last week, "only facts" could break.

The students gathered at 8 a.m. far another day of demonstrations against Britain and France. They marched through the streets in a body until they assembled in the East Piezza Venezia under Il Duce's window.

Troops guarded the British and French Embassies for the second day but the students were turned aside by a few police in the streets long before they reached either building.

Column Deflected.

One column of 200 students, carrying a big Italian flag, which headed for the British Consulate in the Piazzi Di Espana shouting "What is England doing?" was deflected into a side street by a lone policeman.

At the same time the British were expected to protest to Italian authorities over the slapping of a Briton identified as the Earl of Hardwicke at a fashionable night club last night by an Italian distributing anti-British leaflets. The incident was said to have occurred when the Earl, a personal friend of Bruno Mussolini, refused to read a leaflet laid on his table by the Italian.

Distribute Folders.

Paper was pasted over signs marking Brussels street. This, however, appeared to be the work of irresponsible persons, since the organized demonstrations have been directed chiefly at Britain and some at France.

More responsible actions appeared to be the distribution of anti-British folders among bus passengers and a handbill campaign.

The patrons of one popular English tea room said they were prevented from taking their customary tea yesterday afternoon by anti-British groups which effectively routed traffic away from the entrance.

Everywhere stories were circulated of street incidents and molestations of British people and their Italian sympathizers.

Most of these reports could not be checked, but various persons reported seeing gangs of young Italians making the rounds of the city on the lookout for persons attempting to tear down anti-British posters.

Dutch Citizens Leave.

Just as large numbers of Scandinavians left Italy at the time of Germany's invasion of Denmark and Norway, many Dutch citizens are reported to be leaving Italy now, some after consulting the Netherlands Legation. A number of them were bound for France.

Various explanations were offered by diplomats to explain these outbursts coming at this time.

Some thought it might be an effort to divert British and French attention to the Mediterranean while Germany smashed into Holland and Belgium. Another suggestion was that it might be a clever effort to whip up Italian feeling by shifting stress from the pro-German to the anti-British angle.

The pro-German feeling desired by some leaders has been slow to catch on among the people.

That the government wanted the demonstrations at this time was likely, since it was widespread publication of Luca Pietromarchi's report to Mussolini on the Allied contraband control and its effect on Italian shipping which touched them off.

TANK BATTLE

Tanks Take Positions.

The German tanks hastily clawed their way off the road and deployed in the fields on either side. In tank warfare it is important to break columns to avoid enfilading fire. For the first great tank battle in history the Germans took positions similar to those worked out for horsemen in centuries of cavalry warfare.

Each tank found its place in a formation that had been studiously worked out in years of manoeuvres. The initial formation is all-important in a tank charge, because in the confusion of battle there is little opportunity to re-form. The German tanks were organized in groups. The orders given to these groups are borrowed from the jargons of chess and geometry.

Meanwhile the anti-tank guns hastily drew into position, the field guns came up and were unlimbered, and the motorcycle scouts scattered to find cover in ditches and behind walls on either side of the highway.

The German preparations were still incomplete, however, when the leading tanks of the opposing French column thundered down the road. The German anti-tank guns opened point blank fire with armor-piercing shells. As more and more French tanks arrived on the battle field, they too swerved into the fields and charged the ranks of the German machines.

It was a bad few minutes for some of the German motorcycle scouts, who were caught near the head of their column and blasted with machine gun bullets and light shells from the leading French tanks.

Charge One Another.

The German tanks likewise gathered speed and the opposing ranks charged at each other, breaking down walls, crumping trees, and destroying everything in their path. Cannon and machine-gun fire added to the din.

In many cases the accident of battle placed little two-man whippet tanks in the path of huge, lumbering 50-ton mastodons. Small tanks were crushed like pygmies, their big adversaries lumbering on unhurt.

The tide of battle quickly began to favor the French, who were led by a Parisian general known throughout the military world as a brilliant specialist in mechanized cavalry. The French tanks attacked furiously and even recklessly. Their drivers soon realized that their armor plate was proof against the heaviest artillery the Germans had on hand and the battle settled down to a series of "dogfights" with tank challenging tank.

Reinforcements occasionally arrived from either side and sped to the aid of their hardest pressed comrades. The field was soon dotted with overturned, burnt-out hulks.

Evolve Special Tactics.

As they fought, the crews began to evolve special tactics for their new kind of warfare—tactics that could be learned only on the battle field and not in manoeuvres. At a range of a few yards, machine-gunners tried to place bursts through the small enemy peep holes. Although a very heavy tank could in most cases crush a light one, it was found that a medium tank could ram one of the biggest from a certain angle on the flank and crush in its sides, or at least rock it on its treads.

Since only advancing forces of both armies were involved, there was no infantry to come on the field and exploit the French victory. The battle slowly died down except for sporadic clashes between far-flung tank patrols and intermittent fire from the few remaining anti-tank guns.

Despite the absence of infantry to follow through, the French commanders were jubilant. The battle was decisive. The German Panzerdivisionen was stopped, and the French tanks had proved superior.

HUGE PETROLEUM

The commander-in-chief said the government left Holland in view of its duties to the entire kingdom, including the Dutch overseas possessions, and could carry on as well in London as in The Hague.

The communique summed up the military situation as follows:

"In the northern provinces the enemy has established himself. An attempt to force the Djsselmeer dyke has failed up to now.

"The northern part of Rotterdam is firmly in our hands.

"The field army retreated last night and now holds our well-known new Dutch waterline.

"The position of Den Helder (the North Sea Naval Base) is intact.

"The situation in Brabant is uncertain.

"The province of Zeeland is firmly in our hands.

"Our air defence remains, notwithstanding heavy losses, very active.

"The struggle is heavy. However, it is worth our while. Our independent national existence, which we won centuries ago under the leadership of the Oranges, is at stake. Long live her Majesty the Queen! Long live our native country."

(In London, authorities attached to the Netherlands legation said there had not been a single instance of failure in the Netherlands inundation defences.

("The only trouble we experienced," said one official, "was the parachute troops."

(Asked if the huge Zuider Zee dam would be blown up if necessary, he said: If it is "necessary for the defence of the country you may say it definitely will be blown up.")

LARGE PORTION

German troops were reported to be widening breaches despite fierce resistance, but acknowledged that some of the outer forts ringing the city of Liege still were holding out.

(The Belgians admitted one was taken two days ago.)

This movement was claimed to have been executed by swift-moving armored forces which were said to have swept westward from a point south of the border city of Arnheim and established contact with Nazi parachute troops landed at Rotterdam in the first day of fighting.

(The Dutch said only that the Germans had penetrated to Dordrecht, about 12 miles south of Rotterdam, and had passed the nearby Moerdijk Bridge, important western link between north and south Holland. It is not known whether the bridge is still intact.)

Nazi Air Force Helps

The German News Agency said the Nazi air force had played a major part in this manoeuvre by supplying the parachute troops at Rotterdam with munitions which made it possible for them to hold their positions until contact could be established with mechanized ground units.

The news agency said that about 18,000 Dutch soldiers, including a General and his entire staff, had been captured in recent fighting.

(There were no such reports at Amsterdam or elsewhere.)

German official sources shed no light on the nature of the "secret weapon" which earlier was asserted to have enabled a small number of men to capture the powerful Belgian fortress of Eban Emael, near Liege.

Some observers speculated, however, that the "secret weapon" might be a reference to the use of parachute troops—a theory that was strengthened when D.N.B. identified as members of a parachutist regiment eight officers decorated for the Eben Emael exploit.

(Parachute troops have been trained for years in Russia.)

Continued action on the Westwall front was reported in the sector southeast of Zweibrucken, opposite the French Province of Lorraine.

Concerning developments in Norway, D.N.B. said German mountain troops had taken 300 prisoners, mostly British, in a fight at Mo, north of Trondheim.

(There was no confirmation of this in London but Reuters News Agency quoted the Norwegian High Command as announcing fresh British landings.)

Insurance Men See Four Deer and Bear on Highway

Bancroft —(Special)— Mr. Lorne McDougall of Belleville accompanied by two other insurance men and Mr. W. E. Wiggins, Bancroft representative, have spent the last two days calling on the various lumber concern. The motor tour included W. L. ## CITY PURCHASES MUNICIPAL BONDS WORTH $50,000

Surplus of Sinking Funds Used to Reduce Debenture Debt of City

BY-LAWS PASSED

Delegation Appears Complaining of Noise of Transports on West Bridge St. and Highland Avenue

In answer to an inquiry from Alderman Ormond Butler as to the state of the Debenture debt account of the Corporation, Alderman McLean Haig, chairman the executive gave a detailed account to the members of the council at their regular session held on Monday evening and announced that the city had purchased $50,000 worth of city bonds out of the Sinking Fund account. "I would like to say" said Ald. Haig, "the market took a very bad turn on Monday and there was actually no bid for Dominion of Canada bonds at one time in the session. Unfortunately the Treasurer and myself do not see eye to eye with respect to the method to pursue with the Sinking Fund account for I believe we should buy up our own bonds to the limits to which the Municipal Board will allow us to proceed but I don't feel like taking the full responsibility of this matter and would welcome the opinion of any member of the council on the question."

Mayor Agrees With Chairman

Mayor Thompson stated that he was of the opinion, that if the city had a surplus in the sinking fund, that was only drawing one and one-half per cent in the bank we should not be paying six and one-half per cent on some debentures. "We would not do that in our own business," said Mayor Thompson. "I think we should buy our own bonds to the limits allowed by the Municipal Board," said His Worship. Ald. Haig explained there was a large surplus in the Sinking Fund account in the bank and there was a possibility that the rate of interest might be lowered. Mayor Thompson interjected "that the bank might be charging us some day for keeping money in the bank instead of paying interest on it."

Delegation Heard

A large delegation from West Bridge Street and Highland Avenue headed by Dr. W. C. Morgan, R. A. Backus, George Bonisteel and H. B. Fetterly appeared before the council asking that something be done to alleviate the excessive noise on West Bridge Street caused by the heavy traffic of transports over that thoroughfare and suggesting that transports be rerouted over the Dundas hill near the Bay Bridge Road. Dr. Morgan stated that the noise was so bad, that it was impossible for residents in that vicinity to get any sleep. He stated that the transports speeded up on lower West Bridge street to get a run at Murney Hill and half-way up had to change gear with a great deal of noise and in the winter time they were forced to stop and then more transports arrived to assist only adding to the noise and confusion. The speaker also stated that tourist homes along this route were losing business because tourists could not stand the noise. He also stated that when transports were proceeding toward the down town section, they cut their motors off and a succession of back-fires were the result and these in the dead of night were not very comforting. Dr. Morgan asked that the grade be lowered on the West Dundas Hill and that all transports be made to go that way. Mr. Fetterly, Mr. Backus and Mr. Bonisteel all spoke along the same lines only the residents along Highland Avenue stated that speeding was the chief complaint along the upper sections. Mayor Thompson accepted the petition as presented and told the delegation that the matter would be thoroughly discussed in committee and every effort made to relieve the situation.

Wants Action on Smoke By-Law

Another spokesman appeared before the council asking what action had been taken with regards to the smoke by-law that was recently passed by the council. Mayor Thompson stated he would take the matter up with the Police Commission. A committee composed of Aldermen Rollins, Butler, Pringle and Logan was appointed to act with Alderman Armstrong relative to the proposed development along east side of Moira River. A number of Royal Acorns have been received and permission has been granted to use the lot at the upper end of Church Street and when the saplings are matured they will be transplanted in other parts of the city. Mayor Thompson told the members that of the trees planted last year, sixty per cent were still alive and in a healthy condition and that the dead trees will be replaced by new ones at the first opportunity.

Hose is Purchased

The city purchased 200 feet of hose at a price of $1.35 a foot also paint to mark the traffic lanes in the city. A number of by-laws were passed through the various stages. Deeds were conveyed to W. H. Cater, Simeon Fox and W. O. Waldorf, while a lease was acknowledged between James Woodley and the Corporation. Joseph Waddell was appointed as an official weigher of cheese to be paid by the Belleville Cheese Board and his duties to be determined by the same body. The by-law appointing Jack Roblin as city clock inspector was repealed.

Ex-Alderman Thomas Cushing was appointed to the Parks Board to fill the unexpired term of Richard Snell, who died a few weeks ago. A by-law to licence victualling houses was passed the licence fee to be $2.00. These houses will now be subject to police and health inspection at anytime. A by-law to regulate and govern the Belleville Fire Department was also passed and all other by-laws pertaining to the Fire Department were repealed.

Recommendations Ratified

At the committee meet of Thursday night a number of recommendations passed at that time were ratified by the council at their regular session, Monday evening. The council approved the placing of a light on a pole installed at the northeast corner of Victoria Avenue and Pinnacle Street.

Tenders will be called for a 1 1-2 ton and a 2-ton chassis for the Belleville Fire Department with windshield and no cab. The price will include heavy duty six ply tires with dual wheels on rear spare tire and carrier painted and lettered same as present Belleville Fire Department equipment, less allowance for trade-in of present chassis, also prices on chassis with running boards and rear fenders and without running boards and rear fenders.

The offer of Mr. T. H. Boyle and Mrs. Boyle of $35 for part of gore lot on south side of Olive Street was accepted under the usual condition of building thereon a house within twelve months and that the balance be deeded to owner by quit Claims Deed.

The old brick and wooden shed at the rear of the McCarthy property at the southwest corner of Bridge and William Streets will be torn down under supervision of the city engineer and at no expense to the city. Permission was granted the E. L. Rudy Company to erect a sign opposite Albert College at a rental to the city of $25 per year.

SUBALTERN MEMBERS OF ARGYLL REGIMENT ATTEND EXERCISES

Subaltern members of the Argyll Light Infantry (tank) Regiment here had a realistic touch of war over the week-end when they took part in an outdoor tactical scheme on a farm six miles north of Cobourg, which was attended by outstanding military officers besides sixty junior officers of the regiments of the district.

A completely equipped platoon of the Royal Canadian Regiment, Toronto, armed with Bren guns, anti-tank rifles and ordinary rifles, gave a demonstration of a patrol scheme, advancing along bridges, hedges, and taking up positions in a sham battle to the accompaniment of the crackle of rifle fire.

The officers were in charge of Major G. C. McCullough, G.S.O., M.D. 3. Brigadier-General Boak, Officer Commanding this district was also present. Tactics lasted from 8:30 a.m. Sunday until 6 p.m.

BLACK WOODCHUCK SHOT IN FRONTENAC

Another novelty in animal colors has been preserved for the Queen's University, Kingston, museum. It is a black-furred woodchuck, shot by Dr. N. E. Berry in the northern part of Frontenac County. Usually of a reddish brown color, a black woodchuck is considered very rare. Last summer an albino woodchuck was presented to the museum. This albino is considered even rarer than the black variety.

AT THE McCARTHY

"SLIGHTLY HONORABLE"

As funny a picture as ever was made, headed by an all star cast, Walter Wanger's "Slightly Honorable", a streamlined story of society scandal, is now the current feature attraction at the McCarthy Theatre.

Pat O'Brien, Edward Arnold, Broderick Crawford and Ruth Terry, the new Wanger discovery who is known in Hollywood as "little cupcake", receive top billing in the excellent cast. Other important roles are handled by such outstanding players as Alan Dinehart, Claire Dodd, Phyllis Brooks, Eve Arden, Douglas Dumbrille and Bernard Nedell. Miss Terry, who is only nineteen years old and previously made a name for herself as a night-club entertainer, presents an eye-filling picture of an alluring and vivacious cafe dancer. In this, her first major role, the slim brunette proves herself a little lady who knows her histrionics as well as her singing and dancing.

Pat O'Brien, as the attorney who does the racket-busting, turns in one of the most moving and vivid portrayals of his career. Tay Garnett, who produced and directed "Slightly Honorable", from a script by Ken Englund, staged the production with plenty of excitement and suspense and with plenty of the accent on the romance and comedy in the story.

Briefly, the tale of "Slightly Honorable" revolves around civic corruption, scandal in high places and a series of startling crimes. Pat O'Brien, as John Webb, a prominent attorney, undertakes to clean up his state and pits himself against the machine run by Edward Arnold, portraying Vincent Cushing. A thrilling climax, packed with punch and surprise, reveals the suave culprit and makes "Slightly Honorable" a "must" on your picture list.

Flash News Events

Important, almost up to the present day's happenings on the war fronts and other timely and interesting newsreel flashes are also now showing in the Fox Movietone News offering at the McCarthy Theatre, in addition to an amusing all-star comedy "Small Town Idol" and a musical treat featuring Dave Apollon and his radio band

Little Benny's Note Book

I was starting to take a walk with pop for his health, and Lucky Leroy Shooster was in front of his house with his sprained ankle doing all kinds of tricks on his crutches for Mary Watkins and Maud Jonson, and I said, How about that for a lucky guy, pop, he didn't have to go to school for 2 days and he has a swell time with his crutches and he wont even leave anybody elts try them long enough to get good on them. Some guys have all the luck, he's always finding money, I said.

Nobody can have all of anything, pop said. There's such a thing in this life as compensation, he said, and I said, How do you mean?

Well, for instants if Leroy has such a spectacular run of luck when he's young, he'll proberly have very little or none at all when he gets older, because by that time his luck mal all be exhawsted through over exploitation, pop said. After he gets into long trousers I shouldn't be surprised if he never finds another cent, and the lady in the candy store will even give him stale chocolates for the money he earns by hard errands, he said, and I said, Well how about me, I dont hardly have any luck now.

Exactly, pop said. Compensation will work just teh other way in your case. Just at present you may spend whole months without finding a single penny, but when you're about 30 you may have a sudden idea in an idle moment, such as an idea to improve the human race by the invention of a sauce combining all the best features of mustard, horse reddish and ketchup, and that brief thought will bring you in millions of dollers, he said, and I said, Only I've got a long way to go before I'm 30.

Your compensation may set in even earlier, pop said. You may lose all your hair before you've reached 18, thus making you the youngest completely bald man in the country and the constant centre of attention, he said, and I said, G, that would be fun, and pop said, Now do you feel more sattisfied with life? and I said, Sure.

Wich I did.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Heaven With a Barbed Wire Fence"

"Heaven with a Barbed Wire Fence" the 20th Century-Fox film which is now playing at the Capitol Theatre, is a picture that fills an important void in the screen's treatment of modern youth and its problems. An excellent, entertaining production, this film is a story of a hitch-hike girl and a boy on the road. All of us have heard of youngsters like these; here is the opportunity to roam with them and discover just what they are like Jean Rogers, Raymond Walburn, Marjorie Rambeau, Glenn Ford and Nicholas Conte are featured in the cast. Ricardo Cortez directed, with Sol M. Wurtzel executive producer.

Also on the same programme,

"Devil Is Driving"

Dynamic in its dramatic force and thrilling in a spectacular way, "The Devil is Driving" with Richard Dix as the star.

Dix, as usual, gives one of the finest performances of his career as the young lawyer who perjures testimony in defense of a wealthy young wastrel charged with manslaughter. He wins acquittal for the drunken driver but eventually has cause to regret it. This situation develops when Dix is elected district attorney and finds himself faced with the job of prosecuting the very same boy for killing a girl in another motor accident.

When the defense uses the same tactics of corruption and collusion practiced by himself as a defending attorney, Dix solves the problem by baring the entire history of the previous trial, admitting the perjury and accepting his disbarment as an attorney.

Lovely Joan Perry, playing a newspaper reporter, appears opposite Dix and supplies a very competent love interest. Elisha Cook, Jr. as the reckless youth, gives a sterling performance. Others in a well chosen cast are Frank C. Wilson, Henry Kolker, Ann Rutherford, Nana Bryant. Walter Kingsford, Paul Harvey, John Wray and George Cooper. Harry Lachman is responsible for a fine job of direction, ably aided in his task by a workmanlike script prepared by Jo Milward and Richard Blake.

AT THE BELLE

"Vigil in the Night"

A mutual consecration to the science of healing establishes the bond between a nurse and a surgeon and motivates the romantic interest in "Vigil in the Night", next at the Belle Theatre. Powerful drama in this A. J. Cronin story also revolves around the stirring events that befall the nurse when she shoulders the blame for the criminal negligence of her sister, who is a student nurse.

Carole Lombard, Brian Aherne and Anne Shirley, teamed for the first time in a picture, are starred in the leading roles, which call for particularly vivid and forceful delineation.

The stars are supported by Julien Mitchell as a wealthy politician whose greed cripples hospital's efficiency, Robert Coote as a doctor, Brenda Forbes, Rita Page, Emily Fitzroy and Ethel Griffies as nurses and Peter Cushing as the hysterical husband of the nurse who gave her life to right a mistake.

George Stevens produced and directed "Vigil in the Night," which is an adaptation by Fred Guiol, P. J. Wolfson and Rowland Leigh of an A. J. Cronin novel.

Joe Penner, Funny

An hilarious comedy of errors in which a girl-shy young man believes a group of dazzling dolls are old women with their faces lifted, and the comely cuties think the shy fellow is a notorious glamour boy, is told in Joe Penner's current film, "Millionaire Playboy," announced as the added comedy feature.

Most of the amusing action takes place at a mountain resort where Joe, as the timid youth, is taken to be cured of his strange affliction—hiccuping whenever a girl kisses him.

With all concerned laboring under certain illusions, a riot of fun is said to result from the unique situation in this RKO Radio film.

"Virginia City"

There are thrills and excitement a-plenty at the Belle Theatre, where the stirring Warner Bros. film, "Virginia City" is now playing at the Belle.

Errol Flynn as a tough, two-fisted adventurer is said to have surpassed even his success in "Dodge City," and a new, vivid Miriam Hopkins is revealed in the part of a dancing, fighting spitfire.

Humphrey Bogart, Frank McHugh, Alan Hale and Guinn "Big Boy" Williams all give excellent performances in the supporting roles. The original screen story was written by Robert Buckner and directed by that popular director of many impressive films — Michael Curtiz.

A thrilling story of an unwritten chapter in the history of the Old West — "Virginia City" will make a top rating on the long list of great Warner films.

The Belle News of the Hour is on the same program.

RUBBER AND TIN RESOURCES OPEN TO THE ALLIES

On Other Side Britain Loses Opportunity to Import Dairy Products

METAL IN CARS

London, May 14 — (CP) — By gaining Belgium and The Netherlands as Allies Britain and France have automatically acquired full access to the Low Countries' vast colonial resources of rubber and tin, economic quarters pointed out here today.

On the verse side of the ledge, they noted, is the new blow dealt to Britain's opportunities for importing dairy products. In 1939, Britain bought about $30,000,000 worth of such produce from Holland alone.

With German occupation of Denmark, one source of dairy foods had already been closed to the United Kingdom. Measures were taken to remedy this deficit by increasing daily imports from the colonies and dominions, but it is questionable, economic experts admitted, whether the latest development can be similarly solved. They suggested that the government might have to resort to more stringent rationing in the near future to make up for the loss of Dutch dairy supplies.

Little Metal Plumber for Nazis

Another question being asked here was whether the Germans would find metal plunder in the Low Countries territories they are occupying. The answer to this, informed quarters said, is negative.

It was understood Holland and Belgium were holding about 3,500 and 2,000 tons of tin, respectively, within their national boundaries at the moment they were invaded. Most of these stocks, however, had for some time been locked in freightcars on railway sidings as a precaution against just what actually happened. With the first word that the Nazi attack had begun, the tin was speeded to places of safety.

Belgian smelters were known to have extensive reserves of copper, but the main stocks were on deposit abroad when the invasion came.

As to Dutch and Belgian gold reserves, these have either already been dispatched to France and Britain or will be in the very near future, it was authoritatively reported.

4 Bombs Explode, Outrage in Belfast Blamed on I.R.A.

Belfast, May 14 (CP)—Four bombs believed set by Irish Republican army terrorists exploded early today in Belfast, all in strongly Nationalist areas of this northern Ireland capital.

A number or shop fronts were damaged, but no casualties were reported. The bombings were believed directed against newspaper dealers who recently had been warned against selling the Irish Press, owned by Prime Minister Eamon De Valera of Eire.

The Irish Press incurred Nationalist enmity by publishing stories regarding the I.R.A. hunger strikers at Dublin. The newspaper's circulation trucks have been burned on two occasions in Northern Ireland within the past two months.

Area in Which Present Battle Is Being Fought Has Seen Much Bloodshed in the Past

(By Guy Rhodes Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Vast mechanized armies of the Allies and Germany faced each other today in a furious battle along a 120-mile front in a land soaked with blood through centuries. A long fight was expected, resulting in a decision that may turn the tide of the war.

Along the Meuse River from Liege to Namur, across the French frontier to Sedan and eastward to the Luxembourg border the armies met. The action started yesterday when more than 1,000 tanks fought over a plain, raising dust that was seen for miles. Overhead roared great flights of aircraft bombing and strafing the troops below.

In this land centuries ago the Christians beat Attila the Hun in 1812 Wellington and Bleucher ended the 100 days of Napoleon. Before Sedan in 1871 the grey forces of Bismark's Germany vanquished the French of Napoleon III, laid open the road to Paris and finished the third French Empire.

Allies Choose Battle Line

With the Allies lay one important advance. They chose the battle line. Already the French were said to have inflicted terrific punishment on the Germans in yesterday's tank battle near Tongres, a battle said to have demonstrated the superiority of the French land ships.

Northward, however, the Dutch appeared in considerable peril as Germans advanced into their country despite flooding and furious resistance from the little kingdom's army.

The German objective in that area was believed to be the coast—airports from which Hitler's men would try to carry their aerial blitzkrieg to Britain. The United Kingdom laid plans for a home defence force to be armed with rifles and machine guns to guard against landing of parachute troops.

In Belgium parachutists received rough treatment at the hands of civilians who beat them to death whenever they caught them. The French estimated the Germans are in Belgium.

In the Mediterranean huge Allied naval forces were anchored off Alexandria, Egypt, while organized anti-Allied demonstrations, including the burning of a French and British flag, continued in Italy.

Purpose of the demonstrations was not quite clear.

It was said in Rome that the Italian government's efforts to arouse friendly feelings among the people toward Germany has been futile and it was suggested that the administration had switched its tactics to build up hatred for the Allies rather than love for a little-trusted axis partner.

German Attacks Fail To Breach Belgian Lines

Belgian Premier Pierlot Declares No Parachutists Have Descended on Brussels in Last Two Days

CABINET TO REMAIN

Open Cities and Military Objectives Are Reported Attacked by 6,000 to 7,000 Nazi Planes

Brussels, May 14 (C.P.-Havas)—Despite violent attacks today "the enemy has not succeeded in breaking our lines," Premier Hubert Pierlot announced.

The premier said the situation is "normal" and that no parachutists have descended on Brussels in the last two days.

"Yesterday," the Premier said in a speech to the nation, "fairly numerous attacks were loosed by the enemy in several sectors of the front.

"Our troops, who have adapted themselves to the new technique of fighting, resisted admirably and at the end of the day retained all their positions.

"Since then certain modifications have taken place in conformity of the plan of the army high command."

Today, he went on, "several attacks were launched by the enemy," but the Belgian lines held.

"The situation is developing normally."

Belgian Cabinet to Remain in Capital

The cabinet announced it would remain in the capital—The goal of a German army driving westward from the Liege area.

Men from 16 to 35 years old who belong to the last group of recruitable reserves were called to the colors.

The following communique was issued at noon by the Belgian command:

"Numerous local engagements took place along various sectors of our positions. Our troops energetically resisted the pressure of enemy attacks. During the night certain of our advance elements fell back."

(Charles Morice, military commentator of the newspaper Petit Parisien in Paris said that the Belgian cities of Liege, Namur and Dinant, running from north to south in eastern Belgium, and Sedan, in northeastern France outside the Maginot Line, "seem to have been reached by the enemy.")

Canadian Legation Staff In Holland Arrives Safely in England

(By D. E. Burritt, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 14—(CP-Cable)—Weary and with only the clothes they were wearing, the staff of the Canadian Legation in The Netherlands reached a haven of safety in England today after days of anxiety in nerve-wracking warfare carried on almost on their doorsteps.

The party—D. Kenneth P. Kirkwood, Second Secretary, J. A. Langley, Commercial Attache and Mrs. Langley and W. G. Stark, Assistant Commercial Attache—arrived in one of three British warships which slipped out of Dutch waters at dusk last night at the height of a bombing raid by five German planes attempting to disrupt all shipping in the Port of Rotterdam.

Despite the fact they had not slept for nearly four days because of the uncertainty of their safety, the party made light of their experiences and expressed only one desire—sleep and more sleep.

Mr. Kirkwood, a tall, slim veteran of the Canadian Diplomatic Service who served as a pilot in the first Great War and witnessed warfare on more than one occasion in the Orient where he had been for ten years until recently, expressed apologies, but said that because of his position he was unable to discuss his experiences or the details of his flight.

Claims Alcoholic 'Emotionally Sick'

Boston, May 14—(AP)— Sympathy for the alcoholic, instead of family censure, was urged today by a Boston psychiatrist and researcher in alcoholism at Boston City Hospital.

Declaring the ma nwho drinks too much is "not a normal man" but one who is "emotionally sick, and needs help and treatment like any other sick person," Dr. Merrill Moore said in a radio address sponsored by the Massachusetts Medical Society:

"The first step is for the patient's family to try to realize that the alcoholic needs help and sympathy rather than scolding and nagging."

Destruction of Choke-Cherry Trees Would Aid Orchard Owners To Fight Tent Caterpillar Pest

The return of the spraying season is noted by the number of orchard owners who have their spraying equipment out of winter storage and in readiness for the annual fight against scale, fungus, tent caterpillars and other parasites which attack orchards. Although the time of the first spray for scale and fungus has gone past, it is now time for the second or "pre-pink" spray and all during this coming week increased activity will be noted among orchardists as they drench their orchards with suitable spray in an effort to eradicate the injurious insects. This "pre-pink" spray is put on just as the buds break and is the second of numerous sprays which follow at eight to twelve day intervals.

Tent caterpillars are reported in unusual numbers this spring and chokecherry bushes, etc., along the country sideroads and in the fence corners are said to be literally covered with the nests of these insects which later strip the trees of their foliage. Township authorities it is claimed are very slack in permitting these cherry trees to grow along the roads and in fence corners as they are the breeding ground of millions of caterpillars every year which later attack orchards and mature into adult butterflies which deposit eggs ready for another hatch. The complete destruction of all wild cherry trees, etc., where tent caterpillars breed uncontrolled is the only way to rid the country of these pests, it is claimed.

Mystery of 'Stolen' Car Solved by Phone Call

Prominent Business Man Alarmed When He Finds His Locked Car Missing From Parking Place

DAUGHTER HAD KEYS

Everything was serene in the office of a prominent business man yesterday afternoon. Daily routine functioned easily, and no clouds marred the horizon.

Then came disaster. Out of the blue, the blow fell, and the P. B. M. spent a few miserable hours before everything was straightened out.

Complying with the request of a friend to drive him in his car on a business trip a few blocks away, the P. B. M. parked his new car, a gleaming rakish model, outside the city hall on his return.

A few minutes later, emerging from his office his eyes bulged. He loosened his collar. He opened his mouth but no sound came forth. For, where stood the shiny motor but a few minutes previous, there was nothing but an empty space.

Red of face he dashed back to his friend. The friend in turn gasped his surprise. "For the luvamike do something, there was valuable government property in that car," he said.

"Wait," said the P. B. M., feeling in his pockets. "Something must be wrong. I have my keys here." He thought for a moment. "These danged car thieves are slick," he ruminated, "all they have to do is to lift the hood, adjust some gadget and the car starts."

Then an idea entered his head. Turning he dashed for the office of the Provincial Police, and told them the story. Advised to have the 'theft' broadcast he raced to the City Police Station where the details were flashed over the air.

Tremulous with excitement he waited while the city police sergeant told his story to patrolling officers. A full description of the car was given as well as other details.

"Mebbe I'd better let the folks know about this," the P. B. M. thought aloud. Using the police station telephone while police and others stood by, he telephoned his office. Suddenly he shouted aloud. "What was that?" A message was repeated.

A tinge of red crept slowly up from the tonsilar regions of the P. B. M., spreading until his face and neck were almost scarlet. Slowly he replaced the receiver.

"What is it?" someone inquired.

"I guess it's alright," he mumbled. "My daughter has just told me that she was walking down town and saw the car. She has a set of keys for it, so she helped herself, and the blamed thing is now safe at home."

There was a more or less delicate silence in the police station. Officers coughed discreetly. The P. B. M.'s friend smiled. Hands quickly covered timely clearances of official and other throats.

And the P. B. M. still red of countenance, walked out into the afternoon sunlight nursing the opinion that it is not such a bad world after all, even if circumstances at times place one in a decidedly, inconvenient and embarrassing position.

THREE OTTAWANS ARE CONVICTED

Ottawa, May 14 (CP)—An Ontario Supreme Court petit jury today convicted three Ottawa youths of printing and circulating anti-war pamphlets in contravention of the Wartime Defence of Canada regulations.

The accused were Harry Binder, 26, former parliamentary press gallery representative of the Toronto Communist newspaper, The Daily Clarion; Louis Binder, 22, Harry's brother and a former soldier with the Royal Canadian Engineers; and Arthur Roy Saunders, 27, a gold medallist at McGill University and since then an actuarial clerk in the insurance branch of the Dominion Government.

Grand jury indictments upon which they faced trial charge contravention of the Defence of Canada Regulations upon three counts. It was alleged the pamphlets, entitled "withdraw Canada from the war", contained statements or reports likely to or intended to (1) cause disaffection to His Majesty, (2) be prejudicial to recruiting training and administration of His Majesty's forces, and (3) be prejudicial to the safety of the state or the efficient prosecution of the war.

Pickerel Season Opens Wednesday

The annual trek to rivers and lakes where lurks the wily pickerel will be the mecca tomorrow for local Isaak Waltons, for with the rising of the sun governmental restrictions on the capture of this member of the royal fish family will be lifted.

For the past week or ten days enthusiasts have been securing new tackle or repairing last year's "hooks, lines and sinkers" in preparation for the annual Spring onslaught on what one fisherman termed today "the best eatin' of the whole fish family."

Dawn will, in all probability see a general exodus of lovers of the sport, although tonight a number of fishermen will leave for their favorite haunts so as to be "on time."

The quota is eight fish per person per day.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

The battle for the defence of Belgium and Holland nears the end of its first phase which consists of the German advance and the advance of the main British and French forces to meet it.

Both movements are taking place according to carefully worked out plans and timetables. Rarely in history have the commanders of two great armies had eight months to look over a prospective battlefield before deploying their forces upon it.

Since the start of the war the Allies have prepared for the German move and the Germans were preparing for it even before that time. As the Germans are on the offensive the Allies, following methods used in the last war, probably will not attempt to stop them in their tracks.

An offensive by a mechanized army, as by any army, is always more powerful at the start. The first blow is heavy. Then the army must reach further to deliver the second blow and so on until the offensive spends its force and a halt must be made to consolidate the position.

The German aim, of course, is to seize as much of the coast as possible before the offensive loses its force. The British and French undoubtedly have their own plan for stopping the drive and official communiques say the troops are moving to their positions in accordance with their schedule.

Whether the Germans are keeping up to their schedule is uncertain. Unlike the Allies they have to fight to keep up to it as they are opposed by the Dutch and Belgian forces and such advance units of the British and French as were sent forward to give direct aid to the armies of the invaded countries.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

Clutching her lace draperies, Sondra paused for a quick look about, while her eyes adjusted themselves to the darkness. Near-by clumps of shrubbery were black, nebulous shapes. Beyond, the bay bleamed like polished onyx. Overhead, the cupola beam cut a high pathway across the stars.

She had taken a few hurried steps towards the banya when she heard the orchestra sweep into the wild crescendo that heralded Liane's entry and the turning off of the lights inside. Now—

She caught her breath, startled. The cupola beam had winked out. Then she remembered that the beam switch was mounted alongside another one in the dining room. Kemp must have turned the wrong one.

A muffled burst of applause from the house behind her told her that Liane and her torches now held the eyes of all in those darkened rooms. The way was clear for Jean Reynall to slip out from the library.

She paused to listen, but could hear no sound of approaching footsteps. The beam came on again, making the shadows here at the back seem darker by contrast with its seaward-reaching brilliance. She began to tiptoe along the path, looking back, now and then, in the hope of seeing Jean.

Sondra reached the banya and waited. Back of her the darkness of the banya in the alders cut her off from the house, making the spot isolated, eerie in the night.

As seconds passed and Jean Reynall did not come, a sixth sense woke in her, warning her that something was not—quite right. Though her reasoning mind scoffed at that, she began to edge back toward the path that led to the house.

She had reached a spot in front of the banya when she halted, uncertainly. Through a gap in the alders she could see the low door, always securely fastened ever since she could remember, now standing open. Had Jean misunderstood, and gone in there to wait? Impatiently, she moved to the dark opening and stepped across the threshold into hollow blackness that smelled of old wood-smoke and scrubbed planks.

"Jean . . .?" Her voice sounded strange. "It's Sondra . . . are you here?"

She held her breath, listening. Nothing stirred. A peculiar, dead stillness of a place heavily walled and half-buried in earth. She could hear nothing; see nothing; yet . . . the roots of her hair began to tingle. She could . . . feel, could . . . smell—

The next thing she knew she was running madly toward the house, spurred on by blind, unreasoning terror. Her panic carried her round to the front entrance. There, in fumbling haste, she let herself inside and fell back, panting, against the door. The thumping of her heart seemed setting itself to the mad rhythm of the torch-dance music that throbbed insistently through the house.

In the warmth and light of the reception room, she began to be ashamed of her recent, senseless fright. But as her panic subsided, wrath against the unwitting cause of it mounted apace. Jean Reynall! Since his return, every contact between them had left her either angry or humiliated, or both. And tonight the exasperating creature must have misunderstood her hurried directions; must still be waiting for her in the library.

She started briskly for the library door, determined to get him out of the house as quickly as possible. As she did so, the saxophones in the other room soared into a high ululation. Simultaneously, the Thlinget drums burst into a sustained, shuddering thunder, climaxed by a muffled explosion that seemed to make the very floor tremble under Sondra's feet.

She jerked to a startled stop. Then, remembering that this was where Liane touched off the Venetian Fire, she went on, feeling a twinge of regret because she was missing the spectacle.

She tried the knob of the library door, pressing inward as she turned. The door was locked.

Sondra was puzzled for a moment. She had left the door unlocked, and had the key tied to the ribbon about her waist. How had Jean managed to—but, of course. While he waited, he must hage used a passkey to lock himself in against any chance intrusion.

Her own key turned smoothly. She eased the door partly open, wrinkling her nose at the smell of burned powder now drifting about. She took one step inside and stood, peering into the confused darkness.

Sondra reached for the light switch by the door, but her hand froze in mid-air. The blood drained from her body. For there, in the dim band of light that came from the reception room behind her, she saw the prostrate figure of a man, face down on the floor near the roll of soggy carpet.

She recoiled, but stood her ground, her eyes fearfully searching the gloom made strange by shadows of stacked furniture. No sound. No movement. Yet her gaze was drawn and held by the impenetrable blackness cast by the half-open door by which she stood. An indefinable perception of dread seized her; a paralyzing numbness of fear, born of not knowing what it was she feared. Some primal sense told her that behind that door something—someone—was standing. Someone rigid and still, with the stillness of arrested action.

She tried to step back into the lighted reception room, but her feet refused to move.

Then, from behind the door, came a rustle of swift movement. A hand shot out into the band of light, reaching straight for her.

The next instant, the reception room light went out, leaving her drowning in terror and inky blackness.

Sondra screamed, but the sound was lost in the blaze of the orchestra, soaring into the mad finale of Liane's dance. Then the hand fastened on her shoulder with paralyzing strength and hurled her, spinning, through the darkness. Her foot struck the roll of carpet, and she fell.

Half-dazed and terrified, she was trying to rise, when the lights flashed on. She saw the Forest Man, a strange look on his bearded face, standing just inside the door to the reception room. Then Kemp had her in his arms, his voice frantic with anxiety. "You here, Sondra? Are you hurt, darling? What was it—what happened?"

She clung to him, grateful for the safety of his arms. "Oh, I don't know! I came in here—just now. A—a man in the dark—threw me down and ran—I don't know where. But I'm—all right now, Kemp. Please, there's someone—hurt. There on the floor."

The Forest Man spoke. "It's Alexander. Knocked cold." He had turned the youth face-upward and was making a swift examination of his injuries. "A nasty thump on the head, but nothing serious," he announced. "The boy'll be all right in a few minutes." He straightened and stepped back. "Keep an eye on him, Starbuck. I'll take a look around."

Sondra, still shaken, knelt to slip a cushion under Alexander's head. As she did so, her eye caught the gleam of something on the floor directly under the window. She reached out and picked it up.

It was a gold button from the uniform jacket of a American naval officer, with a bit of faded blue cloth still adhering to it. Obviously, it had been torn off. Perhaps in a struggle with Alexander . . . or as someone went out through the window—in haste. . . . Only one man had worn such a uniform here tonight. Her hand closed tightly over the button as her mind recoiled from the possibilities it suggested.

"Good heavens! Look at this!" Kemp's incredulous exclamation startled her. He was standing before the safe, his blond face grim. The tapestry panel, tucked back, revealed the iron door hanging from wrenched hinges. On the floor, directly below, lay a wadded bearskin rug and some scattered papers.

Sondra, dazed with the rapidity of events, could only start speechlessly at the exposed interior of the safe.

"Burglars; Quick, Sondra — look and see whether they got anything of value."

"They couldn't. There are only old records and stu like this—" she picked up a surveyor's map of Sitka from the floor. The thin steel door of the safe's inner compartment was still closed. Sondra pulled it open. Inside were a dozen bulky envelopes bound with rubber bands. "See, Kemp. Just papers. But the robbers didn't bother these at all."

"They probably didn't have time." Kemp peered inside, shaking his head. "What do you make of it, Sondra?"

"I don't—" She checked herself, as memory of the ransacked attic came back to her. "Kemp! I believe someone is searching Echo House for—oh, I don't know what!" Hurriedly she recounted Polena's story of footsteps in the night, and her own discovery of the rummaged chests.

Kemp listened intently. When she had finished, he inquired, "What does Captain O'Moore think of it?"

"I haven't told him anything about it yet. When it came up, the poor dear had enough to worry about in this new row with the Reynalls."

Kemp nodded. "I see, then these prowlings began only after the arrival of—Mmmm . . ." Head bent in thought, he took a few paces up and down the cluttered room, then spoke decisively. "I think you were quite right, not to worry your grandfather needlessly, Sondra. We'll have to inform him about the safe, of course; but since nothing was taken, I see no reason to spoil his happy evening by telling him of it tonight. I'll look about, have a talk with Alexander when he comes to, and then lay all the facts before the captain tomorrow. How's that, darling?"

Sondra nodded assent, her gaze still fixed in bewilderment on the gaping safe. "It seems so—so fantastic!" she exclaimed. "Who on earth would—"

"I've some ideas about that," Kemp said briskly. "But first, let's see how he did it."

He peered closely at the safe door, scraping a thumbnail along the edge. "Yellow soap. And look here!"

He pulled a short length of fine copper wire from under the wadded bearskin. "Annunciator wire. Hm-m-m. . . . A little nitroglycerine around the joint of the safe door . . . and the bearskin to muffle the explosion. . . . A tiny spark-coil and a big flashlight would serve very well to set off the charge—at the exact moment when the noise would best be covered by the finale of the music in the next room. By George! Whoever—"

"Miss Sondra!" They both turned to see Alexander sitting up, dazedly rubbing the side of his head. Sondra was at his side in an instant. "Are you all right, Alexander?"

"I'm okay, but—"

Kemp bent over the youth, his voice sharp with leashed excitement. "Do you know the man who struck you? Could you see him?"

"No—couldn't see." Alexander was making an obvious effort to collect his wits. "I think I hear some queer noise in library, just after Miss Liane's dance begins. I use my passkey and slip in quick, through the door from drawing room. I shut the door, so I can switch on lights. Then I see somebody with flashlight, standing by the safe. The flashlight goes out, and—and then—" he grinned uncertainly—"then I go out, too! That's all I know—until just now."

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

The Forest Man came in through the reception room door, closing it after him. "No luck," he announced. "Searched the house, and the grounds; but learned nothing of our prowler, save the manner of his exit—through the window yonder. Rosebush underneath is crushed and broken. Someone in a hurry landed there in a heap."

Involuntarily, Sondra's eyes moved to the spot under the window where she had picked up the gold button that was now burning her palm.

"Look at the safe, Winthrop," suggested Kemp.

"I saw it—and smelled it—before I left. Nitroglycerine. You've examined it?"

"Yes. Whoever cracked it was clever. Came prepared to take full advantage of Liane's torch-dance and the explosion of the Venetian Fire."

"Who, besides yourselves, knew all the details of that dance?"

Kemp shrugged. "Half the town, perhaps. I've no idea how many persons Liane told about it."

But into Sondra's mind flashed the name of one person whom Liane undoubtedly had told about it. Jean Reynall. He himself had said so, as they danced together. Her fingers tightened on the button, while she swiftly revolved the incidents following Reynall's appearance at the party: His insistence that she meet him at the banya; his failure to keep that appointment; the library door locked against chance intrusion. And, most damning of all, the button from his uniform. Had he schemed to get her out of the house to—

"Sondra!" The Forest Man broke in on her thoughts. "You're positive there was nothing of value in the safe?"

"Absolutely nothing." But the words were hardly out when she recalled that the safe held one thing of value, of great value, to Jean Reynall. The Bates contract. Was it still there?

She longed to know the answer, but shrank from learning it while under the eyes of her two companions.

A second burst of applause from the next room brought them all to startled realization that Liane was completing her encore. "Lord!" gasped Kemp. "They'll be yelling for lights in a minute!"

Alexander rose, grinning. "All right. Let's go."

"Just one thing." Kemp spoke hastily. "We're all agreed that we say nothing about this to anyone, tonight. Right?"

Alexander acquiesced at once. The Forest Man, after a slight hesitation also nodded; and the three men started toward the drawing-room door. Sondra, her mind on the Bates contract, would have lingered, but Kemp caught her arm.

"You must be present when the lights go up," he said. "All your guests will be wanting to congratulate you on the show."

"That's right, Sondra," the Forest Man agreed. "Go along in. Just leave me your key and I'll lock up here."

The lights came on. The guests, still applauding, surged forward to the platform to congratulate Liane. She stood to receive them, smiling, arrogant, and savagely beautiful in her war bonnet and girdle of beads.

The long, shrill blast of a boat's whistle plunged the room into sudden silence. Another, and then another whistle joined the first, until the waterfront rang to a bedlam of prolonged shrieks. There was a concerted rush to the open windows facing the bay. Someone shouted, "That looks like the Tanya tearing in!"

Then, through the night, came the foghorn bellow of Chris Sandvik, "The run is on! Five square miles of herring flipping off the entrance to Whale Bay!"

A cheer broke from the men and women crowding each other for a view from the windows. "The run! The run is on!" And in a flash the rooms at Echo House became a milling confusion of hoop skirts and flying coat-tails and hasty good-bys.

The house was nearly empty of the throng when Sondra heard her grandfather roaring. "Alexander! Where in Tophet is that boy? Sondy! Sondy, come here!"

She ran in to him. "Step lively, gurl! Get some of the men here to carry me down to the float. The Tanya leaves in twenty minutes. Step lively, damn it!"

"But—darling! You're not going out on a trawler with your leg in a cast! You can't—"

"Like blazes I can't! I'm fed bilge-full with this sit-by-the-fire business. I'm going out and see my boys fill their nets. Don't stand there staring like—"

"If you go, Dynamite O'Moore, I'm going, too," declared Sondra.

"And if you go, Sondra," cried Liane, darting from the window, "I'm going with you."

The captain lifted his eyebrows. "They say a woman's a hoodoo aboard ship on the first day of the run. But, by the horn-billed jeezwax, with a pair as good-lookin' as you, I'll back the O'Moore luck against a hatchful of hoodoos. Get goin', me harlin's. Get goin'!"

x x x

The Tanya, flagship of the O'Moore herring fleet, waited at the float, her trim seventy-foot length vibrating to the turn-over of a throttled engine.

Sondra, on the afterdeck, was savoring the peculiar exhilaration of the moment. This was Alaska. This was home. No other land offered such contrasting ways of life; such stimulus of adventure always in the offing.

Besides her on the main hatch, flanked by his crutches sat her grandfather; master's cap at a devil-may-care angle on his white head, pea-jacket buttoned over the uniform he had worn at his birthday party. He was jovially complimenting Liane on her outing costume.

"In beads or blue serge, Dark-and-Devilish, ye're a menace to masculine self-control."

Chris Sandvik leaped aboard, stopped short, and glared at the two girls. "Cap'n, you're not taking them with us—on our first trip of the season?"

Liane, smugly flippant, drawled, "Yes, my vegetable love. He certainly is!"

Chris ignored her. "Cap'n!" he bleated. "You know a woman's bad luck on a fish-boat. But two women! We might as well shove off with a bilge full of gas and all hands playing with firecrackers."

"Sure, now, skipper," Dynamite's tone was beguilely diplomatic. "Tis your ship, and be it far from me to say who shall come aboard. But with meself hove down and dismantled, Chris dear, I had a great wish for Sondy, here, to come along and look after me poor old hull."

Chris shoved his cap to the back of his head and eyed his employer suspiciously. "Huh! All right," he assented. "But she—" He jerked a thumb toward Liane. "She goes ashore. Beat it, Miss Bootrin. I'm casting off."

"Miss Bootrin, he calls me! And we went to school together. "Oh, Chri-i-i-s!" Liane's voice ran the gamut from hurt astonishment to tenderest reproach. She caught his hand. The big fellow, truculent yet shrinking, started backing away, while Liane followed, pleading. "Don't be a meanie, just because you're grown up into a big, handsome fleet captain. I just want to watch you do it, Chris. I won't bother you—honest." She had him backed against the turntable now, further retreat cut off. "Please, Chris!" Her uplifted melting gaze was scarcely a foot from his drawn-back chin. "Let me come along."

"I—uh—awh, well! Stay, if you want to." He wrenched himself free, and bolted forward to the pilot house. "But keep clear of me!" he barked back over his shoulder as he disappeared inside.

Liane flipped one hand in an airy gesture. "The tougher they are, the harder they fall. And do I love 'em when they're brutal!" Her triumphant laugh was lost in a jangle of engine room bells and the blast of the whistle, as the Tanya, gathering speed, slipped out into the clear darkness of the channel.

Captain O'Moore had been helped forward to the pilothouse, and the two girls were alone on the dark afterdeck.

Liane, flat on her back across the hatch, lazily blew cigarette smoke from her rounded lips. "Imagine, Sondra, hanging a moon like that over a sea like this, and then neglecting to drop a suitable man into the picture."

When Sondra made no reply, she went on, slowly and consideringly, "You know, there's something wild and free and careless about this sort of life. I think I could go for it—in smallish doses. . . . Even to being a fisherman's bride—if the fisherman were a chap like Kemp Starbuck . . . or, better still, Jean Reynall. By the way, why wasn't Jean at the party tonight? I thought the Reynalls and the O'Moores had buried the hatchet."

"On the contrary, the Reynalls have now forced us into a fish war. I get boiling mad, every time I think of the underhand way they have acted. First, before showing up here with the Glory, they slyly got an option on our season's catch. But Dynamite got out of that. Then they raked up our year-old contract with Bates. Jean Reynall knows that Bates contract was meant to apply only to last year's fishing. He admits it. But now, through a technicality in the wording of it, he threatens to make Dynamite give him all our catch for the next three weeks. Nice, ethical person."

"Business is business, darling. If Jean has that Bates contract—"

"He hasn't! What's more, he'll never get it, if I can help it. Just now, I've got it tucked inside my sweater. Jean Reynall would like nothing better than to lay hands on that contract; and, as you may know, in a fish fight there are no rules of fair play."

"'No rules of fari play'," repeated Liane, with a laugh. "Well, if you ask me, you're all crazy. Both sides will be so busy fighting, neither will get any fish."

"The O'Moores will," declared Sondra confidently. "And in the end we'll get the Glory, too. Dynamite never yet lost a fight and I'm here to help him win this one."

Liane sat up. "So that's where you stand! Somehow, I doubt it, old dear. If Jean hasn't got you grabbing at your slipping family loyalty, then I don't know much about gals."

"I have nothing but contempt for Jean Reynall."

"Fine—if true! As for me, if I had anything Jean wanted, he could have it. And if I didn't have it, I'd try to get it. But that just shows the difference in our temperaments, darling."

Sondra was silent. Liane came to her feet with the grace of a lazy cat, and stood facing westward. Far out lay the low, dim mass of St. Lazaria, the haunted lava island of the Thlingets.

Liane said, "Katlean tells me St. Lazaria is putting on a new 'haunt' this year. A big ghost-ship that slips through the fog like a hunting wolf."

"I've heard of it," Sondra laughed sheptically. "No doubt it's the ghost of the old Russian frigate that was wrecked off there, a century ago."

"Just the same, the Forest Man must take some stock in the story. He was asking Katlean about it; and I understand he's been out there lately, looking around."

"If he has, he probably went looking for timber, not ghosts," replied Sondra.

"Timber! On St. Lazaria! Nonsense. There's none there. Only a lot of lava caves and pillars, so Katlean says. Guess I'll breeze into the pilothouse and devil Chris for a while."

Justice Chevrier Declares Canadian Communist Party 'An Illegal Organization'

Judge's Decision Comes After He Sentenced Three Ottawans Convicted of Publishing and Circulating Anti-War Pamphlets

ALL SENT TO PRISON

Ottawa, May 15 (CP).—Communism became beyond the pale of the law throughout Canada today, but there was no indication of an immediate roundup of known Communists.

Under the broad powers of the Wartime Defence of Canada Regulations, Mr. Justice E. R. E. Chevrier of Ontario Supreme Court declared formally that the Communist Party of Canada was an illegal organization by virtue of Regulation 62 of the regulations.

That regulation provides that once an organization has in such manner been declared illegal, not only are all persons continuing as members or officers deemed guilty of an offence against the regulations, but anybody advocating or defending the acts, principles and policies of such an organization are also guilty.

Ban Follows Conviction.

The ban on Communism followed conviction of three Ottawa men on indictments charging publication and circulation of anti-war pamphlets tending to prejudice recruiting, cause disaffection and prejudice the safety of the state and the efficient prosecution of the war.

Commissioner S. T. Wood of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police said today he had received no instructions so far to institute a Dominion-

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Sun and weather! It is often said that the sun is the source of our weather. This is so, weather being simply a manifestation of solar energy. But the earth, after receiving this energy, does certain things with it. It absorbs some and reflects some. Both absorption and reflection take place as soon as the sun's rays strike the upper limit of the atmosphere. The air and clouds and the earth's surface all absorb some and reflect some. The greatest absorption is at the earth's surface, where the absorption causes either heat or chemical action, such as changes in plant life, and photographic effects.

SWISS POLICE ACTIVE

Berne, Switzerland, May 15 (AP). —Switzerland's mobilization is complete and "all the troops occupy the positions which have been assigned to them," the federal council and high command announced in a joint communique today.

The communique follows

"General mobilization has been completed in the shortest possible time. All the troops occupy the positions which have been assigned to them.

"These positions, on all our frontiers, are held by powerful armed forces."

(This means that the forts on the Italian frontier, which until the recent intensification of the crisis had only skeleton guard, are fully manned.)

"Also in the interior of the country large forces assure the security of the country.

R. A. F. Bombs Bridges, Depots, Troop Concentrations in Reich

With Big Battle Imminent Pilots and Gunners Confident They Will be Able to Hold Own Against the Germans

REFUGEES FILL ROADS

By DREW MIDDLETON
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the British Expeditionary Force in Belgium, May 15 (C.P.)—The German armies moved southwest today toward the tiny triangle of Belgium where the Allies are massed to make their stand.

As the big battle of the war appears imminent, the situation has taken a favorable turn by the rise to power of the Allied air arm which has been fighting the Germans to a standstill.

It is admittedly too early to gauge the results of yesterday's air battles, but Royal Air Force pilots and gunners felt today that both their fighters and bombers came off best in the engagements which brought down almost a dozen German bombers, spread high explosives on German troop concentrations, bridges, depots and railheads far into the Third Reich's hitherto inviolate territory.

Tommies of the British Expeditionary Force followed orders calmly, going about their tasks as if the whine of German shells and the thunder of Nazi bombers did not exist.

General Winkelman, Commander-in-Chief, Orders Dutch Soldiers to Lay Down Arms

UNEQUAL TO TASK

Air Force Not Strong Enough to Give Effective Aid and Army Pierced, Outflanked

Amsterdam, May 15—(AP)—The Netherlands surrendered the way today for German occupation of all but one of her eleven provinces.

Under orders from General Henri Gerard Winkelman, the Commander-in-Chief, the Dutch last night laid down their arms everywhere but in Zeeland, low-lying island province in the southwest which has, in the Port of Vlissingen (Flushing), one of the main points of sea traffic with Britain.

There was nothing else the Dutch could do after five days of stubborn but foredoomed defence. So the surrender was ordered by the 64-year-old commander, highest government representative since the flight of the Queen and the government to England two days ago.

"Preparations already have been made to deal with the Nazi menace," Mr. Eden said in his broadcast appeal.

The response was prompt. Hundreds rushed to offer their services in London, while hundreds in the country-side streaked by bicycle and afoot to police stations to enter their names as "parachute potter-atters"

The broadcast followed announcement of the creation of the force, whose members will be 'minute men'

Ingenious Method Used by Undergrad To Woo His Beloved, a Barmaid

Oxford, England, May 15—(CP Cable)—A 20th century romeo yesterday decided to use 20th century methods to woo his beloved, a bar maid.

David Burdett, Oxford undergrad, hired two sandwich men to act as pickets.

They marched up and down in front of the bar. Their signs read "unfair to David."

David, romantically attired in a black velvet smoking jacket and dress trousers, with an orchid flanked by a lily and bluebell in his buttonhole, carried on his share of the campaign by chanting a love song.

Juliet apparently did not respond. She glanced at the activities outside her window and vanished.

Holland Failed to Co-operate With Allies Before Germany Marched Says London Paper

London, May 15—(CP) — The Daily Mail said today that Adolf Hitler's campaign in The Netherlands would never have succeeded if Holland "had co-operated with the Allies before Germany marched."

"Once again Hitler has gambled and won," this newspaper said. It continued:

"The enemy's progress has been rapid. The first wave of his murderious thrust is not yet spent. The Allied peoples must anticipate important withdrawals by their armies, but they should remember that any such retirements will form part of the higher strategy of the Allied command.

"Our friends should be encouraged by the change of spirit which has swept this country in the past week. Industrial Britain has taken its coat off. There has been talk enough in the past eight months. Now the time has come to work—in the robust words of Mr. Bevin 'work like Hell' to beat Hitler."

"Belgium fights on gallantly," said the Daily Express, "and the decisive battle for Brussels is still to be waged. The thrust towards France, the attack on Sedan, may be a feint to draw off French troops. Hitler probably wants the Low Countries as bases for attacks against Britain.

"Hitler means to win the war before winter. That is the challenge facing us."

The Daily Herald said:

"We have changed our government and with the change accomplished, a dangerous contentment instantly reappears among a large section of our people.

"You hear faithfully repeated, with many a wise wink and a knowledgeable nod, the sickening doctrine that 'Britain loses every battle except the last.' Hearing such things you realize that there are many among us who still combine the worst attributes of the parrot and the ostrich. You realize that despite all, the 'time is on our side' sedative administered by the Chamberlain government has not yet been purged from the public mind.

"We can hope that the administration itself has been cleansed of complacency."

ADMIRALTY DENIES WARSHIP SUNK OR DAMAGED

German Claims 2 Cruisers and One Destroyer Sunk Are Groundless

FALSE NAZI CLAIMS

London, May 15 (CP)—The Admiralty, in contradiction of German claims, announced today that "no British warship has been sunk, set on fire or seriously damageed since the German invasion of the low countries with the exception of the submarine Seal."

The loss of the Seal was announced several days ago.

The Admiralty statement follows:

"Germany continues to pursue the techinque of making large and entirely groundless claims of British losses at sea.

"Germany has claimed that yesterday, off the Dutch coast, two cruisers and one destroyer were sunk and one cruiser and one 15,000-ton steamer set on fire by bombs and an 8,000-ton steamer severely damaged by bombs.

German Claims Untrue

"Since the German invasion of the low countries Germany has claimed that four cruisers and two destroyers have been sunk and two cruisers heavily damaged in Dutch waters.

"Claims to have sunk and seriously damaged other naval units of His Majesty's fleet in Norwegian waters have also been made.

"In fact, no British warship has been sunk, set on fire or seriously damaged since the German invasion of the low countries, with the exception of H.M. submarine Seal. This loss was announced by the Admiralty 12th May in accordance with the declared policy of announcing all losses.

"Claims or loss or serious damage by air attack to transports and merchant ships are equally untrue.

"No mishap has befallen any British transport or supply ship during The Netherlands campaign.

"The German claim to have set fire to a 25,000-ton ship may have its origin in published reports that fires in Rotterdam spread to the Dutch liner Statendam, 28,291 tons, which was lying alongside a quay. Nothing is known of any damage to an 8,000-ton ship."

DUTCH FLEET, INTACT, JOINS ALLIED NAVIES

Estimate That 100,000 Dutch Soldiers Were Killed Thought by Observers as Too High

'WE SHALL WIN WAR'

All Resources of Holland and Her Empire Placed at Service of Allies

Paris, May 15—(CP-Havas)—E. N. Van Kleffens, Dutch Foreign Minister, today estimated at 100,000 the number of Dutch soldiers killed in the fighting of the last five days.

These losses, he said, were one quarter of the number of men mobilized.

(Some observers believed Van Kleffens, a civilian, may have overestimated the death rate. If his figures are accurate, losses were many times greater than death rates in the first Great War, when 25 per cent casualties, wounded as well as dead, were considered exceptionally high for large forces and the ratio of dead to wounded was one to four).

Dutch Fleet Intact Joins Allies

Van Kleffens said Holland's fleet was almost intact and had joined the Allied naval forces.

He said resistance is continuing in the coastal province of Zeeland and that troops which escaped into Belgium would enter the Allied armies.

His disclosure of the army's severe losses was part of his government's first review of the campaign which forced capitulation of most of The Netherlands in five days.

The Netherlands Foreign Minister arrived here from London last night.

He said that prolongation of operations in Holland was decided against, with "millions of souls menaced with extermination," but that "everyone knows the tenacity of the Dutch—I am convinced we will gain final victory."

Although most of The Netherlands now has fallen to the Germans, Van Kleffens said, the Dutch Empire still stands and all its resources will be placed at the disposal of the Allies. He said Dutch were volunteering their services throughout the world.

Sam Williamson, Passing Home Early Today, Discovered Appalling Tragedy

Bancroft, May 15 —(Special)—Hearing cries from the home of Guy LaFee, one and one half miles north of Maynooth, Sam Williamson, a laborer on his way to work at seven o'clock this morning, entered the cabin to find, Mrs. LaFee, 33, and her two children, Shirley Angeline, 3 years old, and Barbara Matilda, eight months, dead in bed while the father of the family, Mr. Guy LaFee had been rendered helpless, by a bolt of lightning, which struck near the home and passed through the house during the electrical storm at four o'clock today.

Mr. LaFee asked Mr. Williamson to get a neighbour, Mrs. Sanford Baumhour, to look after his wife, whom he had been calling for some time without getting an answer. Upon investigation Williamson found the bodies of the wife and children, who had been instantly killed by lightning at the same time, that Mr. LaFee had been injured.

The battle of the Meuse begun yesterday when the main German army which had crossed Luxembourg reached the river, was in full progress today along a 150-mile front.

The heaviest fighting was in the vicinity of Sedan where major forces on land and in the air were engaged.

Dictators Plan Simultaneous Attack on Switzerland Reported

New York Paper States Mussolini Expects to be Able to Carry Out Coup Without Going to War With Allies

500,000 ON BORDER

London, May 15 —(CP)— The York Evening News said last night that Adolf Hitler and Premier Mussolini are planning a simultaneous smash on Switzerland from the north and south.

"Probably when he thinks that the reserves of the Allies are held fast in the north, Hitler will throw a mass of heavily armed men through Switzerland in an attempt to gain entrance into France round the southern end of the Maginot Line," the newspaper said.

"The Swiss army is fully mobilized and braced to resist aggression. Its position, however, is complicated by the fact that a German invasion from the north is known to be the signal for an Italian attack from the south.

"Mussolini has placed 500,000 men on the Ticinese border. It looks as if Mussolini expects to be able to carry out his coup against Switzerland without going to war with the Allies."

40 Dutch Soldiers Held Prisoners By Nazis Killed by Shells of Comrades

By GERAUD JOUVE
(Havas Staff Writer)

London, May 15 (CP-Havas).—Before fleeing Holland aboard a British destroyer Monday night I inspected Ypenburg Airdrome, near The Hague, where I saw the wreckage of fifteen Nazi bombing and pursuit planes. Inside the hangar were others, some of them undamaged.

The Germans captured the airdrome the first day of the invasion, raining parachutists and planes onto the field. Dutch pursuit planes and anti-aircraft battery took a murderous toll, but the Germans were evidently under orders to effect the capture at all costs, and kept coming until the defenders finally ran out of ammunition.

The Germans were in full possession for six hours. Finally Dutch reinforcements came up and reoccupied the field after terrible fighting.

Inside the main hangar, where the best planes were stored, the Nazis had placed their prisoners. Dutch artillery blasted the hangar during the battle. I saw the results afterward—the charred bodies of some 40 Dutch soldiers killed by shells fired by their comrades in arms.

Some of the German planes in the hangar escaped damage and the Hollanders took them over when they recaptured the airdrome. On the field I saw several Nazi craft whose crews had been killed by machine-gun fire while seated at their posts.

I examined the Nazis' gear. They had come prepared for almost anything. They had brought with them automatic arms, grenades, large stocks of ammunition and provisions and motor scooters.

The officers all had their dress uniforms along—to be donned for the triumphant march into The Hague.

I saw two parachutists brought into The Hague. They were between 18 and 20 years old. They told how they had sat on the floor of their plane and had been automatically dumped when the chief pilot gave the signal.

In the night sky I saw the red glare from the fires burning at Rotterdam, where 4,000 persons were reported to have perished.

I was told that just before German-born Prince Bernhardt fled to Britain with Crown Princess Juliana and their two little daughters, he took a potshot at a parachutist with a sub-machine gun from a wood outside The Hague.

Soviet Embassy Surrounded by Belgian Soldiers

London, May 15.— (CP)— The Herald said this morning that the Soviet Russian Embassy in Brussels was surrounded by a cordon of Belgian soldiers after Belgian authorities heard that German parachute troops had been seen landing in the Soviet Embassy grounds.

The Herald, which said it got the report from Soviet sources in London went on to say that Ivan Maisky Russian ambassador to Britain, telephoned his colleague in Brussels and then made representations to the Belgian ambassador in London.

The latter was said to have told Maisky he had obtained assurance from the Belgian government the "blockade" would be lifted.

The Russian ambassador in Brussels was said to have denied the allegation concerning the German parachute troops.

ALLIES DEVASTATE ARCTIC NORSE PORT OF NARVIK

German Garrison Will be Unable to Hold Out for Any Length of Time

FRENCH LAND TROOPS

Stockholm, May 15 (AP)—The newspaper Tidningen said today that Allied bombardments in the last few days had devastated the Arctic Norwegian port of Narvik and that the German garrison could not possibly hold the town much longer.

The Nazi troops were said to have been kept supplied by planes which also have landed reinforcements by parachute. They were reported well equipped with automatic arms although lacking in artillery.

The Tidningen's special correspondent said that fresh French troops and tanks had been landed from transports for an assault on the town.

(The war office in London announced yesterday that new Allied forces had been landed at Bjerkvik, seven miles north of Narvik.)

Air Bases Bombed Nightly

The newspaper Social Demokraten printed a story from a correspondent in Norway declaring German air bases in the central and southern part of the country were being bombed nightly by the British, which arrived regularly about 11 p.m.

Reports from Sweden's west coast, where German transports have been seen moving through the Kattegat, led to belief here that the Nazis were reinforcing their drive through The Netherlands and Belgium with troops removed from Norway.

Norwegian refugees reported that two German transports attempted to land troops at Belsfjord, south of Mo, on Norway's west coast, but one was sunk by the Allies. The other landed about 400 men, presumably reinforcements for Narvik.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

THUNDER STORM VISITS THIS DISTRICT

The first thunder storm of the season visited the Belleville district over the night with several rumbles being heard shortly after the supper hour as a heavy storm cloud drifted across to the southwest. No lightning accompanied these first few rumbles however, but at four o'clock this morning the storm returned with thunder and lightning flashes very much in evidence. Rain also fell during the storm this morning and although it was only a good shower, it will be welcomed by farmers as rain is needed to give the seeding and grass a good start.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH IS JURY'S VERDICT

A five man jury assembled at Campbellford found that Mr. Harry Campbell, who was found dead last Thursday on a cultivator in a field at his home five miles east of that town, came to his death accidentally. The autopsy was performed by Dr. Peacock of Colbourne who disclosed that the skull had been fractured, but that death had come from a cerebral hemorrhage, caused probably when it struck the frame of the cultivator.

Mrs. Campbell was able to throw some additional light on the probable cause of the accident when she declared that her husband had not been in good health for several years and had complained of not feeling well the previous day. She suggested that her husband had had a weak spell and had collapsed as he stood behind the cultivator.

SWIMMING SEASON IN CITY OPENS

The swimming season at the Victoria Park was officially opened yesterday afternoon when two young lads were seen disporting themselves from off the diving raft at the end of the park. Although it seems rather early for bathing in the waters of the bay and undoubtedly it was a bit chilly for the lads, they showed their grit and when questioned, reported that the water was "fine."

MUCH COAL ARRIVING AT POINT ANNE DOCK

The dock at Point Anne is a busy place these days with the Canada Cement Company's steamer "Cement Carrier" as well as the steamed "Cadwell" making regular trips between American shipping points on Lake Ontario and the docks at Point Anne loaded with coal for use in the Company's huge kilns. Already the two boats have made five trips each and will continue their operations until the company's supply of coal is considered adequate. On each trip the boats transport approximately 2,000 tons of coal from Lake Ontario points with more American coal being imported this year than formerly.

HOTELS OF THE CITY CROWDED TO CAPACITY

Due to the sharp upward swing in commercial activities during the past two months, hotels of the city have been taxed to room capacity, it was authoritatively reported this morning.

Commenting on this fact, a prominent commercial traveller told newspapermen in the Queen's Hotel last night, that the majority of veteran travellers have had to resort to reservations in order to secure accommodation.

"War orders, and the general uptrend in Spring business is responsible", he said. "This year, if present indications are right, will see the greatest boom in commercial travelling, Ontario has known in 25 years. Already it is heavy in the eastern part of the province, but in Western Ontario, it is practically impossible to secure hotel accommodation unless it is arranged for ahead".

19 MARRIAGE LICENCES ISSUED IN APRIL

With the merry marriage month of June in the offing, young Dan Cupid loosed but few shafts during the month of April, only nineteen couples parading down the aisle to the altar, according to vital statistics released today by the City Hall officials.

Deaths totalled thirty-one, while forty-three new arrivals blessed the homes of city residents.

SENTENCED TO SERVE 3 MONTHS IN JAIL

Carman R. Waldon, Prince Edward County Indian youth, was sentenced to serve three months in the county jail by Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in Trenton police court yesterday after being convicted on two counts of stealing bicycles.

Waldon pleaded guilty to the theft of two bicycles when the charges were read by Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., who conducted the prosecution during the afternoon session of the court. Several minor L.C.A. cases concluded the proceedings.

POLICE WARN AGAINST OVERNIGHT PARKING

City police today issued warnings to delinquent motorist, be they local or otherwise, regarding the practice of all night parking on the streets of Belleville, especially in the downtown area. This practice is against city regulations and must be discontinued.

"The city firemen are flushing Front and Bridge Streets during the early morning hours in an effort to keep the city streets clean. One morning recently over 100 motor vehicles were left parked on the streets in the downtown area, thus impeding the progress of the street flushing. Commencing tonight motor vehicles left parked downtown for an excess period of time will find police stickers on their windshields and prosecutions will follow," warned Chief Kidd today.

LARGE 'LUNGE FALLS VICTIM TO SPEAR

A maskinonge said to weigh fifty pounds, one of the main tourist attractions of the village of Coboconk, has fallen victim to the depredations of poachers, according to a report from Peterboro today.

The big fellow was speared in a creek near the village, which swarms with suckers, and up which muskies occasionally work their way to spawn.

The fish is believed to be the one described last year as "being as long as a railroad tie" and seen spawning in Balsam Lake. This monster has been seen several times and residents of the village always notified friends and relatives from other parts, who came in droves to watch the big fellow.

The fish "obituary" came to light when a traveller, pausing in the village, learned that a native had made the "kill" and was boasting of his prowess and capture of the big fish.

FIRE TRUCKS GET FRESH COAT OF PAINT

Keeping abreast of the "clean-up, paint-up" campaign that is evident throughout the city, the equipment of the Belleville Fire Department is being prepared for a bright new coat of red paint. The hook and ladder truck has been undergoing a thorough sandpapering at the hands of the firemen and is now ready for the paint crew who will follow up the sanders. The lettering which is to adorn the truck when completed is causing some of the firemen a little worry but one of the lads claim to be an artist at the job, so the balance of the force is patiently awaiting more tangible proof of his claims.

BOX OF MATCHES BURSTS INTO FLAMES

The polite gentleman who apparently had been taught by friend wife not to throw his matches on the floor nearly met with an accident in a Front Street department store yesterday afternoon, not to mention the fire hazard created, when he remembered his home instruction.

Engrossed in a conversation with a friend in an aisle of the store, he extracted a box of matches from his pocket and lighted a cigarette. Apparently interested in that particular part of the talk, he absentmindedly or through force of habit, placed the match back in the box. But he had omitted to blow it out, and suddenly the entire box exploded in a flash of flame.

Throwing the flaming box away in his excitment, plus the pain of a pair of scorched fingers, he hurled the flaming box on a nearby counter, but the presence of mind of a lady clerk averted what might have been loss to the merchandise.

DOGS RUMMAGE IN GARBAGE PAILS

A pack of dogs ravaged the contents of garbage pails and left the contents strewn along West Bridge Street early today, residents of that district complained to police this morning. The garbage pails had been left for collection when four or five large dogs were seen rummaging into the pails and generally strewing the contents about the streets. City police later ascertained the addresses of the owners of the canines responsible and warned the respective owners to keep their dogs confined.

No arrests were necessary in Belleville during the past twenty-four hours, leaving the police cell block available for the eleven transients, who sought shelter from last night's thunder storm.

WORKMEN REPAIR CONCRETE OF DOCK

The wear and tear of many years' service has broken the facing along the south side of the Government Dock and this morning employees of the Belleville Harbor Commission were breaking away the concrete which has become cracked, preparatory to the placing of new curbing. Continued wear has cracked the cement all along the one side of the dock and the entire south side will have to be replaced.

Kinsmen to Supply Special Wheels, Axles On Kid-Kars in Derby

Groundwork of final plans for their annual Soap-box Derby to be run here on Tuesday, July 9th, was laid by members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club at a special meeting held in the Queen's Hotel last night.

Decision to supply each entrant with specially made wheels and axles, which will become the property of the competing youths after the race was made. The entrants however, must guarantee that they will construct a car to be completed within a few days of the race or forfeiture of the wheels and axle will result.

The clubmen also decided to adhere rigidly to rules and regulations as set down by the Chief Derby Committee of Akron, Ohio, insofar as construction of cars is concerned. Strict adherence to the rule that all entries must be hand-made by the entrants will be observed, and machines made in factories or suspected of being built by adult mechanics will be immediately disqualified.

Entries have been limited to seventy-five, and each car will carry the advertising of its sponsor. Erection of seating accommodation was vetoed after discussion, it being felt that revenue derived would not recompense breakage and labor involved.

A general meeting of all entrants will be held in the city in the near future where all details, rules, regulations, etc., will be explained by derby officials. Kinsmen committee chairmen reported satisfaction with the response and enthusiasm already being shown by the potential derby winners of the city and district.

REV. E. C. CURRIE DIES AT AGE 76

Formerly Minister of John St. Presbyterian Church in Belleville

Creemore, May 15—Rev. Edward Charles Currie, for forty-three years in the active ministry of the Presbyterian Church in Canada and for nearly seven years minister at Creemore, died Monday in his seventy-seventh year.

Born at Newton, Que., he was the son of the late Rev. Archibald Currie, Presbyterian minister. He received his early education in the schools at Brock, Sonya, Oakwood and Port Perry Ont. Following his matriculation at Newmarket High School, he entered Queen's University, graduating in 1896. During the same year he was ordained and accepted a call to Delhi Presbyterian Church. Other pastorates included: Burns, Sarnia, Richmond Hill and Thornhill; John Street Church, Belleville; Hawkesbury, Lindsay, Sault Ste. Marie and Creemore. He had been retired one year.

He was a member of the Masonic Order and the I.O.O.F.

Mr. Currie was twice married, and is survived by his second wife, Mildred Godwin Currie; six children, Mrs. Gordon Ross and Edward Bruce of Rochester, N.Y.; Mrs. George Bailey, Maple, Ont.; Mrs. Leonard Wilson, Charles G. and Arthur W., all of Toronto; one brother and three sisters.

3-Ring Indoor Circus Coming to Hume Arena

Belleville and vicinity is to have the opportunity of witnessing a real big 3-Ring Indoor Circus, which is being staged at the Hume Arena for three days and nights, starting last week in May.

In the past, only the larger cities have been able to see on attraction of this magnitude staged in an Arena. And so the Garden Bros. bring their 3-ringed show for the enjoyment of all who wish to see it. It will be exactly as staged by them at the Coliseum in Toronto, with the elephants, lions, performing bears, horses, dogs, ponies, and monkeys, —thrilling aerial trapeze artists, sensational acrobatic tumblers, tight rope and wire walkers, and of course a whole army of clowns! And no circus is complete without the pink lemonade, balloons and peanuts! Everything that the 'big-top' circuses have will be in the Hume Arena. Acts that have been featured with Ringling Bros. and other large circuses are some of the features of Garden Bros. Circus.

The price of admission asked is the lowest that any circus of this size has been shown at, hence the reason for staying 3 days, so that everyone may have a chance to see it.

Boat Owners Ready For Boating Season

Proof that the boating season has once more arrived, a count of the craft now anchored in the inner harbor yesterday afternoon revealed that fourteen boat-owners and yachtsmen had their boats back into the water after the winter's idleness. The build of the crafts ran all the way from small sailing skiffs to large motor launches and fishing tugs, and glittering in the sunlight, all freshly painted in bright hues of white, creams and light blues, the different boats presented a lovely picture as they swung idly at their moorings.

According to Mr. Cook, caretaker at the Belleville Yacht Club, there has as yet been little activity on the part of the club members toward planning for their first boating races of the season which are usually held on the 24th. of May. A great many of the larger craft are still on the dock but the call of the open water is making itself felt among the owners with the majority now working on their craft and giving the hulls a coat of paint before lauching. Quite a number of the boat-owners take their crafts home for the winter months and these will possibly not show up until shortly before the races start.

Rainbow Rendezvous A New Place For Summer Entertainment

Providing dance enthusiasts with a new place of summer entertainment, the Rainbow Rendezvous, one of Eastern Ontario's smartest and most modern dance pavilions, opens to the public in gala style on Thursday evening. The Rainbow Rendezvous, of ultra-modern design, is situated six miles west of Belleville on Highway No. 2 and will feature the orchestra of Dan Fairman and his Top Hatters.

Boasting of the finest floor in this section of the province, the Rainbow Rendezvous has been completely remodelled and decorated in artistic fashion. The color scheme features two-tone blue with touches of silver and a colorful contrast of indirect lighting in rainbow effect, placed within the walls. Thoroughly reconditioned, the 65 by 35 foot spacious dance floor affords ample room for the large numbers, which are anticipated to enjoy the cool breezes off the Bay of Quinte during the long summer months, when dancing is at its height as a seasonal entertainment.

For the convenience of the patrons, the Rainbow Rendezvous has spacious lounge rooms and modern soda bar in connection with the pavilion. Ample rest and check rooms for the ladies are provided on the second floor, while every facility to assure the comfort of the dancing public has been supplied by the management. Bright illuminous lighting effects make a striking appearance of the exterior of the district's new recreational centre.

The Rainbow Rendezvous is under the management of Mr. George Dixon of this city, while Messrs. Ernie and H. P. "Bouncer" Holway are proprietors. Spacious parking facilities adjoining the pavilion to accommodate upwards of 100 automobiles are available gratis and includes an outside attendant for this purpose. Thursday evening's opening event should attract the dancing public in large numbers for the gala opening of this new centre of summer entertainment.

Britain Purchases 200 Trawlers, Lakeboats And Freighters in U. S.

New York, May 15—(CP)— The Daily News said today that "possibly the largest single shipping deal" in United States history has been completed with the purchase by Great Britain of more than 200 American trawlers, lakeboats and outdated freighters.

Agents for the British Ministry of Shipping will apply immediately to the United States Maritime Commission for formal approval, the newspaper added.

The flotilla will make the Atlantic voyage under the direction of a group of old Singapore pilots and retired ship officers sent here from England, the News said.

It was said the boats were bought to relieve the strain on other vessels now transporting munitions and supplies to French Channel ports.

Hamilton City Council Asks Sweeping Law

Hamilton, Ont., May 15—(CP)— City Council in a resolution last night asked that the Federal Government enact protective legislation to disfranchise persons convicted of subversive activities. The Ontario Government was requested to introduce legislation disqualifying such persons from holding any public office.

"This must go through", said Mayor William Morrison in speaking of the resolution before it passed. The resolution was sponsored by Controller A. H. Frame and Controller Donald Clarke.

The meeting was climaxed by a notice of motion of Ald. R. R. Evans that resignation of Ald. Harry Hunter as a member of City Council be requested. Another notice of motion filed by Evans provided that City Council offer a reward of $50 to each person who first supplies information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person in Hamilton on charges of activities subversive of any existing law in Canada.

No reason for the resignation notice of motion was given, however, at the last council meeting Hunter was called a "Red" by the Mayor.

Controller Sam Lawrence, who said he was a Socialist, and three aldermen, Hunter, Roy Aindow and Robert Thornberry, voted against adoption of the resolution, charging the move gave too sweeping powers and threatened the freedom which Allied forces were fighting to safeguard.

CANADIAN GUNS BLASTED SIEGE MAFEKING, 1900

Relief of Stricken Town Revealed Location of Dominions "Lost Gunners" 40 Years Ago

(By The Canadian Press)

Forty years ago Canada was speculating on the fate of its "lost gunners", unheard of for five years in the height of the South African War, 1899-1902. On May 16, 1900, the missing unit, "C" Battery, Canadian Field Artillery, emerged from the Kalahari Desert, Bechuanaland, and sealed the historic Relief of Mafeking with a telling cannonade. The relieving force marched into the town early next morning.

Then as now in the Second Great War the stolid guardians of British War office strategy were reporting nothing more than they could help that would give "aid and comfort" to the enemy. There were lots of rumors about the battery, which was part of Canada's second contingent to the Anglo-Boer conflict down at the other end of the Eastern hemisphere.

Perhaps the most logical story at the time had "C" Battery wiped out in one of the sanguinary engagements marking British reverses in the first few months of the war. Another rumor marooned the Canadian unit on a cannibal island in the Indian ocean after the sinking of their transport off Madagascar. Some armchair generals maintained the Canadians had been transferred to China where John Bull had other irons in the fire—helping to suppress the Boxer rebellion.

Long Way Round

The truth was the Canadian battery was an instrument of British diplomacy and military strategy in turning the war in South Africa to a triumph of British arms. For seven months the frontier town of Mafeking, on the Cape-Transvaal border was surrounded by a large and determined force of Boer troops, well-armed and well-fed, making one of their last stands against the British.

Defending the town was the redoubtable Lt.-Colonel R. S. S. Baden-Powell with a British force of irregulars, including a detachment of the Protectorate Regiment, some police, the civic guard and so on—about 1,000 men all told. Their "artillery" amounted to a couple of antiquated "seven-pounders". The military and civilian population of the place was reduced speedily to eating horseflesh and improvising its water supply.

The situation was desperate and the British force of Imperials and colonial troops attempting to relieve the beleaguered town was without modern artillery. Guns were an imperative need and it was impossible at that time to get them from the main theatre of war south and east. That's where British diplomacy came in. Permission was obtained from neutral Portugal for passage of a force through Portuguese East Africa. Military strategy followed with quiet trans-shipment of the Canadian battery and a contingent of Australian mounted infantry from Cape Town to Portugal's Beira, 900 miles up the African East coast. Then came 800 miles through fever-stricken and locust-clouded jungle and desert by rail and road trek to the north of Mafeking, rear of the enemy lines.

"The guns (C Battery) were rushed by hand into a mealie field and the battery got its first taste of real war by shell bursting right in front of it," says the "Military History of Canada", describing the action of May 16, 1900. "They (the Canadians) were subjected to an enfilading fire from guns, pom-poms and rifles . . . They soon located the Boer guns and had the satisfaction of seeing the enemy fleeing from their position".

The action so far as it involved the Canadian gunners, lasted three hours when the besieging enemy was forced from its position and a "complete victory had been won". To use the words of Lord Roberts, the commander-in-chief, the battery did "essential work" in the Relief of Mafeking "after a march of incredible rapidity". A Canadian historian remarks "The victory was worth the 10,000 miles it (the battery) had taken by land and sea".

Tension Relieved

Far greater wars have shaken the British Empire since South Africa, 1899-1902, but no individual engagement has held so long the Empire's spotlight as the Siege of Mafeking. For seven months it was in the news headlines and at times anxiety in the United Kingdom especially was at high pitch over the situation. Old London's reaction on the relief of the stricken mid-African town has even up to recent years given stirring theme to screen and story.

Baden-Powell was the hero of the hour but his fame now endures chiefly for his later international achievement—the founding and leadership of the Boy Scout and Girl Guide movement. As Lt.-General Lord Robert Baden-Powell of Gilwell he celebrated his 83rd birthday Feb. 22 last. The Boy Scouts hat is a memento of the Siege of Mafeking—"BP" wore its counterpart when his name was on everybody's lips.

In Canada there was additional cause for gratitude when news came May 17-18, 1900, of the Relief of Mafeking. They had found her "lost gunners".

Next Month May Decide Victor in War States Lord Lothian

New York, May 15 (CP).—The Marquess of Lothian, British Ambassador to the United States, predicted that the next month of fighting may determine the course of the war.

"The next thirty days may determine whether there is to be any effective barrier left to the domination of all Europe, Asia and Africa by the dictatorships, leaving America isolated and alone to champion a free way of life, or whether Hitler's method of conquest by violence and fraud receives its first serious check, and mankind, though the struggle will be far from over, begins to breathe more freely again," he said.

Lord Lothian addressed the English Speaking Union.

Lord Lothian said some of the British "defects in prescience, promptness in action, and preparedness have been exposed" through the Norwegian campaign.

"I have no doubt that there are follies and stupidities as well as crimes on the Nazi side—I am sure that Hitler would not dare to hold a solemn inquest upon them, as we did last week."

Norway had shown the argument that a country could ensure its safety by refusing all help or co-operation was a fallacy. "In this event we were unable to save Norway. But we were able to prove that, though almost every circumstance was adverse, the air was not master of the sea," he added.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c

NEW MACHINERY FOR BAGGING CEMENT ELIMINATES DUST

Improvements in working conditions are always appreciated by employees working under disagreeable conditions and the latest bagging machinery installed at the Canada Cement Company's plant at Point Anne will be doubly appreciated by the workers. Formerly the worker operating the bagging machines at the plant became quickly covered with fine dust that always floated through the air, but the most recent developments in this line of machinery include baggers that are dustless in operation. Such new equipment has been recently installed at the Point Anne plant and according to reports it is possible for the operator of the machine to wear dark clothes without a trace of cement dust being noted. When speaking of the new bagging equipment this morning one of the officials of the plant said, "why it is so clean and dustless around this new machine that you could safely eat your lunch there."

MR. CHURCHILL AND HIS MINISTERS

The rapidity with which the new cabinet of Great Britain has been organized is a proof of the dynamic abilities of the Prime Minister, Winston Churchill.

The appointment of the wellknown London newspaper owner, Lord Beaverbrook, to the post of minister in charge of airplane production is one which gives promise of very effective results. Born in Ontario, a son of the manse, Lord Beaverbrook is one of the most powerful figures in the life of Britain. He has a driving personality and the will to get things done. In the ministry of airplane production he would appear to be where he can most render the highest service to the Empire and the Allies.

In the last war he waged a campaign for a ministry of munitions and as a result of his campaign the production of munitions was speeded up, this being one of the steps which led in the final count to the victory of the Allies.

Prime Minister Churchill, has in a few days, moulded a ministry which it is expected will tell very effectively towards the downfall of Hitler and Germany. Churchill has here shown his great genius as a leader and administrator.

The occasion brings forth the man. Mr. Churchill has confidence of the Empire at war and he possesses qualities which will give undoubtedly most potent results that are possible in a war period. He is one of the outstanding men in the world in his wide knowledge of public affairs and of men. Best of all he brings to the office the profoundest sense of responsibility which will drive irresistibly to the goal of victory. A man of potent imagination he is also a supreme realist and will find his full stride as he guides by his action the total war effort of Great Britain.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF

Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands, her daughter Juliana and the latter's two children are now safe in England.

History repeats itself. England has again in danger's hour become the refuge of rulers of the earth. England had always a kindly heart and a king or a queen of another state might always find refuge here. The great of the earth of other lands have found Britain a kindly mother and a haven.

The Emperor of Ethiopia has been an exile from his own land which the Fascists of Italy conquered and made part of the Italian Empire.

May Queen Wilhelmina's stay in Britain be as happy as it can be under the circumstances. And that it may be a short stay is also the hope of all, though there is little hope of a very speedy victory, according to Mr. Churchill. That in the course of time, she and her daughter and her grandchildren may return in triumph to the Netherlands when the Nazis are conquered and crushed so that never again they may lift the hand to stab at liberty, is the hope of the world.

WHAT IT COSTS FOR 'PROTECTIVE' FOOD FOR HEALTH

On the basis of average city food prices the cost of "protective" or essential foods to maintain normal, disease-resisting health for one person is $1.85 weekly or 26 cents per day, according to the Canadian Medical Association.

For two adults and a child of eleven to fifteen years, the weekly cost of food totals $5.65 or 27 cents per person daily.

For a family of four children, the costs run to $8.15 per week for adult and four children up to ten years, and for two adults and four children one to ten years $9.95. For older families of children two adults and four children from 7 to 18 the cost runs to $12.05 or 29 cents per day a person.

For a child of five to ten years the cost is $1.65 per week, 70 cents for milk, cheese and butter, 35 cents for vegetables and fruits, fresh and dried, 25 cents for meat, fish eggs and for bread flours and cereals and other foods and flavorings 35 cents.

These figures, giving detailed budgets of milk, cheese, meats, vegetables and fruits, for individuals of different ages and families of various sizes, are contained in a new booklet, "Food for Health in Peace and War."

The booklet was prepared by the Canadian Medical Association, and according to an introductory note on the inside front cover, it is based on what doctors and scientists have learned about food through years of study and research."

It can be obtained free from doctors' offices, government health officers, registered nurses, local health and welfare organizations, and life insurance offices. The Canadian Medical Association stated that it's objective is to have the booklet used in every home in Canada.

It is essential that the health level of Canadians be kept at normal during the stress of war. This booklet indicates the basis required. This should not be forgotten for health is the primary requisite.

The Price of Peace

The heart of Nazi strategy is terrorization. Resistance must begin with the thinking of all affected by it. Striking into The Netherlands even before sending an ultimatum, seizing points in the interior, sending planes far over French and English territory to frighten and confuse the defence—all this is only the military side of the strategy. The imposition of mental paralysis on all the neutral States is another part.

Threats to bring in Italy through an attack on Yugoslavia appear as a conscious part of the plan to create a general anarchy in which robbery will become easy. It may be suggested that Russia would also join in such a free-for-all banditry by moving into Bessarabia and that Japan would seize the opportunity to move into the Dutch East Indies. This kind of a picture can be terrifying. If that is its effect, it will serve well the purposes of those who use terrorism as a major weapon.

But that need not be its effect. And the attitude of the neutral countries can do much to prevent the further development of chaotic criminality. In Mein Kampf it is written: "Herd instinct leads to mutual support only so long as a common danger makes it seem useful or unavoidable."

Recognition of danger and of common interests would have stopped in its early stages the process which has led from Manchuria to Luxembourg. Recognition of them now, coupled with clear-cut moral rejection of aggression and courageous preparations to resist it can still hold crime in check.

Clearer and clearer grow the issues of right and wrong. Stronger and stronger should be the assurance that wrong cannot triumph. Nations attacked by terrorism do not have to accept the "herd" concept of themselves. Even a slight understanding that they are much more than animals, even a partial practice of the Christian teaching that men are the children of God would band them into a brotherhood which would not dissolve like Herr Hitler's herd.

Recognition that there is a clear difference between defence and aggression would arm them with the might of right. They would not fear for the spread of war-made international anarchy. With more reliance on right—and more effort to do right—they might even take comfort in the Psalmist's words:

> I have seen the wicked in great power, and spreading himself like a green bay tree.
> Yet he passed, away and, lo he was not: yea, I sought him, but he could not be found.

Self-Sealing Tanks Prove Satisfactory

Baltimore, Maryland, May —(AP)—Airplane fuel tanks which seal up instantly when they are ripped open by large calibre bullets, giving warplane pilots added protection from the hazards of fire and forced landings, were demonstrated in the United States for the first time recently at the research laboratories of the Glenn L. Martin Company.

Riddled with both .30- and .50-calibre ammunition, they spilled scarcely a drop of highly inflammable aviation gasoline.

Major-Gen. Henry W. Arnold, chief of the United States Army Air Corps, said recently that such tanks were high on the "must" list of the developments which were necessary to bring the corps' equipment up to date. Unofficially the tanks, made of a secret composition which includes an artificial rubber, were described as superior to anything of that nature manufactured in Europe.

Germany has pioneered so-called self-sealing gasoline tanks built of fibre, rubber compounds and rawhide leather.

The tests at the factory, which is producing warplanes in large quantities for sale abroad, were given a spectacular finale when an ordinary aluminum alloy tank filled with 110 gallons of gasoline was fired with machine-gun tracer bullets.

The self-sealing tanks probably will be fitted into warplanes sold to the Allies beginning late in the fall. The Army Air Corps conducted extensive tests with them recently at Wright Field, Dayton, O.

Under the direction of R. B. Gray, the Martin Company's chief of research, several gasoline tanks were punctured by machine gun fire. Two ordinary tanks, filled with sea water, leaked like sieves. The aluminum alloy tanks were placed to represent the way they rest in an airplane wing were torn badly.

The composition tanks showed only slits and small holes effectively closed up, like a wound which was healed over. While Gray said the process was confidential, it appeared that the gasoline itself set up a chemical reaction with the tank material to close the holes.

Spies of the Huns

Although I enjoy detective novels, I am bored by spy-stories. I find it hard to account for this difference in appreciation.

It may be that the spies whom I have met have been dull and furtive people, with wet lips and shifting, greedy eyes. It may be that a long experience of the Foreign Service has led me to regard as ignorant those romances which attribute to the grisaille of diplomacy colors and adventures which that admirable, but somewhat bourgeois, profession does not in fact possess. Or it may be that, having but few criminal instincts, I am fundamentally upon the side of law and order, and that I prefer the triumphs of the detective to the split sympathies which most spy-stories arouse.

I realize that my attitude towards spy-stories, whether in fiction or in real life, is one of patronizing scepticism. I am conscious, and ashamed, of the fact that when I am told a spy story my lips shape themselves into a professional sneer. I am aware that throughout the Fifth Column chatter of the last two weeks I have indulged, not only in a suspension of belief, but in a definitely contemptuous mood of incredulity. Am I justified in regarding the danger as exaggerated?

x x x

There are certain facts which I must admit. There is in the first place the fact that the Germans have since 1933 and before devoted a large proportion of their immense organizing-power and their limited income to the perfectioning of an internal and external spy-system. There is the fact that Herr Hitler himself has all the cunning of the Central European peasant and that he delights in the ingenuity of ruse. There is the fact that one of the main elements in his "broadened strategy" is the device of the Trojan horse, and that this aim is to destroy the health of his intended victim before he seeks to touch his throat.

There is the fact that the German Secret Service is one hundred percent. more efficient than it was in 1914, and that great sums have been spent during the last nine years in creating a spy and propaganda network in every country. And finally, there is the astonishing fact that, even with a people as incorruptible and as sturdy as the Norwegians, his methods have met with inconceivable success. I admit these facts: and I remain sceptical.

We have been told stores of how the Germans are immediately informed even of the smallest incident in Allied countries. There is the story (told alternatively about President Lebrun and King George VI) of how the band in the German front-line struck up a national anthem the moment he arrived. There is the story of how, in some Midland city, a gas-main exploded in a thoroughfare and how the Hamburg wireless within four hours relayed that most incidental piece of information. I have never been able to check up on these stories.

It is obvious that the Germans delight in disclosing confidence, in spreading anxiety, in diminishing council prestige by referring to comic municipal matters upon the wireless. Yet I have not as yet been given proof that such information was conveyed to our enemies at a speed more rapid than would be required for the local Cardiff or Northampton newspaper to reach Rotterdam by ordinary methods. It is most disturbing, of course, to be asked by Lord Haw-Haw whether the municipal clock still stands at 3.45, yet it is not astounding that he should ask this question if the information upon which it is based has been telephoned to him that afternoon from Rotterdam. There is no need in such incidental matters to suspect a secret wireless in every German pocket.

x x x

I confess that I was somewhat disconcerted the other day by two stories told me by a prominent French journalist. He assured me that on a Monday he had lunched alone with the family of a well-known Jewish financier and that on the following day the German wireless from Stuttgart announced this event with glee.

He told me also that the passages which had been cut out of his leading article by the French censorship on Monday were read aloud by Monsieur Ferdonnet (the French Haw-Haw) on Tuesday afternoon. All this, of course, is tricky and mysterious. Yet the very fact that the Germans wish to spread consternation and alarm by these gossip paragraphs leads me to be neither disconcerted nor alarmed.

And why, if they have really invented a transmitting-set which can be carried in a muff or tobacco-pouch, should the secret wireless recently discovered in a Dutch farmhouse have been so elaborate and so large?

x x x

I fear that if all these stories are believed too readily we shall slide into that state of suspiciousness and gullibility which is the exact mood which the Germans wish to create. The mere fact that Herr Hitler confessed to Dr. Rauschning his prediction for parachute landings and little suicide-squads disguised in foreign uniforms need not tempt us to scrutinize the Changing of the Guard with undue suspicion or to jump to the conclusion that the Canadian accent (one of the loveliest intonations in our language) is really Hochschule English, and in Norway the parachutists have not been hitherto successful.

I do not believe myself that a German platoon, disguised as Grenadier Guards, will one evening take over the protection of the Bank of England.

x x x

Our counter-espionage service GAL TWO .. SPIES OF THE .... in the last war was admittedly efficient. The methods then adopted, and even some of the officials who applied these methods, still remain. They are trained experts in protecting us against the activities of spies and sabotage, and they know from long experience what sort of people are likely to be employed as enemy agents, and what sort of people are not.

It is most improbable, for instance, that the Germans would employ in key positions people of German origin who have taken refuge in this country. I should regard it as unlikely that they would be so clumsy as to use those British subjects who in the past have been known either for their pro-German sympathies or for their devoted allegiance to Russia. Espionage is not conducted in that sort of way, since such individuals are already under suspicion, their correspondence and their visitors are subject to supervision, and their eventual loyalty to the National Socialist system is much in doubt.

In almost every case during the last war the agents and middlemen used by Germany in this country were either neutral citizens or else British traitors enjoying the local reputation of fanatical anti-Germans. — Harold Nicolson in The London Spectator.

Right and Wrong

Nazi invasion of The Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg clears the air. The instinctive response of free peoples will be "This is wrong." Even where thinking is in thrall to propaganda, an innate sense of justice should pierce the smoke screen of falsehood.

This passing of a moral judgment is essential. The world has come to the present predicament largely because it has permitted its thinking to become confused, because it has accepted the view that there is no difference between right and wrong, static power and active violence, between order and anarchy, defence and aggression.

Manchuria, Abyssinia, Spain, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Albania, Poland, Finland, Denmark, Norway—that history should have ended the slumbers even of the mesmerized. Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg—invaded on a pretext which can hardly carry conviction even to the censor-blinded German people—should leave no doubt on the score of right and wrong.

The fact that some right has lain on the aggressors' side has confused many. So long as it was possible to deal with that situation by reason, claims of injustice could be weighed. But once the way of violence was chosen, listening to them only facilitated new and greater injustices.

Only a blunted moral sense now can give any credence to the Nazis' claim that a plan which they alone knew about, by which Britain and France were supposed to attack Germany through Belgium and The Netherlands, justifies their invasion. If that were true—and every neutral country which borders on Germany understands why the Dutch and Belgians fortified their German border—there was still the recourse of waiting. Is the German army so weak or the Blitzkrieg machine so slow that it could not defend Germany from an attack through two neutral countries?

There is something wrong with that picture. Indeed the case is clear. Let Germany plead whatever extenuations she can, but let men able to hear the facts as freely reported recognize that this is aggression. Whatever their sense of responsibility or irresponsibility, let the moral judgment be clear and unclouded. Then whether they are close or far, whether they feel they should do anything about this sort of thing or not, they will be on firm ground for whatever action they choose.—Christian Sciense Monitor.

The Queen's Chemise

—Adolf Hitler has vowed that he will not take his uniform off until the war is won. We could have warned him about this sort of boasting. There was a Queen of Spain once who made a similar vow regarding her chemise. When she finally removed it a sort of coffee shade became fashionable, ungallantly called "Isabella" after her.—Exchange.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

There Are Many Causes of Constipation

"The commonest of all stomach and intestinal conditions is constipation or failure of the large bowel—colon—to get rid of its wastes. The great bulk of the lay public are slaves to the drug habit, cathartic habit, diet fancies and fads, the use of such and such meal. Millions are spent on foods and remedies for constipation, regardless of whether the constipation is due to bad habits, carelessness, or perhaps organic disease like partial obstruction or cancer."

"If the public would realize the danger of attempting to fool with one of the most important organs they possess, they would no more use inexpert management for that purpose than they would let a hammer and chisel mechanic work on their automobile engine."

I am quoting Dr. Martin E. Rehfuss, Philadelphia, Professor of Clinical Medicine, Jefferson Medical College, in Medical Clinics of North America.

While not less than half of the adult population are constipated, there are many causes for this condition and each case should be investigated for its cause, just as there are many reasons why a motor car will not start or run properly.

In outlining the various causes of constipation, some of those mentioned are: (a) heredity— in which the "dropped" bowel is often found, (b) poor or careless health habits—irregular meals, sitting or lying too much with loss of power of abdominal muscles so much needed in forcing wastes from bowel, (c) diet—not enough roughage, lack of fresh vitamins, (d) failure to go to stool when the call comes,—(e.g.) hurrying to catch train or other reason, (e) toilet seat too high prevents bringing thighs up to abdomen (Note—a block of wood or small bench on which feet can be placed when at stool will bring thighs closer to abdomen, (f) drug habit or enema habit which lower the muscular tone of the bowel, (g) psychic or emotional disturbances which cause spasm of the bowel and prevent wastes moving down and out of body, (h) obstructive causes due to the low position of the bowel in the abdomen.

If, then, constipation may be caused by the above and other conditions mentioned by Prof. Rehfuss, it would be wise for those afflicted to consult their physician and tell him about their various daily health habits as to sleep, food, exercise, diet, use of laxatives or enemas, and then if he thinks it necessary, undergo Xray and other methods of examination to learn the cause. When the cause is known, proper treatment naturally follows.

Respond to Force

Some drivers can never be made to drive carefully unless they realize that something drastic is going to happen to them. "Care and Courtesy" campaigns have no appeal to these.

"Care and courtesy be damned", said Colonel A. E. Kirkpatrick, Toronto Police Commissioner, at a conference held in Toronto last week to promote highway safety. "The kind of people we are talking about don't know anything about care and courtesy." Isn't this the truth?

Colonel Kirkpatrick said that safety campaigns required the velvet-gloved steel hand of enforcement to back them up. Let the careless driver become seized of the fact that he may lose his license or be prosecuted, or both, then, and only then, will he be inclined to drive with "care and courtesy."—St. Thomas Times Journal.

Bermuda in the Spring

(By Temple Manning)

Usually it is the thing we like best that is on the prohibited list. And this goes for travel as well as for other phases of our complex existence. Folks addicted to St. Moritz or North Africa in winter, Capri in spring, Cap d'Antibes in summer and Scotland for the shooting season must find substitutes now. But those of us who have the Bermuda habit can go right on, for Bermuda is decidedly on the travel list these days, what with American ships making the trip between the happy islands and New York.

One of the swell attributes of Bermuda is that it is such a nice place to visit no matter the season. But like many another delectable island, it is prettiest in Spring.

Pastels predominate in Bermuda's Spring wardrobe. Pink, the beautiful tint of the coral beaches; blue, the heavenly shade of the sky and water, and white are the stand-out colors. The pink beaches, over 150 of them, give one the impression of looking through rose-colored glasses. We like Coral Beach at Paget cliff, where nature has provided cabanas of coral rock that vie with the colors of bright beach umbrellas.

Coral Beach, Bermuda.

Our Large Garden

The islands are one large floral garden. As one bikes past the fairyland houses of pastel coral, there are glimpses of floral finery here and there. Giant morning glories, as blue as the sea, freesias in every shade, crimson hibiscus, pink oleander and other lovely flowers paint a spring picture. The famous lily fields, with their pure white blossoms, are abloom through May. There are few places in the world that offer such a floral treat.

But there's just as much color under the sea as there is on and above it. The best way to take a look-see at the lovely under-water landscapes is to don a diving helmet out near the aquarium and descend to the floor of the ocean. Curiously, more women make the under-sea journey than do members of the stronger sex. It is a thrilling travel experience and a novel one. The flora and coral formations in the submarine gardens are unique, as are the tropical fish that flit here and there on the bed of the tropical ocean.

Oleanders in Profusion

Rural Somerset is one of the prettiest parts of Bermuda. The oleanders bloom in such profusion along the pretty roadways that they seem to reach out to welcome the bike riders. It is funny that although the islands are sub-tropical, in Somerset there is the feeling and the look of the English countryside. It is as though a piece of Devonshire or Sussex had been dumped down in the southern latitudes.

Interesting spots, secluded and lovely, are Wale's Bay and Horseshoe Bay, which have swell, secluded beaches that are just right for picnics, and for honeymooners, too. It is nice to eat in the delightful garden of a 300-year-old place, a flower filled garden that slopes down to famous Riddell's Bay.

Bermuda really is a travel experience, and getting about by bike or shank's mare makes one better acquainted with the place.

Won't be Caught Napping by Nazi Parachute Troops

London, May 14—(CP-Cable)—British determination not to be caught napping by Nazi parachute troops was reflected today in the editorials, letters and articles in the Press. Anthony Eden's first public act as War Secretary promises to be early announcement of plans to meet such a menace.

The Mail said rifle corps would be formed from older men while The Herald forecast every Briton able to use a rifle soon would have the opportunity of serving in a special corps.

The Times was taken up with letters urging the enrolment and arming of volunteers. The letter writers included Sir Roderick Jones, President of Reuters News Agency and the Duke of Montrose.

The Chronicle, urging strong force to meet the possible menace said the government should discourage individual citizens attempting to deal with parachutists.

"The fact that civilian sharpshooting is held under International Law to be illegal may seem an academic point in a war with Hitler but it is unnecessary to give the Nazis an excuse for mass reprisals against prisoners," The Chronicle said.

Look Ahead With Ford Tractor

IT IS HARD to believe but when cultivating with the new Ford tractor and Ferguson cultivator there is no need for the operator to look back or watch his shovels. The cultivator follows the steering of the front wheels instantly and automatically because of its unique linkage. The operator simply sits and steers. The built-in hydraulic mechanism is used not only to lift and lower the cultivator when turning, but to keep the shovels at a predetermined depth in the ground. The cultivator, pictured above, can be attached in less than a minute. Independent rear wheel brakes make very short turns possible.

Helping Youth Through Puppy Love Stage

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

YOUR SON or daughter, as early as the age of 12 or 14, may suddenly take on behaviour which to you seems very strange. He or she may lose the usual interests, even lose appetite and grow dreamy or morbid.

A boy and girl so young, or later in their teens, may be so attracted to each other as to strive to be together as much as possible or permissible, walking side by side to and from school, through the halls at school, going together to the movies. Both may seem to be infatuated with the other, or just one of the two may have the experience all alone in the mind and heart. Indeed, the one with the most violent love interest in another might avoid the other or try to seem to do so.

Unwise Procedure

Unwise adults are inclined to make fun of these youngsters enraptured in their early romances. Some parents may forbid, or try to forbid, their being together, telling them they are too young to be so "serious and silly, being only babies still". Whether with a pair so young or with one older, the more the parents fuss about the case or try to break it up by their commands, the more they, as a rule, fire the mutual desire of the two to be together. Wise parents sit calmly, patiently, sympathetically on the sidelines.

Parents looking ahead while their son or daughter is quite young might build up ways and means of rendering these very early "heart cases" less likely and violent, by cultivating in the child wide interest in many playmates and enjoyment of them during his early childhood and increasing his mingling with many boys and girls just before and during early adolescence.

Ideally, the boy has "dates" with a number of girls, the girl with a number of boys, during the teens. It is possible for parents to influence the youngster early that this is a desirable objective in his social development.

"Regular Dates"

Early "regular dates" have the disadvantage of limiting social adaptation and enrichment of the youths involved; of rendering them selfish and less likable to others outside themselves; of leading often to the selection of life mate from a very limited range; and of marriage unduly early, perhaps, and consequent hampering of the education and vocational preparation of one or both of the youths.

"How may we know we are really in love?" is often asked in a high school forum. One good test is the probable degree to which each motivates the other to be less selfish and to struggle harder to attain long-cherished ideals; and how sure you are you will continue to be in love 20 or 30 years hence. But how is one supposed to reason when it all is so much a matter of the emotions? Perhaps the only time a youth or anybody else can reason clearly on this subject, if at all, is when he has no awareness of being in love.

The Stars Say

For Thursday, May 16

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

UNUSUAL and surprising activit may be looked or on this day, judging by the lunar and mutual aspects of inciting planets. There may be a very surprising turn of events, with much transpiring which may have a radical and far-reaching influence on the future life and fortunes. Much depends upon making a wise and benefic choice under this critical but progressive urge. The energies, abilities and emotions as well are under creative and dynamic stimuli. Important new projects, or extremely progressive programs, with the element of the novel, revolutionary or idealistic, are under thrilling insistence. Romance and adventure are in the air and youth must have its fling.

Those whose birthday it is are on the brink of a year of most thrilling and romantic adventure, with all things of a new, novel, unique or revolutionary cast being assured of probably spectacular fulfillment. Youth, modernism and audacity, whether in science, invention, wild forms of creative expression or emotional thrills, seem to clamor for attention or spectacular achievement. But there are some obstacles and opposition of the mighty to vanquish with trepidity and persistency. All progressive and speculative attempts seem to thrive.

A child born on this day should be richly endowed with talents of a rare order with intellectual, literary, scientific, inventive and creative skill to assure it renown or public aoclaim in any number of novel achievements or adventures. Audacious, progressive and romantic, it may have little co-operation from those in high places financially.

Helping Blond Look Her Best

By HELEN FOLLETT

WHEN THE yaller-headed girl gets out the old make-up box and starts to paint and calcimine her portrait, let her remember that she is working on a delicate background that calls for pigments of faint coloring. She can't be lavish with factory blushes or try out bold, dashing effects as can the brunette who can get away with make-up murder.

Rouge and powder must be daintily blended, no border lines allowed. Brilliant shades on lips and cheeks make the blonde baby look hard; they detract from the blue loveliness of her eyes. They shout. A noisy complexion is not according to beauty Hoyle, especially now when natural effects are the aim. Unless make-up is flattering it is a washout.

A deep crimson lipstick gives a better effect than the blazing red that some gilt-headed dollies effect. If eye shadows are used, rouge should be deleted. If blue is selected, it must be a shade that doesn't dim the blue of the eyes. Green lid smears, if faint, are effective. We may be an old fogey but we don't care for the new trick of carrying the shadows down over the eyelashes. Green winkers! Silly!

Avoid the black crayon for eyebrow extending. Too great a contrast to the fair skin. Use dark brown and be skimpy with it.

Let the plump lady who is trying to reduce consider how much cream and sugar she puts in tea and coffee. Both are adipose builders and one can easily get too much.

ILONA MASSEY. . . . .exercises great care in applying her make-up.

The habit of taking tea and coffee clear has taken off tonnage from many a figure that had too bundant curves.

For white bread and butter substitute unbuttered rye toast. Drink plenty of buttermilk; eat cottage cheese. Have a green salad once a day; it will fill you up, aid the work of the intestinal tract, improve your complexion.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Out of the Mailbag

Some of the letters I get are cheery, many are filled with troubles, a few are despondent, but all of them are interesting to me. From up here in Callander, they enable me to look into the windows of the world. Unfortunately, it is always difficult to be genuinely helpful in individual cases at long range, and I feel a particular inadequacy when I receive such a letter as came to me from one signing herself "Despondent Grandmother."

It told a pathetic story about a child, four-and-a-half years of age, who "Doesn't walk, or talk, or see very good. He was a premature baby, only weighed four pounds at birth. He is normal in size. Could you tell us any cure, or any doctor who could help us?"

I can't write to Despondent Grandmother personally, because she failed to give me a sufficient address. So I tell her here to take the child to any M.D. specializing in treatment of children. Any county or city medical society will refer her to one. If money is a factor, if doctor's bills cannot be met, then I urge her to take the child to one of the baby clinics located all over the country, and any of them would be glad to help free of charge. She can get a list of them from her State board of health or local medical society.

Of course, I cannot, from this letter, form any idea of the nature of the child's condition. One should know something of the mentality of the child something of his parents and something of his environment before attempting to diagnose.

Obviously, a child of four and a half years should be walking well, should be talking and its eyesight should be good. What causes the defects, only a careful physical examination can disclose.

The fact that while the child was premature, weighing only four pounds at birth, it today is of normal size, and indicates that the trouble may not be organic.

I have found a good many parents are too anxious to have their child walking and talking. If the child is a few months late saying words or if he is past the normal age when he begins to walk its family is all upset.

Of course, its unusual for a child not to be talking at four and a half years. Yet there are occasional cases in which a child gets pretty old before his flood gates of speech open. Ordinarily, walking begins when the child is a little over a year old. But some children don't walk until they are three or even four. I have even known a child to be almost five before walking.

Another possibility is that this grandchild has been isolated from other children and waited on and spoiled so much that it won't learn to do things for itself. I have seen cases suggesting this possibility. Persons just don't walk and talk automatically as they breathe and sleep. They must learn to walk and to talk and must want to keep doing them.

The Dionne Quintuplets were slow in learning normal language because they acquired a habit of conversing among themselves in a sort of gesture language. More self-sufficient than are most children, because there were so many of them and because most of their needs were anticipated or provided for, they didn't feel the need for conversation with adults. So we had to more or less force them to begin talking.

Whether the trouble with this grandchild is psychological or physical, only a doctor able to examine the child will know what, if anything, can be done to make the child develop normally. Hence my advice to the grandmother to seek out first hand advice.

SAUCE FRENCH TENDERLOINS WHILE FRYING

WHEN pork tenderloins are just about done, add half a teaspoonful of H. P. Sauce to the gravy in the frying pan. Stir it well; then dip up the gravy and pour it over the pieces of tenderloin two or three times as they finish cooking. This seasoning with sauce, while frying, brings out the full flavour of tenderloins—makes them extra delicious. All meats are more tasty—more appetizing—when H. P. Sauce is added, either while cooking or at the table.

H. P. is quite different from ketchups. It is far richer in flavour—goes farther. Try it yourself for your next meal. You can get grand results by using H. P. Sauce for flavouring stews, gravies, soups, salads, cheese and macaroni dishes, fish of all kinds and many other things.

What is the Reply to an Introduction?

"When one acknowledges an introduction, what is correct to say instead of the regular 'How do you do?'"

Over and over again this question is sent to me.

Undoubtedly, the reason so many people think they would like to substitute other words for the conventional phrase is their feeling that these words to acknowledge an introduction,' haven't much meaning. I grant this is true; for at the moment of introduction we aren't particularly concerned about how the other person "does."

Nevertheless, the fact remains that under all circumstances the correct reply to an introduction is "How do you do?" This is the phrase that must be used, no matter who is introduced to whom.

It is not the words you say when you reply to an introduction; it's the way you say them that counts. These everyday words can be given a charming personality by the pleasant way we voice them. Conversely, they can be said so that they come out like icicles—painfully casual, detached, impersonal or brusque.

How do you say these words when you are being introduced? Want to find out? Walk straight up to a long mirror in your house, put out your hand and say, "How do you do?" How do you like the way you say it? How do you think other people would like it? It really isn't the words you're saying, but the way you say them that gives life to the words. Whatever personality the words have you must give them.

"Alice in Wonderland", that book that tells us so many great truths, tells us a great truth about this:

"The question is," said Alice "whether you can make words mean so many different things."

"The question is," said Humpty Dumpty, "which is to be master.. that's all."

You can easily and gracefully be "master" of your saluation.

Double Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

At a double wedding when each of the girls (sisters) have different maids of honor, does the father escort both sisters up the aisle, or is it true that the father escorts only the older sister? What is the usual procedure of the processional of a double wedding?

Florence

The usual procedure is for all the ushers to walk first in the procession two by two. (Half of the ushers are friends of the first bridegroom; half are friends of the second bridegroom.) Then follow the bridesmaids of the older sister, walking in pairs, and then her maid of honor, walking alone. Then comes the older sister, leaning on her father's arm. Then come the bridesmaids of the second sister, her maid of honor, and last the younger bride on the arm of her brother or uncle or nearest male relative.

However, it is correct for both brides to be escorted by their father—the older sister on his right arm, the younger sister on his left arm. However, the aisle of the church must be wide enough to accommodate this arrangement!

When this is the plan, the ushers walk first, two by two. Then all the bridesmaids, two by two. Then the maids of honor either walk together, or alone. Then the father with his two daughters.

In the recessional, the older sister and her husband turn and go down the aisle first. The younger sister and her husband follow.

4 O'clock Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

To a church wedding at four o'clock, with a reception following at the bride's home, what type of dress should I wear? And should the men wear business suits or Tuxedo suits?

E. N.

To this afternoon wedding you should wear your "very best" day dress or suit—street-length skirt. Most important are good-looking and correct accessories — hat, gloves, purse, and so forth.

A Tuxedo suit is not correct for a day-time wedding. If the men don't wear formal day clothes — cutaway coats, dark striped trousers and appropriately formal accessories—they wear business suits, preferably dark blue.

Chapel Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am going to be married in a chapel. There will be no reception. I would like to invite just a few people to come to the chapel to witness the ceremony. Would this be correct? If so, should my mother write notes?

Dorothy

Yes, it is correct to invite a few guests to witness the ceremony, and it is correct not to have any reception. Your choice about these plans determines the propriety of the plans. That is, it is correct to have any kind of wedding that the couple wish to have, so long as the details of the wedding are carried out consistently with the type of wedding chosen.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Does He Really Love Her?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The young man I've been going with for the past year has told me that he loves me, but he never mentions marriage. At the present he is not employed, but he could, at least say something about the future, when things would be better for him. He has often said that he would never marry until he is able to take care of a wife. But I think I ought to be considered in the matter.

I have a very good position and would be able to keep on after we marry. If he would only say a word about marriage in the future, I should be content, and would feel like saving for the future. Other men don't seem to interest me at all. And wondering as I do, makes me feel miserable.

M.

The moden young woman does not accept her fate in this patient manner, and the days when love affairs drifted for years are happily past. I see no harm in intimating to this young man that some suggestion as to the future would be only fair to you both.

Jealousy Often a Cure

Dear Miss Fairfax:

In my second year at college, I'm very much in love with a girl with whom I have been going for nearly a year. I always thought she favored me, but lately she has been out several times with another boy at school. Although she lets me come to see her and take her out, I know as well as everyone else that she cares for this other boy more than she does for me.

Do you advise me dropping her, or shall I try to win her back?

M. A. C.

If you wouldn't worry so much about getting her back, you would be more likely to succeed in doing so. It's a sorry thing to say, but few young people value that of which they are certain. Pursuit exercises a sort of magic which, in later years, the normal men and women are glad to exchange for some sense of permanence and security.

Go about and make new friends, and if she sees how popular you are with other girls, this girl friend is more likely to want to have you back.

Old Wound Opened by Husband

Dear Miss Fairfax:

What would you do if you had a husband like mine? He's always reminding me that I made an unfortunate mistake before I met him. I was square enough with him to tell him about it, when he asked me to marry him, but his reply was that he loved me and didn't care. All I can say is "well, dear, you know I told you about it, and you said you didn't care."

I'm 26, have been married six years, and have a daughter of four. I've always been a loving and faithful wife, and try to make him happy. The house is well kept and meals are on time.

He is a good husband in every other respect, but his sly remarks about this one false step hurt me worse than if he struck me, or was a heavy drinker. If he keeps this up, I shall surely hate him.

I was only a youngster of 16 when this unfortunate thing happened. I don't think I deserve such treatment from him. Do you?

Jill

It was very square and honorable of you to tell your husband of this one lapse in your earlier life, and I don't believe he realizes how ungenerous is this constant reminder of something he should forget, as he forgave it when you told him.

Brooklyn Dodgers Back in Lead After Beating Cincinnati Reds 6 to 3 in Thirteen Innings

Reds Protest Game on Play in Seventh in Which They Claim Ball Hit Umpire

FELLER KNOCKED OUT

Al Simmons Delivers Pinch Single to Defeat Indians by 9-7

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

Brooklyn Dodgers can't be accused of dodging the issue.

They went to grips with Cincinnati Reds yesterday and came up with a 6-5 13-innings victory that put them back into first place in the National League. That's about all even the Flatbush fans could ask. Three days in second place isn't a very heavy sentence.

In yesterday's game the Reds started Bucky Walters, the sinkerball specialist who has won five and not been defeated. The Dodgers went right to work on him for two runs on a single, a walk and a triple by Dolph Camilli. After Cincinnati tied up the score, Brooklyn bounced back with two more runs in the seventh.

When Cincinnati tied again, in the ninth and took the lead in the 10th on Mike McCormick's homer, the Dodgers kept battling. They scored a run on two singles sandwiched around an infield out. And finally in the 13th they pushed across the winning run.

Reds Protest Game

The Reds protested the game over a play in the seventh inning. A grounder by Charley Gilbert seemed to strike Umpire Bill Klem. Second baseman Lonnie Frey fielded the ball, but Gilbert beat the throw to first and Durocher was allowed to go from second to third. Manager Bill McKechnie claimed Durocher should have been held on second base on Gilbert's hit, but Klem maintained the ball did not strike him.

It took another extra inning struggle for Boston Red Sox to edge out the Chicago White Sox 7-6 and Jimmie Foxx was the hero for the American League leaders. His second home run of the game and eighth of the season came in the 10th and decided the outcome.

Cleveland Indians saw the margin between first and second place widened as they lost a 9-7 hitting fray to the Philadelphia Athletics when Al Simmons delivered a pinch single with the bases loaded in the ninth. Bob Feller started for the Tribe, but gave up in the fourth. Hal Trosky and Ken Keltner hit homers for Cleveland.

Dutch Leonard Wins

Gerald Walker took charge of Washington's test against Detroit Tigers and brought the Senators a 4-2 victory with a two-run homer in the sixth. The victory was credited to Dutch Leonard.

Pittsburgh Pirates pounced on New York Giants 7-2 to end the Terrymen's six-game winning streak and even an old score against Cliff Melton. Elbie Fletcher's homer with the bases loaded in the sixth decided the issue. Philadelphia Phillies moved over the Cardinals into fifth place in the National League with a 4-0 shutout. Hugh Mulcahy manipulated against the Redbirds.

FIRST BASEMAN OF NEWARK BEARS GLAD TO BE BACK

Ed Levy Hitting at .522 Clip After Being Sent Down to Minors by Phillies

ONLY TWO GAMES

Rain Washed Out Baltimore-Toronto and Jersey City-Rochester Games

(By The Associated Press)

Ed Levy, first baseman of the Newark Bears, acts as though he were glad to get back to the International League, and at the rate he's hitting the Bears are certainly glad to have him back.

"Big Ed" up on option with the Philadelphia Nationals, wasn't very impressive during spring training, and couldn't break into the Phillies' lineup after the season started. Manager Doc Protho sent him back to Newark last week and since his arrival he's been batting at a .522 clip.

Yesterday Levy helped the Bears to an 8-5 victory over Buffalo Bisons by slamming out a homer and a pair of singles and driving in three runs. The Bears had a total of 14 hits off three Bison pitchers. George Washburn of Newark, although nicked for nine base knocks, showed good form in the pinches. He left nine Bisons stranded on the bases. The victory enabled the Bears to climb over Buffalo into fourth place in the standings.

In the only other league game played yesterday Syracuse Chiefs scored their second straight triumph over Montreal 8-3. Bobby Porter paced a 13-hit attack on a trio of Montreal hurlers, with two doubles, two singles and a base on balls in five trips to the plate. Lloyd Dietz yielded 11 safe blows but left 10 Royals on the bases.

Rain washed out the Baltimore-Toronto and Jersey City-Rochester games.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was trying to rub some spots off the front of the car in front of the house, and some man stopped driving passed in a car with gold printing on the door saying Sparrow Car Corporation.

Being a kind of a fat man always smiling whether there was anything funny or not, saying to pop, Blackmore's my name, I see you're driving a 1935 Sparrow, how would you like to trade it in for this year's model.

Well, this little car has stood a lot of nonsense from me in the pasted 5 years. I'd feel like a skunk offering somebody money to take it away, pop said, and the man said, Just let me give you a small idea of some of the features of the new Sparrow. Take the paint job alone. It's done in triple-chrome roxite finish in any shade you desire. It has the new super streamline from hood to rear bumper, it's 10 inches lower than it is wide, it's equipped with micromesh 2 finger gear shift and it has the Sparrow exclusive interior and exterior push button hood control, he said.

Is that so? pop said, and the man said, Yes, and that's not the half of it. It has plitex upholstery throughout, adjustible 5 position duoswitch front seat, 4 syncroflash windows that work together from a single monoply lever, chromocoil springs with reverse jar action, and an automatic 4 sillender intake engine, he said.

Does it go sideways? pop said, and the man said How do you mean, no car does that unless it's skidding.

O yes, I wouldn't be intristed in any car that hasn't got the new innerweave sideways gear shift, pop said. Well, thanks for stopping, anyway, he said.

And he kept on rubbing and the man kept on going.

KING'S PLATE AN OPEN RACE SAYS EXPERTS

Two-Year-Old Performances of Entries Not Very Reliable Dope

LIKE DARK COMET

G. M. Hendrie's Colt Earns Respect Through Winning Final Race Last Year

Toronto, May 15—(CP) — The task of selecting a favourite for the 81st running of the King's Plate here Saturday and making it stick has followers of form and good breeding stymied. They were puzzled before they had delved very far into a mass of facts and figures.

Two-year-old performances usually provide a bulk of information which makes the task comparatively easy. Horometer, Archworth, Bunty Lawless and Goldlure are recent winners that were named juvenile champions by wide margins.

The picture is clouded this year. A topsy-turvy two-year-old campaign has baffled form followers. None of the 12 thoroughbreds expected to start in the mile and a furlong gallop for the King's 50 guineas can lay clear claim to the crown. The victor in one race fell by the wayside in the next. The eligibles beat each other so often the final result was indecisive.

Dark comet, owned by G. M. Hendrie of Hamilton, tentatively has been installed favourite. Sentiment swing toward the gelding after victory in a mile and 70 yards race, the Mrs. Orpen cup and saucer, final 1939 juvenile test.

Rounds to Form Nicely

Then, too, he has rounded to form nicely. So has the rest of the field and the margin favouring Dark Comet is not secure. Jack McIntyre's Hood, Harry Giddings' Ring Wise, J. E. Frowde Seagram's Silvos, Parkwood Stable's Frobisher, Dave Garrity's Katie Bud and H. C. Hatch's Curwen must be considered. A really outstanding distance trial by any of them could install a new choice.

Addled by past performance figures, form followers turned to breeding for an answer. Again they were stalled. Three of the thoroughbreds are by the same sire. Marine, son of Man o' War and holder of the Canadian mile record, sired Frobisher, Hood and Katie Bud. Two others, Curwen and Ring Wise, were sired by Osiris II.

Silvos' breeding added more confusion. The dam is Silver Wedding—the sire either Marine or Osiris II.

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

DID YOU KNOW THAT there have been but two repeaters in the National League in over fifteen years? . . . The Giants in '36 and '37 and the Cardinals in '30 and '31 were the old dual season winners since 1924. . . .and that Rogers Hornsby, Hans Wagner and Ty Cobb were the only big league batters to lead their leagues on three successive years or more? . . . That Wagner lead the National League from 1903 to '10 inclusive and Hornsby '20 to '25 inclusive, while Cobb led the American League from 1907 to '15 inclusive and each of this trio led their respective leagues on several other occasions as well. . . . And that Harry Batstone with a batting average of .427 in 1925 amassed the best single batting average ever amassed by a C.O.B.L. player. . . . And that the Quinte Tennis Club is contemplating a banner season on their Dufferin Ave. courts? . . And for an evening of downright fun drop out to the Belleville Golf Club tomorrow evening and watch their champion trundlers swat that little white pill around, or will they?

Ever since Belleville passed out of the senior baseball realm and the C.O.B.L., the diamond game has been struggling along. And when we say struggling, we mean just that. The old game of baseball, once a tower of strength in Belleville's sporting picture, has fallen on ill days and one of the main reasons for this condition is because the old teams of the late '20's wouldn't give the up-and-coming kids an opportunity to break into the game. Now baseball finds itself a practical orphan along the shores of the Bay of Quinte and despite arguments to the contrary the only path left to insure the future of the game is a minor city league. However, all efforts to put this idea over locally have fallen on deaf ears, but there is still one ray of baseball sunshine left. This evening at the Collegiate Campus the season's initial ball practice will be held and the future activities of the game hinge solely upon the response of Belleville's baseball-minded youths tonight. In the meantime the Bay of Quinte League will convene this evening, when the schedule may be drafted.

Do you remember when Jimmy Russell, Toronto sculler, swept to victory in record time in the United States Henley at Philadelphia three years ago today? Wearing the double blue jersey of the Argonaut Rowing Club, Russell covered the mile and 5-16 in seven minutes, 31.4 seconds, shattering the record of 7:45.1 set by W. Rutherford of Princeton University in 1934.

At the advanced age of 39, the veteran Ted Lyons, of the Chicago White Sox, is serving his 18th season in the American League, all of them with the same club. Today at an age when most ball players are in the bone pile, the former Baylor University athlete is still able to pitch winning ball. He's one of the marvels of the game. True, he only pitches once a week now but each performance is a masterpiece.

With the opening of outdoors sports only a week hence, sport lovers can content themselves with professional wrestling this Friday night at the Arena. Friday night has become a fixed date for wrestling in Belleville with goodly numbers attending these weekly bouts from far distant points. The boys who plough the good earth are ardent wrestling fans and take their grapplers as seriously as their meals. However, it will be interesting to watch the reaction of the patrons this week when Pedro Valdez, the lithe Mexican grappler, meets Stan Luther, the agile Montreal lightheavy, in the main bout, as both boys are favourites with the local wrestling clientele.

"Did you ever stop to consider why so many players make good with clubs like the Phillies?" asks the Cincinnati Inquirer. "It is because the Phillies have nothing to lose, so they put the kids in there —as do the Bees, the A's and the Browns. So, stars are born."

Bill Brandt, publicity director of the National League, passes along the following word of caution to rookie pitchers making their debuts:

"If the papers announce you are going to pitch and the bleachers are jammed, don't get too chesty. Maybe the fans just figure it's a great day to get a home run ball to take home for a souvenir."

The latest softball scandal to go the rounds finds Harold Reid, hard-hitting third sacker with Corby's for the past few seasons, having turned up at the Oilers' practices this week. Elongated Art Cole has also deserted the ranks of Skipper Gerald Barriage's outfit to line-up with the Bawden boys. Could it be that the boys are anxious to play with Johnny Bawden? In the meantime Barriage says he's not worrying and promises to trot out at least four, if not five, new faces in the Corby jerseys on opening day. "That's the spirit, Hunk."

Later news—We just heard that Harold Reid signed with Corby's early today. Also that Skipper Barriage is most jubilant over the showing of three new youngsters who have been working out with Corby's under cover of late.

Although fillies are seldom selected for early season wins, Katie Bud is being favoured as a potential King's Plate winner. However, Dark Comet and Frobisher will have to be taken care of before the filly wins. All of which reminds us that the ban on horse racing in the Old Country has been lifted and there'll be flat racing at Manchester today.

SPORT SPICE—Vancouver, Canadian Senior Cage Champs, flew home from Montreal after winning the title. . . . Henry Armstrong and Lew Jenkins, the newly - crowned lightweight champ, meet in the Polo Grounds July 17th. . . . Remember Goody Rosen, the Toronto boy who put so much fight into the Dodgers in the spring of '39? . . . He's been sold by Brooklyn to the Syracuse Chiefs. . . . While Freddie Hutchinson, the $70,000 Detroit beauty was sold to Buffalo where he will toil as a moundsman. . . . Wes Ferrell, veteran Major League pitcher, was given his unconditional release from Brooklyn yesterday. Gananoque, once a stronghold of canoeing, has withdrawn from the Canadian Canoe Association this year. . . . Red Townsend's Juniors took a 10-2 beating from the Air Force softballers last night. . . . "The Flyers are the best softball team I've seen in this section of the province in years," quoth Skipper Townsend today.

SWITZERLAND'S

"The protection of the neutrality and independence of Switzerland have been assured by the placing of our armed forces in their posts".

The forces referred to include not only the army, but anti-aircraft corps in which are enrolled all women and men too old or otherwise unfit for military service, but who can fire a rifle.

Foreign observers estimate the regular army at 600,000 men, the home guard at 200,000.

Fingers on Triggers.

Basel, May 15 (AP).—Swiss soldiers guarding the northern frontiers of their country kept their fingers literally on their machine-gun triggers today as German troops "practiced" spanning the Rhine River with pontoon bridges.

For the third time in three days, Nazi engineers early this morning threw a bridge across the Rhine near the entrance to Lake Constance, where Germany holds a narrow strip of land on the south bank hemmed in by Swiss territory.

These manoeuvres, coupled with many signs of German troop concentrations north of the Swiss border, strengthened fears here that Germany might supplement her drive through Belgium and the Netherlands by attempting to strike at France through Switzerland.

Fears of German Plans.

These fears apparently were shared by the British and French legations at Berne, which were reported to have burned official papers last night.

Some employees of both legations left Berne for Geneva yesterday with other records.

Switzerland, meanwhile, with a large part of her army of 600,000 men massed along the German border, extended precautionary measures against "fifth column" activities.

In Zurich, Basel, Berne, Lausanne, Geneva and other cities police enforced a federal law requiring all foreigners to surrender arms in their possession.

Rifles Taken From Foreigners

By midnight last night the police in Geneva alone had collected 730 rifles and pistols from about 300 foreigners.

Militarized police, wearing steel helmets and carrying rifles, stood with soldiers on the outskirts of Berne checking the papers of all persons in incoming automobiles.

In Geneva and Zurich police rounded up foreigners whose papers were found out of order.

Every bridge within 100 miles of the frontiers was mined, and well-armed troops guarded all radio stations, as well as telegraph and telephone centres.

Watching Italy

Paris, May 15 (CP Havas) — Two French Foreign Affairs commentators—Colrat in the newspaper Excelsior and Mme. Genevieve Tabouis in L'Oeuvre—reported today that Italy might at any moment enter the war on Germany's side.

"According to certain trustworthy information, Italy's entry in the war on Germany's side is no longer subject to the slightest doubt," Colrat wrote.

"The only question, according to this view, is when Mussolini will decide to force the Allied blockade and to draw part of the French forces to the southeast of our country."

Mme. Tabouis said foreign observers in Berlin found high Nazis there convinced the time had come for Italy to act.

"The Nazi view is that sooner would have been premature and that after the great battle will be too late," she said.

Swiss Minister Lodges Protest

Rome, May 15 (CP Havas)—Paul Ruegger, Swiss Minister in Rome, was forced to appeal to police today when Fascist demonstrators forcibly prevented legation servants removing anti-Allied posters plastered on the walls of the degation building.

The Minister subsequently lodged a protest with the Italian government.

Ruegger immediately ordered the removal of the offending stickers when he discovered them pasted on the facade of the legation building in Via Barnaba Oriani. The posters were finally removed, but only after the envoy appealed to the police.

Fascist demonstrators complained that Ruegger spoke to his wife in French.

J. A. GLEN CHOSEN AS SPEAKER OF COMING SESSION

Marquette Member Will Replace St. Pierre Casgrain While Thomas Vien Will be Deputy Speaker

SLASH ESTIMATES

Ottawa, May 15 (CP).—With the raging European conflict foremost in their minds, members of Canada's new parliament assemble tomorrow under the grim shadow of war for a session which will see momentous problems faced and grave decisions made.

The extent of the dominion's war effort shapes up as a major issue before the legislators, with the government planning to step up Canada's contribution to the Allies and the official Conservative opposition also determined to press for immediate action along this line.

J. A. Glen (Lib., Marquette) was chosen for Speaker and Thomas Vien (Lib., Montreal-Outremont) for Deputy Speaker. This nomination is tantamount to election as the endorsation of the Commons, given a few hours before the official opening of parliament, is a mere formality.

Practically all government departments have slashed their estimates for ordinary expenditures to enable more money to be devoted to war work. Total estimates for ordinary expenditures are expected to be less than $500,000,000. Last year they were $550,000,000. War expenditures are over and above this amount and probably will run $500,000,000 in the current fiscal year.

The main estimates are expected to be tabled early in the session.

Details of the government's new policies will not be disclosed until the throne speech is read at the opening, but it is learned from a high ministerial authority that a short but weighty program is planned.

One measure probably will relate to obtaining the necessary constitutional power for enactment by parliament of some form of unemployment insurance. Farm settlement, health and education will be other subjects dealt with and the report of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial relations, to be tabled tomorrow, will lead to debate.

In addition to ordinary peacetime financial problems, parliament also is faced with questions relating to raising money to finance the war.

Beaverbrook Thought Good Man For Job

London, May 15—(CP Cable) — The next-door neighbor to Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express, the Daily Telegraph, said today that "there could hardly be a better choice" than that of the Canadian-born publisher as Minister of aircraft production.

Other newspapers in Fleet Street joined in the approval.

Asserting that it is superflous to discuss the new government appointments in detail, the Telegraph said that "as one of the new Ministers comes from Fleet Street, which has the best means of estimating his powers, we may offer a warm welcome to the decision which has made Lord Beaverbrook as Minister of aircraft production."

"It is a new office and an office needed most urgently. His great ability, his originality and resourcefulness warrant the confidence that he will succeed in a post where success can do much to shorten the war."

The Daily Mail called the appointment "admirable."

Describing it as a "bold and imaginative experiment" the News Chronicle said that Lord Beaverbrook combines personal charm with a capacity for ruthlessness and rapid decision such as few men possess, and that he has now been given an opportunity to be of the highest service to the state.

The Daily Express made no reference to the appointment of its publisher in its editorial columns, but carried simply a headline over its story of the new appointees: "Lord Beaverbrook joins the government."

Air Commodore E. W. Stedman, Member of the Air Council for Equipment and Supply

Air Commodore Ernest Walter Stedman, who won the order of the British Empire by keeping airplanes in the air under difficult conditions during the First Great War, now stands back of all the equipment and supplies for Canada's new generation of war birds.

The Air Commander is the man who makes the decisions in all matters of aeronautical engineering and design in connection with the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan. He is responsible for construction, inspection during construction, assembly and maintenance of all supplies, from buttons to bombers, needed for the air training plan.

A scholarly, meticulous aviation enthusiast, he has specialized in such work since the last war. His job is one of the biggest in a giant scheme that demands men who can handle big jobs.

He earned the O.B.E. in the 1914-18 conflict as a Station Engineer by keeping supply depots going under conditions of open warfare when they were possible targets for enemy raids. It is that same genius for organization that enables him to handle his new assignment.

Born in England in 1888, Air Commodore Stedman was a schoolboy in Maidstone when he decided to become an engineer. He worked in factories and shops when he was 15 and went to school evenings.

In this manner he won a scholarship and after working as a sales engineer, he went into aeronautical engineering. On the outbreak of the First Great War he was attached to the Royal Naval Air Service for design and inspection work.

Later he went to France where he won the Order of the British Empire by keeping allied aircraft in action. He wound up the war in Norfolk grooming new types of British planes.

Epic Flight Technician.

During the early peacetime years, Stedman served as chief of the technical staff of th Handley-Page aircraft firm. When the Daily Mail offered its $50,000 prize for the first east-west transAtlantic flight, Stedman was sent to Newfoundland with the Handley-Page entry.

It is history that the British aviators Alcock and Brown in June, 1919, won the prize but it was that trip to Newfoundland that brought Stedman to Canada. The Handley-Page entry was enroute to New York when the plane was forced down in Nova Scotia. It took Stedman months to repair the plane and during that time Canada took hold of him.

In 1920 he became technical director of the Canadian Air Board and when the Royal Canadian Air Force was formed he became Wing Commander, aiding in the R.C.A.F. development as it co-operated with other government branches in the peacetime job of exploration, photographic mapping and generally opening up unexplored areas by air.

ANNOUNCING a Better Gasoline

PREMIUM PERFORMANCE AT A NON-PREMIUM PRICE!

What Makes RED INDIAN Better?

The pump measures only gallons : : : it tells you how much fuel is going into your tank. But there are other important measurements of gasoline value besides quantity. There is Octane Rating, for one, which determines anti-knock quality, and which, in the new Red Indian Gasoline, puts its value way up. There's Volatility too, which can't be measured or rated, but which, in Red Indian, is so high it ensures quick starting, easy, even firing and flashing pick-up all the time! Of course it costs more to make a gasoline with these extra measures of value, but they're all in the new Red Indian and it still sells at the regular price!

In step with the most up-to-date developments in gasoline refining, McColl-Frontenac now introduces RED INDIAN—A NEW NON-PREMIUM GASOLINE—with volatility and anti-knock qualities heretofore obtainable only in gasolines sold at a higher price. You have to try RED INDIAN GASOLINE to believe that a non-premium motor fuel can give such smooth power—such easy starting—so many miles per gallon—without knock or "ping". With RED INDIAN—you'll feel the difference in the first mile . . . and from there on, for endless happy miles.

RESIGNS AS EDITOR OF 'LUMBERMAN'

Mr. George B. Van Blaricon Has Had Long Career in Journalism

Mr. G. B. Van Blaricom, Editor of the Canada Lumberman, has resigned his position, according to the announcement made in this month's issue by the publishers who state that Mr. Van Blaricom's ill health has "forced him to resign as editor and that his resignation has been accepted with profound regret. Thus the pen is laid down by perhaps the most able and popular editor in the long history of Canada's pioneer lumber industry and one whose outstanding qualities have left their impress upon the business paper field.

"Mr. Van Blaricom has not enjoyed the best of health for several years, and during the past twelve months has been intermittently confined to his home. His desire to keep in close touch with his many friends in the lumber business would not let him relax his arduous contacts, and it was not until his physicians insisted upon a long and complete rest that he would admit that he was not as young in body as he was in spirit.

"'Van,' as he was known to his wide circle of business associates and friends, joined the Canada Lumberman over twenty-two years ago and his genial personality and wide knowledge of the business and those engaged therein will be greatly missed."

Mr. Van Blaricom is a native of Sidney Township and lived in Belleville in his early years. He was associated with newspapers including the Peterborough Review. He is a frequent visitor to Belleville.

AT THE BELLE

"Vigil in the Night"

Deviating from the customary doctor-nurse picture, RKO Radio's "Vigil in the Night," now on the Belle screen accurately presents the inside story of a nurse's duties as well as the drama of the protagonist's romantic ordeals.

Starring Carole Lombard, Brian Aherne and Anne Shirley, the story is told from a nurse's standpoint, with two hospitals in England supplying the backgrounds. With A. J. Cronin, a noted doctor-author writing the original story, the authenticity of the dramatic situation is unquestionable.

A. J. Cronin is one of the better known of the medical men who have turned to literature, his "The Citadel" having achieved wide popularity as a novel as well as a screen offering. A distinguished Scots physician who had a big London practice before he became a writer, Cronin draws on his wide experience for his stories and atmosphere, and in "Vigil in the Night" he has achieved an unusual degree of realism.

As further evidence of the authenticity of technical detail contained in the RKO Radio film, a recent issue of "R.N.", journal of registered nurses. printed an article by Nurse Luscomb who saw "Vigil in the Night" in production. She brings out the fact that the film is the first to depict the nursing sisterhood sincerely and accurately.

Produced and directed by George Stevens, "Vigil in the Night" is laid in present day England and revolves around the experiences of a loyal, conscientious nurse, her sister and a humanitarian doctor. Julien Mitchell. Robert Coote. Brenda Forbes. Rita Page. Ethel Griffes and Emily Fitzroy have important supporting soles.

Funny Penner Comedy

Hand-tailored for the inimitable talents of Joe Penner, popular film and radio comedian, "Millionaire Playboy", the added laugh feature, promises to hit a new hilarity high in Penner comedies.

Penner is cast in the role of a young man who has never experienced the thrill of love because ever since his cradle, girls' kisses have made him hiccup violently. Joe wants desperately to be cured, and his friend takes him to a resort hotel that is full of oomph girls—all of them eager to kiss the lad who, they have been told, is a playboy millionaire.

Joe innocent of all this intrigue and experiencing the (to him) new and startling sensation of falling in love with Linda, but still returning kisses with hiccups, stumbles into one screwy situation after another. From these he finally emerges as the hero of the hour, the winner of Linda's heart, and conqueror of the hiccups!

Engaged with Joe Penner in his mad flight from the hiccup jinx are, besides Linda Hayes, Russ Brown, Fritz Feld, Tom Kennedy, Granville Bates and Arthur Q. Bryan.

Sea Battle for Narvik

Actual films, "Sea Battle for Narvik." Dramatic dash into action. British destroyers led by battleship Warspite speed up Narvik Fjord, trapping Nazi destroyers and troop ships scenes photographed by British naval cameramen under fire, show bombardment and running fight with seven Nazi sinkings. These scenes are shown in the Belle News of the Hour, which includes the running of the 1940 Kentucky Derby.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Within the Law"

"Within the Law," Bayard Veiller's heart-griping drama of a girl who attempts to "get even with society", is the next attraction at the Capitol Theatre.

Ruth Hussey, who has appeared in New York Guild plays and more recently in pictures, has her first leading role as Mary Turner, the character created by Jane Cowl in the original stage play. Tom Neal, also a former Guild player, appears opposite her in his initial dramatic lead. Other principals include Paul Kelly, William Gargan, Paul Cavanagh, Rita Johnson, Samuel S. Hinds, Lynne Carver, Sidney Blackmer, Jo Ann Sayers and Ann Morriss.

The story concerns Mary Turner, a salesgirl in a department store who is sent to prison for a theft which she did not commit. In the penitentiary she meets Aggie, played by Rita Johnson, who belongs to a gang of crooks outside. Mary studies law in the prison library and is an apt scholar.

When she is released, Mary joins Aggie and her gang, determined to get revenge from the store owner who railroaded her behind bars. She now understands how to defeat the law, yet keep within its limits. The gang is highly successful until Neal, as the department store owner's son, falls in love with Mary.

He becomes involved with her in a crime and is caught by the police. The girl suddenly finds that revenge is not sweet and that her love for him is greater than anything else. The gang leader, who also loves her, played by Paul Kelly, steps in courageously and shoulders the guilt.

And on the same program Zane Grey's

"The Light of Western Stars"

Roaring out of the action-filled pages of one of Zane Grey's most notable books, "The Light of Western Stars," a film noteworthy for thrills and romance, marked by spine-tingling chases and bloodcurdling gun battles.

"The Light of Western Stars" is being hailed as an outstanding Western film, not only because of its exciting story, but because of its excellent characterizations. Victor Jory, Jo Ann Sayers, Russell "Lucky" Hayden, Morris Ankrum, Noah Beery, Jr., J. Farrell MacDonald, Ruth Rogers and several other outdoor favorites portray roles which are right in keeping with the cactus.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Slightly Honorable"

Pat O'Brien, Ruth Terry and Edward Arnold in "Slightly Honorable" (as funny a picture as ever made) is now showing at the McCarthy theatre, in addition (for added laughing purposes only) is a twenty minute comedy which brings back to the screen such old-time favorites as Ben Turpin, The Keystone Cops, Mack Sennett's Bathing Beauties, Ramon Novarro and Marie Prevost, the comedy is entitled "Small Town Idol" and we urge you to see it. Latest Fox movietone news events and Dave Apollon and his band in a smart musical revue complete the program, which is one that for real entertainment, from start to finale, is swell.

"In Old Missouri"
"The Covered Trailer"

Two excellent laugh hits, The Higgins Family in "The Covered Trailer" and the Weaver Brothers and Elviry, famous radio, stage and screen stars in the musicalcomedy "In Old Missouri" will start next at the McCarthy theatre and on the same program will be shown chapter eight of "The Shadow" the screen's new serial sensation.

REPORTS RECORD SALES

JOHN IRWIN

President of Canadian Oil Companies, Limited, who states that sales of this Company's products for the first four months of this year reached an all-time high. This increase follows a large-scale program of development initiated by Mr. Irwin on his election to the presidency a year ago.

CANADIAN OIL SALES RECORD SHARP GAINS

John Irwin, President, Outlines Progress of Expansion Program — Endorses Newspaper Advertising

Montreal, May 15 — Showing sharp increases over last year, sales of products of Canadian Oil Companies, Limited, were higher, both in dollars and in volume, during the first four months of 1940, than in any corresponding period in the company's history, according to a statement made by John Irwin, President of the company, in an interview here today.

"Business to date this year has been excellent," said Mr. Irwin, "and, as we are now in the process of introducing several new products to the Canadian public, we look for further increases as the year progresses."

Queried as to construction activities with which the company is at present proceeding, Mr. Irwin replied that these include large scale improvements and alterations to the refinery at Petrolia, Ontario, the erection of additional storage tanks for the storage of crude oil and gasoline; and the laying of a new 17-mile pipe-line from the refinery to Froomfield the company's water-port on the banks of the St. Clair River.

"To the best of my knowledge," said Mr. Irwin, "this is the first pipe-line construction undertaken in Eastern Canada in many years. The money which we are spending on this and other projects indicates our confidence in the future of the oil industry in this country. I might also add that work on the modernization of our marketing outlets, laid out according to a well defined plan, is steadily going forward."

Turning to the company's sales promotion program, Mr. Irwin stressed the fact that the bulk of the company's advertising appropriation for 1940 will be spent in newspapers.

"While all forms of advertising have their merits," he said, "it is my opinion that newspapers must always play a leading role in any well-rounded-out advertising and sales promotion plan. After taking over the direction of this company last year, one of my first decisions was to make every advertising dollar work as effectively as possible. A result of this decision is the newspaper advertising campaign on which we are at present embarking."

Pat O'Brien and Ruth Terry who are featured with Edward Arnold in the comedy-drama "Slightly Honorable," which is now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

Walter H. Reeves, of this city, and who is considered one of the best dog judges on this continent, finds his services very much in demand during the present month. On Saturday next, Mr. Reeves will act as the chief judge at the Quebec Kennel Dog Show in Montreal, which will be presented as a patriotic venture this year.

The largest dog show in the world will open on May 24th., when the Morris and Essex show of all breeds of dogs will be presented at the Giralda Farms, New Jersey. ## Only Minor Changes In Produce Prices

Toronto, May 15.—Changes were minor on a generally quiet open produce market at Toronto yesterday.

Brokers reported it difficult to interest buyers in offerings on the butter market. The day's sales were light with the bulk of business being recorded at 23 cents per pound for No. 1 grade Ontario creamery solids. Odd lots changed hands at ¼ cent under this figure, however.

Prints moved through retail channels at former prices.

Sufficient demand appeared on the egg market to keep fresh receipts fairly well cleared and prices held about steady. Government inspected shipments commanded ½-cent per dozen over prices quoted.

Unequal to Task

The Netherlands army was unequal to the task of fighting off Germany's high-geared, up-to-the-minute war machine. Her air force was not strong enough to give the troops effective aid. Her defences had been pierced and outflanked by the lightning German columns. Rotterdam and Utrecht, two of her four largest cities, were in imminent danger of destruction.

In view of those circumstances and in the hope of saving "at least a small part of our beautiful country" and preventing further bloodshed, General Winkelman ordered his forces to cease firing, and commanded the troops and the people to co-operate in the prevention of order "until the arrival of the German regular troops."

(Reuters News Agency, intercepted a radio message on the wavelength of The Netherlands Hilversum station today from the German Consul General in Amsterdam to the Foreign Office in Berlin.)

Occupation Likely Today.

(The message said German troops would "not encounter any difficulties when entering Amsterdam", that the population would be "calm" and that the German forces would be met on the outskirts of the city by "a representative of the commander of the Amsterdam garrison and a representative of the Lord Mayor of Amsterdam, as well as the German Consul General or a representative of him.")

In a broadcast explaining his decision, General Winkelman told the people:

"It could not be otherwise. Our soldiers did their best. They held on bravely and fought against an overwhelming enemy. But they were not equal to modern weapons.

Civilians Suffer Enormously.

"Not only the soldiers but even the civil population has suffered enormously. Rotterdam was bombed and destroyed. Utrecht had the same fate. Thus we were compelled to lay down our arms.

"Our towns have been bombard-force took a toll of thousands of victims. Military and non-military objectives were bombed.

"I, the commander-in-chief, gave the order to cease firing in order to spare further bloodshed and complete destruction of the country. At least a small part of our beautiful country will be saved. You can understand how hard it was for me to decide as I did."

Queen Sends Proclamation

From London Queen Wilhelmina sent a proclamation that "The Netherlands will one day, with the help of God, rewin its whole European territory".

But today all but a small segment of those 12,700 square miles of territory was in the hands of the invaders, who were delayed briefly in their advance by the flood-water defences with which The Netherlands had hoped to guard the rough rectangle enclosing the cities of Amsterdam, Rotterdam, The Hague, and Utrecht.

The German armoured column that had smashed through the southern defences already was in Rotterdam, and the seaport was being subjected to aerial bombardment that set large sections of the city afire.

Utrecht, Amsterdam and The Hague were the targets of other marching columns.

With The Netherlands home land now under German domination, Queen Wilhelmina and her government in London will continue to rule over Holland's overseas possessions—about 790,000 square miles inhabited by more than 70,000,000 persons on two sides of the earth.

NAZIS

German troops won and maintained tiny footholds on the left bank of the Meuse at a few points. At these they were quickly pocketed by the French and everywhere else were driven back into the river.

Sedan is located in a hollow formed by a curve in the river and dominated on the left bank by a line of hills. It was in 1870 that the Prussian army forced the capitulation of the army of Napoleon 111. Today it is the German army that is in the hollow and French artillery that dominates the valley from the heights.

Foothold Soon Lost

The Germans established a foothold on the left bank just south of Sedan and their troops held a pocket about four miles deep. Late yesterday afternoon the French counter-attacked at this point with tremendous forces on land and in the air and the Germans were forced back into the river from the eastern half of the pocket. The rest were bottled up.

This counter-attack was led by one of the most brilliant General Officers of the French army and was supported on a gigantic scale by Allied aviation. Literally thousands of bombs of all calibres were railed on the German troops, on the pontoon bridge they had thrown across the river and on the reinforcing columns on the other side.

In London the Air Ministry announced that the Royal Air Force in these operations had destroyed two pontoon bridges and some permanent bridges. The R.A.F. repeatedly attacked enemy troops and tank concentrations, the Air Ministry said).

The attack by French and British planes was kept up unremittingly all afternoon and throughout the night. According to staff officers, the losses inflicted on the Germans were enormous. The battle is demonstrating in a magnificent manner they said the superiority of Allied equipment and personnel.

Similar operations on a varying scale, were in progress along the entire Meuse front, the morning staff communique said, from Namur in Belgium, to the confluence of the Meuse and Chiers Rivers, four miles southeast of Sedan.

Held Shallow Positions

Between Dinant and Namur, at the northern end of the Meuse front, the Germans secured two or three bridgeheads but held extremely shallow positions on the river bank. They were at once enclosed by superior French forces.

The German forces deployed along the Meuse front represent the strongest and most powerfully equipped portion of the German army. They came up to the Meuse by way of Luxembourg, travelling through Bastogne, Neufchateau and Bouillon, and spreading fanwise opposite Mezieres and Sedan.

In the operations of the last two days a distinct reduction of the intensity of the German air attack has been noted, French military quarters said. The air attacks in the interior of France and even those on the immediate rear of the fighting line have been decreasing in force and effect. The German command is evidently trying to spare its air arm and concentrate its use in the actual battle zone.

Now Solidly Established

On the central Belgian front, from Namur to the region immediately east of Brussels, French motorized forces are now solidly established in the path of the German columns thrusting westward from Maastricht and Liege. The German advance guards are in contact now with this French defence line and the battle in this zone is expected to increase in intensity.

The first contact occurred yesterday at Gembloux, 10 miles northeast of Namur on the Brussels-Namur road and 22 miles southeast of the Belgian capital.

The two extreme ends of the vast front that now extends from north of Antwerp to the Swiss frontier were comparatively quiet.

Fighting Zone Narrowed

In Holland the fighting zone was narrowed down today to Zeeland Province, following yesterday's cessation of resistance in the other provinces. Dutch troops beginning to cross the Belgian frontier are to be reorganized at once, the Dutch legation here announced, into a new army to collaborate with the Allies.

Today's French army communique was as follows:

"In central Belgium an enemy tank attack took place late yesterday in the Gembloux region. We counter-attacked and drove back the enemy.

"On the Meuse enemy efforts have still further increased from Namur to the juncture of the Chiers. The battle is still in progress.

"Our aviation and British aviation, acting in complete cooperation, continues to intervene with great vigor.

Using Modern Arms

"Nothing important to report along the West Front."

Both sides were using the most modern arms, including big fleets of armoured cars and tanks, thousands of planes and the newest types of guns.

One German attack was reported to have been pointed by flame-throwing tanks which shoot fire 70 yards. In the First Great War, flame apparatus with 15 yard range was nearly as dangerous to the handlers as to the intended victims.

Sedan, strategic French city fought over by Germans and French throughout history, was the principal southern anchor of the front which curved to the northeast and then northwest into the coastal plains of Belgium.

Southwestward from Sedan the line extended through Longwy, France, near the Luxembourg border, there joining the comparatively inactive front between France and Germany.

French Express Confidence

"Serious but not alarming," military commentators called the battle.

The French expressed confidence that despite the fact that Sedan and the Belgian cities of Liege, Namur and Dinant were held all or in part by the Germans, the French general staff had foreseen this line of attack and would bare its strategy at the opportune moment.

It was apparent in Paris that effective resistance by Netherlands had been written off by the French before news of Dutch capitulation was announced in Paris.

Last night's newspapers indicated belief the Germans would overwhelm The Netherlands.

Military observers declared today that the battle of the Meuse rapidly was developing into "the greatest battle in history." The French high command told of the Germans making "a momentous effort with furious obstinacy and at the expense of heavy casualties" to press on from Sedan, which is on the east bank of the Meuse.

Holding tight to positions on the west bank, France accepted the German challenge for a knockout blow.

The Belgian defenders were reported to be resisting strongly on the northern section of the front.

Premier Hubert Pierlot in a broadcast to his nation said the Belgians had made "certain modification of defence positions according to order" and insisted there had been no German "break through."

The Liege fortifications, he said, were taking a terrific toll of Germans attacking time and again.

The Belgian government asserted it would remain in Brussels, objective of the German drive through Belgium.

Pierlot declared "the situation is normal" and called on Belgians to "guard intact your morale" against a German invasion "more savage" than in 1914.

wearing uniforms but receiving no pay. Volunteers between the ages of sixteen and sixty-five years will be given arms. Enlisted for the duration of the war, members of the new force will serve mostly in small towns, villages and sparsely-populated areas.

Mr. Eden, who was received by the King in audience at Buckingham Palace last night, said in his broadcast that although the danger of parachutists "undoubtedly exists" it should not be exaggerated.

"The purpose of the parachute raids is to seize such important points as airdromes, power stations, railway junctions and telephone exchanges and hold them by creating disorganization and confusion until reinforcements have arrived," Mr. Eden said.

"The success of such an attack depends on speed. Consequently measures to defeat such an attack must be prompt and rapid. It is upon this basis that our plans have been laid."

Mr. Eden stressed that nothing should be left to chance. Since the war began, the government had received countless inquiries from all over the kingdom from men of all ages, who were not engaged in military service, as to how they could aid the country's defence, he said.

wide roundup of known Communists. The opinion was expressed by Department of Justice officials that enforcement of that section was a duty of Provincial Attorneys-General.

Harry Binder, 26-year old former parliamentary press gallery representative of the banned Toronto Communist paper, Daily Clarion, was sentenced to three years in prison and a fine of $2,000.

The judge set the alternative to the fine at an additional year in prison.

Louis Binder, 22-year old brother of Harry and a former private in the Royal Canadian Engineers was sentenced to 2½ years in penitentiary and fined $1,000, the alternative to the fine being an additional six months in penitentiary.

Arthur Roy Saunders, 27-year old Dominion civil servant drew the same sentence as Louis Binder.

Follows Counsel's Motion.

Following conviction of the men by an Assize Court Jury yesterday, C. L. Snyder, Ontario Deputy Attorney-General, presented the motion for the ban on the Communist party.

Mr. Justice Chevrier, in declaring the party an illegal organization, said "In accordance with the Defence of Canada regulations and in my discretion I see fit to declare the Communist Party of Canada an illegal organization."

The judge told the three accused their crimes were "not against any individual, but striking at the very heart and soul of society itself."

All three were gifted with intelligence, his lordship continued, yet that intelligence had been perverted to the unworthy purpose such as the "distillation and spreading of an insidious poison".

Assimilated By Uneducated.

Their crime of "spreading the evil word", he remarked, was "all the more deadly because it was easily assimilated by the uneducated." Their efforts had been "directed at the ruination of an empire presently engaged in the supreme sacrifice."

None of the accused showed any emotion at the sentence, and had nothing to say before hearing sentence.

After the court rose, Walter Martin of the Ontario Attorney-General's Department at Toronto said that as far as he knew no steps have yet been taken to roundup known communists.

Most Communist leaders have been inconspicuous of late, he recalled, and majority of Canadian Communists would undoubtedly "go underground" the moment they heard of today's decision outlawing their party.

The pamphlets, entitled "Withdraw Canada From the War", contained statements, the Crown alleged, intended to or likely to cause disaffection, to be prejudicial to recruiting ,training, discipline and administration of his Majesty's forces, and also to be prejudicial to the safety of the state and the efficient prosecution of the war.

Conant Makes Comment.

Toronto, May 15 (CP).—The order of Mr. Justice Edgar Chevrier at Ottawa declaring illegal the Communist Party of Canada will "materially assist in dealing with subversive elements," Attorney-General Gordon Conant of Ontario commented today.

In a prepared statement, he said Mr. Justice Chevrier's judgment "on the facts and circumstances" was in the best interests of Canada. The statement continued:

"A member of the Canadian Active Service Force and a member of the Dominion Civil Service were found guilty by a jury of a case where the regulation empowering the court to declare such organizations illegal would justly apply.

"The conviction of these men and the order of his lordship is of the utmost importance at this very serious time and in the present war emergency. Furthermore, it will materially assist in dealing with subversive elements, particularly those belonging to the Communist party."

Mr. Conant reserved comment on what action Ontario might take as a result of the Ottawa decision.

(By The Canadian Press)

Mayors of several Ontario cities today expressed their approval of the action of the Hamilton City Council which passed a resolution asking the Canadian Government to enact legislation providing for disfranchisement of persons convicted of subversive activities.

The Hamilton resolution was also addressed to the Ontario Government with a request that persons found guilty of subversive acts be barred from holding any public office. The resolution referred to any person "found to be a member of, or associated with a club, group, society or organization of any kind which had objects of purposes prejudicial to the established form of government of Canada" and said they should be deprived of the right of ballot.

Mayor Joseph Meinzinger of Kitchener, has ordered police to form a special squad to raid the homes of all known communists and communist sympathizers in Kitchener. Alleged communist headquarters in a downtown building in Kitchener will also be raided.

While the Hamilton resolution was directed at subversive elements generally all Ontario was interested in the decision of Mr. Justice E. R. E. Chevier at Ottawa, that the communist party of Canada is an illegal organization. Mayor Meinzinger said at Kitchener that communists "should not be allowed to abuse the privilege of free speech in order that they might destroy that privilege".

Favors Legislation

Mayor J. A. Phillips of Cornwall, said he heartily endorsed the Hamilton resolution adding "I am in favor of any legislation which will remove the subversive element from Canada".

Mayor Charles Daley of St. Catharines and Mayor George H. Inglis of Niagara Falls also expressed complete agreement, Mayor Inglis remarking that "strong measures should be taken to discover those holding subversive views which might damage Canada's war effort through formation of 'fifth columns'."

"Persons convicted of acts against Canada in wartime should not be allowed to retain their citizenship", declared Col. W. J. Heaman, the Acting Mayor of London, Ont., and Mayor Arthur Beattie of North Bay, said he agreed with the move in every particular.

At Ottawa last night the assistant director of Internment Operations, Col. H. Stethem, said that "no sweeping interment of enemy aliens in Canada is contemplated at present, but the situation is being watched closely".

Coly. Stethem said that some interned aliens have been released "but from now on we may think twice before releasing any more". Any manifestation of German sympathy or subversive activity would lead to interment, he promised.

Lightning had struck a pine tree near the cabin, one bolt following along the roots ripping them apart while the other passed into the house to bring death to three of its occupants. The house itself received no damage whatever.

Dr. O. W. Anderson was called and found Mr. LaFee suffering from severe burns about the hips, shoulders and legs. He was taken to the Red Cross Hospital, Bancroft, for treatment. Provincial Constable Palmatier investigated. There will be no inquest.

R. A. F. BOMBS

The German army might still be in Berlin instead of a few short miles away. Privates idled, smoking cigarettes in the sunshine by the side of powerful tanks and field guns. Others ate off tables pulled from bombed and deserted houses the inhabitants of which had long since fled.

In fields churned by four days of movement of men and machines, soldiers slept with helmets over their faces.

Streets of a nearby town were empty of civilians. Hobnailed boots of sentries struck hollowly.

Even the troops were under cover. Snouts of anti-tank guns appeared at every corner, but to the casual eye the town appeared to be held only by a handful of men.

Near one of the anti-tank guns were two bombed houses. In one the family's breakfast still lay on the table — half-eaten slices of bread, half-filled cups of coffee.

On a wall, at a crazy angle, hung a picture of a young man in the Belgian uniform of 1914-18 with the inscription "Mort Pour la Patrie" (Died for His Country.)

On every road there were Belgian refugees—old and very young, the lame, the blind, the weak.

Old bicycles, oxcarts and donkey wagons were their conveyances. One woman was pushing a baby carriage containing a fat, smiling baby and a pile of household goods. Another wore absurd bright red slippers with fluffy pompoms as she trudged through the heat and dust.

A British officer estimated he had seen at least 70,000 in two days of travel.

Commander of Bomber Had Ribs 'Tickled' With French Guard's Bayonet

London, May 15 (CP)—A 20-year-old commander of a Royal Air Force bomber told today how his stomach was "tickled" by a French bayonet after his craft made a forced landing in the middle of the night on a deserted stretch of French coast.

The bomber was returning from an attack on German troop concentrations when it was struck by a shell which put the port engine out of action. The pilot carried on with the remaining engine for some time but, unable to maintain altitude, was finally forced to attempt a landing.

"It was a thick, black night," he said, describing the experience after his return here today. "When it became obvious that he should have to land, I thought we were miles out to sea from the coast.

"I was just preparing to pull off a tricky landing on water when in the nick of time I saw a stretch of sand and made straight for it. The moment we touched ground the aircraft swung violently to the left and two of the crew, thinking we were landing on water, actually launched a rubber dinghy.

Burned All Maps, Papers

"When we realized we were safely down on the beach, we burned all our maps and papers to be on the safe side in case we were in enemy territory. A group of about 20 men, each armed with rifle and bayonet, loomed up out of the darkness and advanced on us with far from friendly expressions.

"They turned out to be French coast guards, and the leader, singling me out, put his bayonet against my stomach and said, 'German?'

"As I was the only one of our chaps who could speak French — and mine was very much of the schoolboy variety—I promptly answered, 'Mon, Anglais,' and tried a reassuring sort of smile.

"The only result was that the bayonet was pressed a little closer to my skin.

"Although our arms were all up, I took a chance and said, 'excusez-moi,' and carefully lowered one arm to open my flying suit and show my Royal Air Force wings. Then, when the coast guards had flashed their torches on our wrecked aircraft and seen British markings, all was well.

"We shook hands all around and they insisted on taking us to their hut about a mile and a half away, where we washed and had a first-rate breakfast."

By The Canadian Press

French authorities say the victory of their tanks in a massed clash with German tanks near Tongres in Belgium is established. The fight, the first of its kind in military history, is important in that it demonstrates the efficiency of the land battleships upon which the French have expended much inventiveness, money and labor.

It also is important for the lessons it will teach tank commanders about management of their ponderous death-spitting vehicles in action.

The French tank corps came charging into a breach made by the Germans in the Belgian defences through which enemy tanks were moving, escorted by motorcycle troops, armoured cars and anti-tank guns. They did not take the enemy wholly by surprise as the Germans had time to deploy from the roads and take up a fighting formation.

The battle was typical of many that will follow as the war continues except for the fact that the French tanks were ranging far in advance of the infantry and after they disposed of the Germans there were no troops to mop up and occupy the area.

No estimate yet has come forth as to the number of tanks destroyed on either side but tank fighting, perhaps to a greater degree than air fighting, is one of the most wasteful forms of warfare. Defeated tanks are of no further use and probably the victors which survive the ordeal of shell and explosive will require such extensive repairs that they will be out of action for a considerable time.

Here is an aerial view of the Waalhaven airdrome near Rotterdam, Holland. This photograph of the airdrome was made from a Royal Air Force bombing plane as it engaged in bombing attack to dislodge Nazi parachute troops who seized the field in early hours of German invasion of the Netherlands. Bitterest fighting to date in the Lowlands' war has taken place here. The field is said to have changed hands several times and is currently reported to be in the hands of Dutch troops. Notice the damaged hangars and bomb craters. A damaged plane can be seen at the RIGHT foreground.

Visitor to England States Britons Confident of Victory

Miss Doris Gardner, Daughter of Inspector Gardner, States Canadians Also Get More War News Than in Old Country

GLAD TO SEE LIGHTS

So excited at the first sight of rows of gleaming lights along the quay-front, and the glow of city illuminations in the distance, were passengers of the SS. Duchess of Richmond, that docked in Montreal recently, that passengers long accustomed to blackouts and other war precautions in England came ashore carrying their flashlights, Miss Doris Gardner, daughter of Provincial Police Inspector Frank Gardner and one of the passengers on the liner, said yesterday.

Miss Gardner spent the last year in Bristol, England and arrived at her home here on Saturday.

She sighed her relief at being once again in familiar surroundings. "By the looks of the news today," she smiled, "I believe I have arrived in Canada in time."

English people she said, are taking the war in their stride in typical stoical British manner, confident in the belief that England will once again "muddle through." "You get far more war news over here than we did there," she said. Censorship was so very strict."

Miss Gardner was disappointed in the fact that authorities took her gas-mask and other wartime necessities away from her. The usual gas-mask case for women has been done away with, she said, and now milady carries a combination purse and gas-mask container, with the mask conveniently tucked away in a recess at the bottom of the purse. "It costs one five shillings, if he or she is caught minus their mask."

Commenting on the trip, Miss Gardner stated that the liner was not convoyed at any time. "We did not see another boat from the time we left the mouth of the river until we neared Canada. There was a trim six-inch gun mounted on the stern besides anti-aircraft armament," she said.

Democratic conditions prevailed on the boat, with passengers given a free rein. "We could go anywhere we wanted to" she said. "Everybody had a good time and were thrilled at the prospect of getting home again."

Miss Gardner was particularly thrilled with her visits to London. She proudly exhibited several snapshots taken in Trafalgar Square, the London Zoo, Buckingham Palace, Windsor Castle—but her most prised possession is a picture taken with a smiling English "Bobby" outside No. 10 Downing Street, famous home of British Prime Ministers.

BLOCKADE POWER 'IS NOT MISUSED'

London Times Criticizes Italy for Sufferance of Anti-Allied Campaign

London, May 15 (CP).—The Times today took Italy to task for its sufferance of an anti-Allied campaign and oratorical and editorial complaints against the Allied contraband control.

The Times said:

"To say that the entirely legitimate powers of the blockading countries are 'misused' is the very reverse of the truth. In fact, Great Britain has gone out of her way to show every possible consideration for Italian feelings.

"Italy has been taken at her word. Increased importation of certain commodities — notably cotton and other material used for armaments —has been passed because Italy has said they were for her own use. Italian ships have suffered less delay than those o any other power—even than those of the United States.

Italy Would Use Same Methods.

"A complaint for which there is indeed some substance is that of other countries to the effect that Italy is unfairly favored. The Italian government know very well that they would use the same methods—and possibly not always with the same consideration—if they were in the position of having been violently challenged by a powerful adversary and were using the blockade as the primary weapon in their fight for existence.

"The authorized demonstrations against the Allies are unfriendly acts of which Britain and France take note. Signor Mussolini, who leads an ever more secluded life, is known to be attached to the Nazi regime by various ties, political and otherwise, and no outrage which the Nazis commit against small and friendly nations is likely to turn him from his pro-German policy.

"It does not, however, say much for the strength of the case that it has to be bolstered up in so many artificial ways and by refusal to allow the Allied case, whether in regard to the blockade or other matters. to be stated in the Italian press.

Pope Pius Champion of Peace.

"In the difficult days of struggle we know that the truth has a fervent and indomitable champion in Pope Pius XII, whose recent strong messages of sympathy to the rulers of Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg show that for him, as the minister of Christ on earth, the claims of humanity, justice, righteousness and truth take precedence of every other claim."

WAR BRIEFS

Alexandria, May 15 (AP)—Egyptian authorities today ordered a partial blackout of the country continued indefinitely and called up an unspecified number retired army and navy reserve officers as uncertainty over Italy's intentions persisted. Allied sources reiterated that the combined French-British battle fleet concentrated here is ready to fight in "whatever zone hostilities may develop."

Paris, May 15 (AP)—Captain Felix Grat, 41, first member of the Chamber of Deputies to win the Croix de Guerre in the present war, has been killed fighting in the Meselle region. His death was announced today in the Chamber.

Florence, Italy, May 15 (C.P.-Havas)—The Fascist secretary of Florence took disciplinary measures against four Fascists today. One of them newspapers reported expressed disapproval of student demonstrations against the Allies. The others failed to administer "the lesson deserved by a fellow worker who in their presence uttered words unworthy of an Italian."

London, May 15 (CP).—Allied airmen and anti-aircraft batteries have destroyed nearly 600 German planes in the western war zone during the last five days, reliable sources estimated last night. The Air Ministry yesterday placed the Allied losses at one-quarter of the Nazi losses.

The Nazi plane casualties were divided as follows: Downed by British and French airmen in air combat, 300 machines; downed by Dutch and Belgian fliers or by anti-aircraft units of the four allies, about 140.

Destroyed on the ground by air bombardments, about 150, including a great number of transport craft.

Paris, May 15 (AP)—Henri Roy, Minister of the Interior, ordered today the creation of a "civic guard" in all departments and cities to fight "fifth column activities and German parachute troops. Britain took similar action yesterday.

Athens, May 15 (AP). — The Greek arms magnate, Bodissakis Athanasaiades, was reported today to be in London negotiating for sale of his three big munitions plants in Greece to Britain for use by the Allies or any army they might send to the Balkans.

Susak, Yugoslavia, May 15 (AP)—Italians shouting "down with Yugoslavia!" stoned Yugoslav homes and business offices today at Fiume, Italy, across the border from Susak. The demonstrations began last night and continued throughout this morning without interference from the police.

Throngs which also yelled "Hurrah for war!" hurled stones across the Yugoslav-Italian frontier into Susak, smashing many windows.

Paris May 15—(CP—Havas)—Le Petit Parisien reported today that 25,774 more school children have been evacuated from Paris by the prefectoral administration since Monday. The evacuations were not obligatory, the newspaper said.

At the beginning of the war 88,064 children were evacuated by authorities besides those who were privately sent outside the capital by their parents.

Shanghai, May 15—(CP—Havas)—The Whangpoo River was opened to foreign shipping at noon today for a distance of three miles upstream, relieving the congestion in the anchorages in the lower portion of Shanghai Harbor. The Japanese authorities this week completed removal of the boom and other obstructions placed across the river at Nantao, southern portion of the city, in 1937.

PRAISED FOR EXPLOIT

MAJOR-GENERAL PAGET

Destined to play an important role in the war on the Western Front, Major-General Bernard Charles Tolver Paget is credited with organizing the successful British withdrawal from Andalsnes, Norway, carried out with surprisingly small losses despite Nazi bombing raids.

GERMANS' CLAIM MAGINOT LINE PIERCED IS DENIED

Maginot Line is Intact, Has Not Been Pierced Nor Outflanked Near Sedan, Says British Military Spokesman in London

Berlin, May 15—(AP)—The German high command claimed today that Nazi forces had "pierced" the northwestern extension of France's Maginot Line in the Sedan sector.

"By the crossing of the Meuse in the Sedan sector," its communique said, "the northwestern extension of France's fortification system—the Maginot Line—has been pierced in closest collaboration with the air force. (Sedan is considerably north of the extension of the Maginot Line, which would indicate the German claim is unfounded.)

The text of the German communique:

"The 'fortification of Holland' has capitulated because of the hopeless fight against superior attacks by German troops on land and from the air. In Belgium our divisions, sharply pursuing the retreating enemy, reached a position on the Dyle River.

"A crossing of the Meuse was forced on a broad front between Namur and Givet. French counter-attacks with tanks on the western embankment were repulsed.

"German fighting planes and destroyer plane units participated in this fight, destroying a great number of armored cars.

"By the crossing of the Meuse in the Sedan sector, the northwestern extension of France's fortification system—the Maginot Line — has been pierced in closest collaboration with the air force. Here, too, French counter attacks were frustrated with heavy losses for the enemy.

"During the attacks on the Saar front the first lieutenant of one infantry regiment, Has Schoene, and his company distinguished themselves by extraordinary bravery in storming a commanding position in the rocky hills south of Pirmasens.

"The main weight of German air operations yesterday lay in attacking the rear connections of the enemy, his transport roads and assembly stations.

"Every efforts to hamper German fighting activity through operations of strong flying forces were repulsed with heavy losses for the opponent without much interference of our command in the air."

Claim Big Allied Plane Losses

"Over 70 British and French fighting and pursuit planes were shot down at one point alone. Total losses of the opponent on May 14 amounted to over 200 planes, of which about 170 were shot down in air fights, 17 by anti-aircraft and the rest destroyed on the ground. (These figures are several times greater than the estimates available from Allied sources).

"Thirty-five of our own planes are missing. Armed reconnaissance before The Netherlands coast yielded great successes. As previously reported in a special announcement, two cruisers and one destroyer were sunk by bomb hits, an additional cruiser was struck by a bomb, one merchant ship of 29,000 tons and four transports were destroyed. (These claims were not substantiated in London dispatches).

"The defence fight around Narvik continues."

Hour after hour, starting early in the morning, all German radio stations broke in on their programs with appeals to the Belgian soldiers to lay down their arms.

In Flemish and in French the soldiers were told that Germany does not wish to harm the Belgian people. The announcers repeated the claim that the German invasion of Belgium was brought about because Great Britain and France were getting ready to attack Germany through Belgium.

"Belgians," said the broadcast, "if you want to preserve the lives of your men, if you cherish the security of your country, if you want to safeguard the economic life of your country, follow the example of the Dutch nation, which now has been saved.

"Stop your resistance. Follow the example of the Dutch and stack your arms. Germany does not want war with the Belgian nation. Belgians, lay down your arms."

Press Jubilant.

Success of the Nazi forces in the Netherlands was hailed by morning papers throughout the country. One commentator described the achievement of Adolf Hitler's military machine, in bringing down a "well-armed nation of over 8,000,000" in a little more than 100 hours, as "unique in history."

But in military circles the strategic value of the Dutch surrender, as it affects the progress of the campaign against the Allies, was singled out as the most vital factor.

More than one newspaper commentator pointed to the fact that, with Dutch airports in German hands, the war now is closer to Britain.

"The threat to the British Isles has advanced further," said the Hamburger Fremdenblatt, which added that the distance between the Hook of Holland, coast town just west of Rotterdam, and the English port of Harwich is only 125 miles, and that it is only 156 miles to Harwich from Vlissingen (Flushing), in the southwest Province fo Zeeland.

Military observers sought to stress the importance of Holland's capture on the furtherance of the German drive into Belgium and France on a roughly L-shaped front.

These experts, hoping that resistance by the Dutch garrisons in Zeeland would last only a day or two longer, claimed the "mopping up" of other scattered forces which might not have received the Dutch commander-in-chief's order to surrender will require only a limited part of the German army of occupation.

In the opinion of the military observers, only the Dutch coastline must be guarded closely against any eventuality (meaning a possible British attempt to land troops there.)

Therefore, they claimed, strong detachments now can be set in motion to lend support to the drive into Belgium.

Denies German Claims

London, May 15 (CP)—The Maginot Line has been neither pierced nor outflanked near Sedan, a military spokesman emphasized here this afternoon in commenting on German claims.

He explained that the city of Sedan is not part of the Maginot Line.

In this sector the Germans have crossed the Meuse River and are in possession of part of the local defence zone. French troops, the spokesman said, yesterday brought the German advance near Sedan to a halt. The outcome of today's fighting there is not yet known.

The Allied armies in Belgium, it was predicted, may fall back so that their left, or northern flank, will be supported by strong defensive positions in the salient formed by Antwerp and the Escaut River. The strategic possibility of falling back on the Antwerp-Escaut bastion in the future does not mean that the British troops have already established their flank in this locality, it was emphasized.

British forces were understood to be holding Zeeland Province, consisting of islands and a mainland fringe in south-westernmost Holland, and to the rear and north of the Antwerp-Escaut line.

South of Antwerp Allied troops were reported holding positions protecting Brussels in a region where German attacks are now developing. North of this sector Belgian troops who had already gone through several hard battles were reported fighting brilliantly.

OUTWITTED SPIES

Carl Albin, ABOVE, Swiss chemist brought to the United States by an oil company to perfect his formula for leadless high test gasoline, was attacked in his laboratory on Monday by two German-speaking men. At first overpowered, he managed to prevent the men leaving with his secret documents and in desperation hurled a half-gallon container of sulfuric acid at his assailants who fled.

'Communists and Members Of Subversive Organizations Should be Interned'—Conant

Toronto, May 15—(CP)— Communists and members of other subversive organizations throughout Canada should be interned immediately as enemy aliens now are, Attorney-General, Gordon Conant of Ontario said today before a local service (Kiwanis) Club.

Declaring the nation comes first in wartime, he asked: "Are we going to wait until some major catastrophe occurs to wake us up to the fact that there are enemies within our gates, not only aliens but those who are just as dangerous to the nation's existence as many aliens who are now in concentration camps?

"I do not suggest that these offenders should be treated like criminals and confined in penitentaries and jails. I do urge, however, that they be detained in internment camps with provisions similar to those which apply in the case of enemy aliens.

"That, however, can only be done by Federal authorities, enforcing the Defence of Canada Regulations as they apply to subversive elements."

Reviewed Action

Mr. Conant reviewed action taken by Federal authorities against enemy aliens and commended the work of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and the Dominion Justice Department. It had been left, however, to the provinces to dispose of other subversive elements with none of the power vested in the Federal officials.

He reiterated a belief that in such cases the ordinary safeguards that protect accused persons might well be suspended adding:

"When the law enforcement agencies of the province endeavour to enforce the Defence of Canada Regulations against subversive elements they are confronted with all the safeguards that apply in the trial of any accused person.

"The burden of proof rests upon the crown; the crown must prove its case beyond a reasonable doubt; the accused is presumed innocent until he is proven guilty; the accused need not give evidence and cannot be required to go into the witness box; the judge or crown counsel cannot comment to the jury upon the fact that the accused has not gone into the witness box; and the judge must warn the jury . . . that it is dangerous to convict upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice."

Cited Ottawa Trial

Removal of these safeguards would apply only to "communists, fascists, nazis who aim at the destruction of our nation and our civilization". It was "a question as to whether these people who by every conceivable manner and means are undermining our social and political structure should be accorded the means of escape that now prevail", and not a question of removing any safeguards for ordinary accused persons.

Mr. Conant cited the Ottawa trial of three youths, convicted today of anti-war activities, as an example of the situation. They were arrested February 24, given preliminary hearing and an eight-day trial.

"If these defendants now appeal the war may be won or lost before the case is finally disposed of. Pending such appeal, which would probably be heard next fall, these men might be at large under bail. Can it be said that that is a sensible or effective way to handle these subversive elements in the present far emergency".

U. S. STUDIES NEED OF ARMY, NAVY

General Pershing Counsels Against Any Delay in Preparedness

Washington, May 15—(AP)—Rearmament appeals by President Roosevelt and General Pershing spurred Congressional leaders today to promise quick action—and almost certain acceptance—of an extraordinary defence program expected to cost $976,000,000.

While awaiting a special message from the President today or tomorrow, lawmakers, conscious of the uncertain tide of battle in Europe, devoted most of their attention to a study of army and navy needs.

General Pershing, who led the American Expeditionary Force in France two decades ago, counselled against any delay in a rare public statement.

"Every energy in this country should be devoted to the idea of putting the United States in a condition of thorough preparedness against the possibility of war," he said on arriving yesterday from a winter's sojourn in the west.

Preparedness Urged by Pershing

"Preparedness is as necessary today as it was when war was declared (by the United States in 1917), and we find ourselves in the same condition."

The 79-year-old general pointed out that then the Allies "protected us during more than a year of preparation."

"Today," he added, "the situation is utterly different."

President Roosevelt conferred yesterday with Congressional and military leaders and then told reporters that the armaments race had been forced upon the country and that it must keep abreast. National defence is the important thing, he said, and the method of financing it is of secondary consideration.

Authoritative sources said that the president would recommend an increase of $726,000,000 in army funds and $250,000,000 more for the navy. The objectives would be to complete equipment for 1,090,000 troops, put warship construction in high gear and bulwark coast defences.

This emergency fund would swell national defence outlays for the year starting July 1 to about $2,724,000,000—by far a peacetime record.

Popular Nickname Is 'Parashooters'

London, May 15 (CP-Cable). — Britain's second army of "Local Defence Volunteers" was thousands strong a few hours after a first appeal was made today for men between ages of sixteen and sixty-five to protect the homeland against parachute troops.

The rush to practically every police station throughout the land started at 6 a.m. In some centres officials ran out of forms. They promised to carry on throughout the night, entering the names on temporary lists. The most popular nickname for the volunteers thus far coined is "parashooters".

One of the first volunteers was Captain T. S. Smith, last year's King's Prize winner at Bisley.

Rt. Rev. Henry Wilson, Bishop of Chelmsford, who warned against the danger of a parachute invasion months ago, was in the queue at Chelmsford.

At Brighton, Hugh Pakenham, 76, a retired sergeant major, was told he is too old.

"Rubbish!" he roared. "I'm sound of wind and limb and can handle a gun with the youngest."

They gave him a form.

Acting Police Chief Instructed to Raid Communists' Homes

Kitchener, May 15 (CP)—Mayor Joseph Meinzinger today said he had instructed acting Police Chief W. H. Lougheed to detail a special squad to raid the homes of all known Communists and Communist sympathizers in Kitchener. The alleged Communist headquarters in a downtown building will also be raided.

"Every known Communist should be locked up for the duration of the war at least," said the mayor, commenting on the decision of Mr. Justice E. R. E. Chevier at Ottawa. "They should not be allowed to abuse the privilege of free speech in order that they might destroy that privilege. I am sure the city council feels the same way."

Regarding Hamilton council's resolution last night favoring disfranchisement of persons convicted of subversive activities Mayor Meinzinger said: "Absolutely — why should they have the vote when they are out to destroy the British Empire. No stone should be left unturned to expose them."

NEW TORY LEADER

Hon. R. B. Hanson, Conservative member for York-Sunbury, N.B., has been chosen as his party's House leader following the resignation of Hon. R. J. Manion. Mr. Hanson was minister of trade and commerce during the Bennett administration.

ON GUARD DUTY

All decked out in his brand new uniform and Balmoral cap, Mayor Dave Croll of Windsor, Ontario, marches up and down his post in a smart and soldierlike manner at the barracks of the Essex Scottish regiment. His honor holds the rank of buck private from which there can be no demotion.

STITCH IN TIME SAVES SOLDIER'S PANTS

Mrs. Wallace R. Campbell, of Windsor, chairman of the Women's War Work Committee of the Red Cross Society, is seen examining a pair of trousers repaired in the mending room of the Salvation Army Service Centre in Toronto. Looking on is Mrs. Col. George W. Peacock, director of the Red Shield Women's Auxiliary of the Salvation Army, and Lt.-Col. Rev. Sidney Lambert, padre of Christie Street Hospital. Thousands of articles of clothing are mended in the Salvation Army mending rooms across Canada.

WILL FORM NEW ARMY

PARIS, May 15 (C.P.-Havas)—Dutch troops driven into Belgium from southern Holland will serve as the kernel of a reconstituted Netherland army to be organized by the government-in-exile, the Dutch legation announced here today.

The legation communique follows:

"We learn from a Netherland source that certain troop contingents were driven into Belgium from southern Holland.

"These units will be immediately reassembled in order to constitute the nucleus of new Netherland military forces whose formation was immediately projected by the Netherland government, now in London.

It was said the bulk of Holland's navy left Dutch ports last night and now is on its way across the North Sea.

Passage of Time Has Wrought Many Changes in Harbor Activity

Only One Freighter and Occasional Tanker Now Stop Here Whereas in Past Many Excursion Boats Used to Make Tri-Weekly Calls

OLD NAMES RECALLED

The passing of the years brings forth many changes! And this morning, old timers were heard commenting on the changes which have taken place at the Belleville harbor within the past twenty or thirty years. The quietness which prevails around the Government Dock today is a far cry from the activities which prevailed a number of years ago they claim.

Not so long ago there were excursion boats running up and down the Bay of Quinte every day. The excursion boats "Verona" and "Brockville" made trips daily between Trenton and Picton. The steamer "Aletha" made three trips each week to Kingston from Belleville, and excursions to Rochester also left Belleville three times each week.

Freighters on their way from Toronto to Montreal made regular calls at Bay of Quinte ports and daily except Monday these boats could be seen in the Belleville harbor.

Today, only the Steamer "Glen Allan" makes regular calls at the local port. Other boats, such as itinerant oil tankers and coalers, make occasional stops to serve local dealers and gasoline companies, but the activity is far less than it was twenty-five years ago before automobiles and trucks became popular.

"Lover Come Back"

by BARRETT WILLOUGHBY

CHAPTER NINETEEN

Sondra climbed to the flying bridge on top of the pilothouse and stood there, balancing to the long, easy swing of the speeding trawler. Stars and moon paled and after a while the flaming ball of the sun shoved up between two needle peaks, and poured its golden-crimson glory across the sky.

It was a "looming" morning of invisible mists that clung only to the smooth green swells, with a strangely magnifying effect. A flock of black ducks, swimming ahead, loomed like a fleet of Spanish galleons; and when Sondra looked back, the masts and upper-works of the six O'Moore trawlers following in the Tanya's wake seemed tall as battleships.

Chris came clambering up the ladder to the flying bridge. "Morning, Miss Sondra." He saluted with a salt-cured hand.

She smiled at him. "Did Liane chase you out, at last?"

"Arrgh! That light cruiser needs some guy to knock seven bells out of—' He snapped to attention his eyes narrowing on something ahead. "There they are!" he sang out, pointing off the bow. "About two miles away. Herring! And boy, what a school!"

Above the water, Sondra saw a bright silvery flashing like a heliograph signal, repeated again and again. The Tanya sped toward it. Across the morning drifted a dim, wild skreeling that increased to an almost unbearable clamor as the flashing resolved itself into an immense cloud of sea gulls—frenetic thousands, screeching, wheeling, diving, rising in the sun that struck silver from their wings. They were feasting on the helpless herring beneath.

The "flipping" herring covered an area two miles wide, and stretched as far south as the eye could see. Millions of close-packed silver bodies constantly surging up, diving, crossing and re-crossing.

The Tanya came to a stop a short distance from this spectacle of Nature in the raw, which for magnitude and diversity of appetites has no equal on earth today.

For the gulls were not alone in their gorging. Everywhere on the water sat colonies of feeding birds—loons, grebes, cormorants, merganser ducks—all, in greedy haste, upending tails, diving under, popping up with fish in their beaks, and gulping their struggling prey. Meanwhile, the vast surface of the school was broken by explosions of fear-maddened herring which chased by salmon and larger fish, shot three and four feet into the air before falling back. And, gliding at express-train speed through this finny turmoil, hundreds of huge hair seals pursued the salmon that pursued the herring.

Sondra, watching, felt as if she had been carried back on the wings of time to a primordial world of frenzied appetites. Death rampant in a school of herring. What chance had they for survival, with gulls attacking from above, huge fish from below, diver tribes in between? And man, deadliest enemy of all, making ready to strike from every side.

Chris, gone from the bridge, was already on his way to "sound" the school. From the stern of a big red skiff, he directed a boat-puller who rowed at a snail's pace into the thick of the herring flip. Between thumb and forefinger, Chris gripped the "fiddler"—a long line with a chunk of lead at the end—slowly playing it up and down in the water. By the vibrations which came up the taut line, as it was struck by the swimming fish, his trained fingers were reading the secrets of the teeming depths.

The skiff circled back alongside, and Chris climbed aboard shaking his head. "School's not ten feet deep, and milling right on top of the water, Cap'n," he reported. "If they ever struck one of those hundred-foot nets of ours, it'd start 'em straight down for the under side of China. They'd be scattered in no time."

The captain's face fell. "No set just yet, then?"

"Not until the tide turns, Cap'n. There's a strong ebb for another couple of hours. After that, they'll school deeper. I think—if nothing happens to disturb 'em."

"Nothing could happen — except whales, Chris. And we haven't had whales in this vicinity for over ten years. We'll wait."

Sondra was making her way along the narrow deck space outside the cabin, when she chanced to glance astern.

Over the sun-bright swells, Kemp's blue-gray dispatch boat was speeding toward the Tanya, pushing a feather of white before its bows. Sondra's spirits rose at the prospect of company to break the monotony of waiting. She raised the cry, "The Blue Dragon's coming!"

All hands were on deck when the Dragon rounded in alongside. Sondra and Liane waved and called their welcome.

Kemp sprang aboard eagerly. "Am I too late for the big roundup?"

"Too early," replied Captain O'Moore. "But you're just in time for breakfast, me lad. You too, Ikeda." A shade grudgingly he included the tall Japanese who stood at Kemp's shoulder.

"So-o-o happy, Miss." Ikeda bent low before Sondra, hissing politely through bared, white teeth. "So-o-o happy to find excellent company on lonely fishing ground."

Breakfast, shared with the crew at the long galley table, was merry and unusually prolonged. Ikeda, who somehow had the seat next to Sondra, was so obsequiously attentive to her that he came near to being a nuisance before the meal was over. And when she went out on deck again, he followed close on her heels. But she forgot her annoyance immediately, in the unwelcome surprise that greeted everyone aboard the Tanya.

Coasting silently into the midst of the herring flip were Reynall's Baltic and Katlean's battered Scundoo.

Chris snarled, "Reynall luck! The first time in months the weather's been calm enough for a boat like the Scundoo to venture out here—and he's grabbed it!"

Captain O'Moore, grimly silent, was scrutinizing every move of the invading craft, now half a mile away among the flippant herring. The Baltic drifted idly; but in the Scundoo's lowered skiff an Indian was making fast the free end of the little trawler's purse seine.

Everyone on the Tanya was familiar with the procedure called "making a set"—the free end of the seine's cork-line held by the stationary skiff; the trawler dropping web from its revolving turntable, as it circled swiftly back to the skiff to create the enclosure that hung from floating corks, like a wall in the water; the "pursing up" of the seine's bottom, to imprison the impounded fish.

"The man's a fool—makin' a set out here with that outfit!" snorted the captain. "The fish will dive under his shallow net before he can begin to purse 'em in. He won't get —" He broke o, to hastily focus his marine glasses on Katlean's Scundoo. "Now, what—in—blazes . . ."

The Indian boat was not following the usual procedure. Instead of moving swiftly in a wide circle, it was barely creeping, laying its net in a straight line. A canoe had put off. In it sat two native boys with poles, on the ends of which something bright shone in the sun.

Chris laughed. "Katlean's got his old dodo of a great-uncle with him—old Ish. Looks like they're trying a trick the Thlingets used before the white man came."

"What d'ye mean?"

"He's laying his net straight across the strong ebb current. As the weighted bottom edge falls, the cork-floated top edge carries off on the tide so the seine slants at an angle, sort of under the fish instead of hanging straight. He's going so slow they won't scare much, and his web's too shallow to start 'em divin' deep. Watch now ,till he's paid out half the net. Then he'll turn sharp makin' a narrow oval instead of a circle as he doubles back toward his skiff. Those kids in the canoe with the open-ended cans on poles will move in, punching the cans up and down in the water, and—"

"What on earth for?" interrupted Sondra.

"Makes a thundering noise under water, Miss Sondra. Stampedes the fish right into the net."

The captain let out a roar. "Well! What are ye standin' here for? Are ye goin' to let Reynall's blasted Indians make monkeys of the O'Moore fleet?"

Chris, amazed at O'Moore's sudden heat, stammered, "Why—er—it's only a fluke chance that lets him make a set out here at all, Cap'n. He'll get only a handful. There'll be millions of barrels left, when we get ready to drop our nets."

"I'm not carin' how many barrels are left!" rasped the captain. "I'm tellin' ye, no Reynall boat brails a herring out of this school, or any other this season, if I can keep 'em from it. Get busy! Break up that set, d'ye hear?"

"I hear. But—how would you have me do it?"

"Hell's anchors!" O'Moore pounded the deck with his crutch. "Must I tell ye not only what I want done, but how to do it?"

For a moment Chris studied the Scundoo through narrowed eyes. Then he said tersely, "How's this: We'll make a set ourselves, laying our net at an angle toward his, and in such a way that our cork-line will drift down and cut off his return to his skiff. His boat hasn't the power to cut through our seine, even if he has the nerve."

"Good! That will do it!"

Chris turned and bawled through cupped hands to his crew. "Tumble out, you summer tourists. We're makin' a set!" He leaped into the wheelhouse.

Amid a jangle of bells and a roar of Diesels the Tanya, her net unreeling swiftly behind her, headed obliquely for the line of corks that marked Katlean's set.

The captain stood braced outside the open window of the pilothouse, where he could both see ahead and talk to Chris at the wheel. The Tanya's whistle shrilled twice. Instantly, from up ahead, came an answer in a series of imperative, jerky blasts.

Kemp craned his neck to look. "Holy—jumped-up!" he exclaimed.

The Baltic, bearing down from starboard, was heading fullspeed across the Tanya's bow. Liane screamed. "He's crazy! He's going to smash into us! O-o-oh!" She grabbed at Kemp, and hid her face in his shoulder.

"Crazy—like a fox," retorted Kemp disengaging himself to watch the approaching boat. "He's out to keep Chris from breaking up Katlean's set."

Sondra darted forward to stand beside her grandfather. The captain, eyes narrowed on the Baltic, was gripping the pipe rail with an intensity that made his knuckles white. Chris, head and shoulders out of the wheelhouse window, gauged the speed of Reynall's boat, and cursed the problem that confronted him. If he changed his course to avoid collision, Katlean would complete his set. If he didn't change, the Baltic would strike the Tanya head-on, about amidships.

Angrily, he started to swing the Tanya's head to starboard, but O'Moore stopped him. "Steady, there! What the divil are ye doing?"

Chris steadied the wheel, but with an anxious eye on the narrowing gap between the two vessels. "By the rules, he's got the right of way, Cap'n."

"A boat with fishing gear out takes right of way over any vessel running free," snapped O'Moore. "Whistle him again for a port passing, and hold your course and speed."

Reluctantly, Chris complied.

The Baltic not only ignored the signal, but seemed to increase its speed.

Chris's jaw bulged. The sweat of strain started out on his face. Almost imperceptibly, he began to ease off again.

"Steady!" O'Moore ordered grimly. "Hold her steady!"

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Weather complexity! The sun, by sending varying amounts of energy, probably does its part in making our weather complex, but the earth itself adds to the complexity. In the first place, the earth spins on its axis, which changes wind directions. This is a good thing as the spinning causes all sides of the globe to be heated. In the second place greater complexity results from irregular distribution of the continents, their irregular shorelines and topographies with mountain ranges trending in all directions. These result in all manner of weather changes.

(By Wallace Ward, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 16—(CP)— Prime Minister Mackenzie King appealed for the support and co-operation of all Members of the House of Commons in the government's heavy task of carrying on the war as the House of Commons assembled today and received a prompt assurance of aid from Hon. R. H. Hanson, Conservative House leader.

"Responsibility of government does not mean monopoly of government," said Mr. King. "Everyone can make a contribution and will be expected to do so fearlessly and to the best of his ability."

"I consider it my duty as leader of the opposition," said Mr. Hanson, "to render to the cause of liberty and freedom the very best that is in me."

Series of 'Hair-Raising' Exploits Of British Pilot Revealed

He Downs 3 Nazis, Parachutes to Dutch Island as Own Plane Takes Fire

IS TAKEN FOR GERMAN

London, May 16—(CP)—The Air Ministry gave the public a hair-raising account today of a Royal Air Force pilot's "adventures in Holland" in which he shot down three German planes, jumped from a blazing cockpit, landed by parachute on a Dutch island, swam 200 yards, hitch-hiked a ride on a bicycle and was mistaken for a German before he reached safety.

The pilot said his formation encountered seven junkers 87S southwest of Rotterdam and his gunner brought down two of them.

"Then about 27 Messerschmitt 109S joined the combat and I heard my rear gunner, who was afterwards killed, give a cheer, and I think this meant that he had got a Messerschmitt 109 which had been trying to get on my tail," the pilot said.

"My starboard tank caught fire and a stream of bullets came from the rear and shot away the dashboard and part of the control column. I lost control for some time but eventually managed to turn the aircraft on its back to facilitate bailing out. I bailed out when the flames were coming right up to the cockpit.

"I landed on an island southwest of Dorbrecht among some tall reeds."

After swimming two channels, the pilot said he found a small boat which he rowed to a house where a farmer gave him a lift on a bicycle to the nearest Dutch military post. There he met a fellow R.A.F. pilot who also had taken to his parachute.

"We were interrogated by Dutch intelligence officers who seemed to think we were German," he said. "By this time I had lost most of my uniform."

Finally they were taken to The Hague where they convinced the authorities they were British airmen and not Nazi parachutists or Dutch Fascists.

Staff of League Will Leave for 'Safe Place' if Switzerland Invaded

Geneva, Switzerland May 16. — (AP)— The entire staff of the League of Nations was informed today that, in the event of an invasion of Switzerland, it would be reduced sharply and leave its palace on the shores of Lake Leman for "a safe place".

Fears of a Nazi attack were heightened last night when German artillery rolled into place behind motorized divisions on the German side of the Rhine river from Basel to Schaffhausen.

Countering the German preparations, France poised a strong force at her Swiss frontier.

The mobiliged Swiss army toiled to perfect fortifications of the Winkelried Line, while thousands of women, boys and aged men volunteered for "home guard duty". They received rifles and forty bullets each.

Paris, May 16 (CP-Havas)—Premier Paul Reynaud told the French Chamber of Deputies today that Germany "has decided to stake its all" on the Western Front offensive and will be defeated.

The German thrust through the Low Countries now is aimed "at the heart of France," Reynaud declared.

He promised Belgium that "our victory will be hers."

"When all can seem lost," Reynaud declared, "the world will see what France is capable of."

He recalled that Germany had declared she is going to win the war in two months.

The Premier, briefly reviewing the history of German preparations for war, declared that tanks and planes bought at the price of untold privation by the German population have now [illegible] thrown against the Western [illegible]

"Hitler wants to win the war in two months," he said. "If he fails, he is doomed. He knows it. We are perfectly aware of the peril.

"The days and months ahead are going to decide the centuries to come . . .

"One must not be content with vague hope and words. Our soldiers are fighting, French blood is flowing. The times through which we must live will, perhaps, have nothing in common with what we have known.

"Revolutionary measures will be necessary. Perhaps we will have to change everything, methods and men. . . .

'We Are Full of Hope'—Reynaud

"We are full of hope because we know that our lives count for nothing.

"One thing counts— to maintain France!

The House adjourned without a vote after its President, Edouard Herriot, followed Reynaud with an address. He told the Premier that the Chamber showed by its applause "the confidence it has in you."

Herriot echoed the Premier's tribute to the Allied armies.

"The country will show itself worthy of its army," he promised. "France realizes the greatness and tragedy of this ordeal and will remain faithful to her past and her destiny."

FORTS OF LIEGE URGED TO HOLD TO THE LAST MAN

Atmosphere Tense in Brussels as Warning Given City Would be Bombed

SHOPS ARE OPEN

Approximately 200,000 Persons Have Left City and Roads Blocked With Refugees

Brussels, May 16.—(CP-Havas)—King Leopold of the Belgians, faced with a Nazi threat that this capital would be bombed if troop movements through it and erection of defences about it did not cease, remained at his post today and issued a broadcast proclamation to the defenders of the Liege fortress urging them to "resist to the utmost for the Fatherland".

"I am calling on you, Forts of Liege," said the monarch's address, read over the Brussels radio in French and Flemish.

"I address you, Col. Modard, commander, officers, non-commissioned officers and men—to resist to the utmost for the Fatherland.

"I am proud of you.

"Leopold".

The atmosphere was tense in the capital as it awaited a possible German air bombardment, threatened in a Berlin announcement.

(A German statement charged that German observation planes had sighted troop movements through Brussels—despite formal Belgian assurances that the city was free of all war activity—and said that the Nazi High Command therefore no longer would regard it as an open city. If any military objectives are noted henceforth in Brussels, they will be attacked from the air, the statement said.)

French Command States Battle in Regions of Namur and Sedan Assumes War of Movement and No Precise Information Can be Given—Air Raids on Nancy

(By Axel de Holstein)
(Havas Staff Writer)

Paris, May 16, — (CP-Havas)—Major Allied and German forces came into contact last night between Antwerp and Namur along a line that runs roughly east of Louvain to Gembloux and Namur, opening the second large-scale battle concurrently with the conflict still raging along the Meuse, a general staff spokesman said today.

The northern sector of the front now lies between the Scheldt River at Antwerp and the Meuse at Namur, a distance of some 60 miles.

The German forces hurled against the line have been repulsed at all points, the spokesman declared.

On the front between Namur and Sedan German motorized divisions thrust forward from the several bridgeheads established by them on the left bank of the Meuse.

These armored divisions moved forward without supporting infantry.

REPORT UNOFFICIAL

Athens, May 16 (AP)—Greece poured troop reinforcements today into her mountainous frontier region facing Italian-occupied Albania, just across the entrance of the Adriatic from the heel of the Italian boot.

(Apparently the Greeks were feeling the pinch of Allied and Italian rivalry for strategic position in the eastern Mediterranean. However, insecurity of communications from Athens, by way of Budapest, the channel of this dispatch, and perhaps Greek censorship obscured the full meaning of the troop movements.

FAST, LIGHTWEIGHT BOMBERS FOUND BEST FOR WAR

Experts Say Craft Capable of Pursuit, Attack or Bombing Most Suitable for General Purposes

THE BEAUFORT IN LINE

London, May 16 (CP).—A fast, lightweight bomber, jack-of-all war trades, for pursuit, attack or bombing—is said by military experts to be likely to emerge from the present combat as the most effective air war weapon.

The old heavy bombers are headed for obsolescence, they say.

Neutral strategists who have been studying air fighting since the war opened argued that it is becoming more and more obvious from the swiftness of the campaign in Norway and the low countries that the emphasis must be on speed.

Fighters will be regarded as a that speed do not have range, armament, or ability to carry bombs for troop strafing.

Heavy, well armed bombers, on the other hand, are too easy prey for home-based fighters and are too slow for modern air warfare.

One tactician said the new conception of an effective air force is likely to be this:

U. S. Citizens in Italy Advised By Consulates to Leave Country

Residents in Rome Receive Circular Advising Return to U.S. as Soon as Possible

U. S. MESSAGE TO DUCE

Rome, May 16 (AP)—United States diplomatic authorities today advised United States citizens to leave Italy as soon as possible.

The United States consulate sent the following circular to American residents in the Italian capital:

"The consulate has been directed by the embassy to call to the attention of American citizens residing in the Rome consulate district the advice of returning to the United States at the earliest possible moment."

It was understood that other United States consulates in Italy were issuing the same advice.

Ambassador William Phillips delivered a message from President Roosevelt to Italian authorities yesterday for transmission to Premier Mussolini, it was learned.

The embassy declined to add anything to the Washington announcement that the message was sent in an effort to prevent the war from spreading.

Troops continued today to protect British and French embassies in Rome against possible demonstrations. None materialized.

Guards were withdrawn from the Yugoslav legation.

Roosevelt Asks U. S. Congress For $1,182,000,000 For Defence

Washington, May 16—(AP)—President Roosevelt asked the United States Congress today for $1,182,000,000 in cash and contract authorizations for military implements to "meet any lightning offensive against our American interest."

In a momentous message delivered in person to the House and Senate assembled in joint session at a few hours' notice, the President said earnestly that dangers confront the United States because of the war in Europe and the speed with which modern armies may conquer time and space.

The President broke his request down to $896,000,000 in immediate appropriations, of which the army would get $546,000,000, the navy and marine corps $250,000,000, and $100,000,000 would be at his disposal "to provide for emergencies affecting the national security and defence."

In addition, he asked Congress to authorize the government to enter into contracts totalling $286,000,000, to be paid for by appropriations later on.

Of the latter, the army, navy and marine corps would receive $186,000,000 and the President $100,000,000.

BRICK LININGS OF SEWERS RESTORED

With the brick lining of many of the sewer openings below manhole covers rotting away, the street pavement surrounding the manholes in some cases is also beginning to break with repairs being necessitated. Employees of the public works department are at present engaged in removing the rotted brick lining, building wooden forms and filling with concrete to effect the necessary repairs.

COLOR COMBINATIONS ON THE DIFFERENT PROVINCIAL LICENCES

Province identifications by name are so small on most 1940 licence plates that people will have to learn to recognize the different color schemes of the plates if they want to know the home stamping grounds of the cars they see on the highways this summer. Here is a list of the 1940 color schemes for the different provinces in Canada: Alberta, orange on black; British Columbia, yellow on black; Manitoba, white on apple green; New Brunswick, yellow on green; Nova Scotia, white on black; Ontario, black on yellow; P. E. I. white on black, Quebec, white on black; Saskatchewan, red on white.

MORE U.S. MOTORISTS SEEN ON HIGHWAYS

More and more motor vehicles of United States registration are appearing on highways and city streets, marking the virtual opening of a tourist season which promises to be most active. The opening of the pickerel and pike seasons in inland waters is expected to lead to a marked influx of anglers from the United States with the many lakes in North Hastings and Frontenac Counties as their destination.

LARGE EGG LAYED BY LEGHORN HEN

A leghorn hen, owned by Jim Wood of South Monoghan, Northumberland county, recently surpassed all records. The hen, a regular layer, came through with an egg the other morning which was the daddy of them all. It measured 9½ inches around the long way and exactly eight inches in girth. Actually it appeared about four times larger than the ordinary hen's egg. It weighed exactly one-half pound.

TILTING LIGHTHOUSE CAUSES NO WORRY

A lighthouse, leaning far out of the perpendicular and from appearances in dire danger of tipping over into the water, is drawing the attention of strangers to this district as they travel the Bay Bridge Road these days. The lighthouse is the one situated in the Belleville harbor, for many years the guardian of navigation for these parts, and its "Leaning Tower of Pisa" effect has caused many strangers to express their fears that it might topple over into the bay.

Harbor officials are not unduly alarmed over the situation, however, as it is claimed that the lighthouse has been leaning perceptibly for the past ten or twelve years, with very little added unbalance being noted since its first movement was discovered. A soft foundation is given as the cause of the condition and in the meantime the Marine Department is not worrying. When and if the lighthouse begins to move again it is thought possibly that it will be taken down and replaced with a gas buoy.

Refuses to Pay Fine For Torturing Horse

Peterborough, Ont., May 16 — (CP)— William Laidley, 77-year-old district farmer, cried "I won't pay" when fined $26.25, including costs, Wednesday on a charge of ill-treating a horse with a contrivance which Magistrate O. A. Langley termed "a mild form of torture."

Laidley was ordered to be held three days in jail.

According to evidence, Laidley placed a piece of wood studded with nails under the stomach band of a horse and attached a length of rope from it to the driver's seat of a cart.

Medical Men Attend Semi-Annual Meeting At Belleville Hospital

At Belleville General Hospital Wednesday the Spring semi-annual meeting of the Ontario Medical Association, District Number Six, took place with a large attendance of members. Dr. H. M. Yelland of Peterborough is counsellor of this district which comprises the counties of Victoria, Peterborough, Durham, Northumberland, Prince Edward, Hastings and Haliburton. Dr. Gerald Allison, Picton, and Dr. H. D. Logan, Lindsay, are vice-counsellors.

An interesting program had been arranged, opening at ten o'clock with an address by Dr. Robert Cleghorn on "The Value of Hormone Therapy in General Medical Practice." A business session followed, the agenda including discussion on the topics of Medical Relief, Protection of Civilian Interests of Doctors on Active Service, Cancer, Tariff, and the annual meeting with the Canadian Medical Association in June.

Dr. George H. Stobie gave a clinic on Ulcers of the Stomach presenting several cases.

At noon the visitors were guests of the Board of Governors and staff of the Belleville General Hospital at a luncheon.

The afternoon meeting was devoted to the study of arthritis, with an address being given by Dr. A. Almon Fletcher, Toronto, on Diagnosis and Medical Treatment of Arthritis, and by Dr. R. I. Harris, Toronto, on Surgey in Arthritis.

At the conclusion of business afternoon tea was served at the Hospital and the members were taken on an inspection tour of the New Wing.

QUIZZ PROGRAM HELD BY CLUB

Eddie Shapiro Conducts Quizz With Dubs the Ultimate Winners

Much merriment and useful information was gathered from the "quizz" program held at the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis Club held at the Queens Hotel with Eddie Shapiro in charge of the proceedings. The club was divided into two classes and at the conclusion of the "quizz" it was decided that the Dubs had won by a slim margin. The Dubs were helped by Leo. B. Riggs who received all the questions pertaining to music and all the questions were answered correctly.

The Kiwanis campaign to raise money for club work is progressing satisfactorily and Jimmie Cowan and his team were served with a special dinner—his team being the highest in the campaign during the first week. Jim and his merry men ate chicken and strawberry shortcake while the rest of the club had to be content with the regular fare. The thanks of the team was expressed by Jimmie, who promised they would be on top again next week.

Dr. R. A. Flynn, chairman of the Inter-Club committee notified the members of the visit of the Kingston Club to Belleville on Tuesday next at the Country Club. Walter P. Zeller, governor of the district will be the principal speaker. Jim Barclay was the winner of the splendid Grenfell jacket by Fred Deacon as booster for the day. Fred does not fool when he gives a boost and Jim Barclay can consider himself lucky in having his name drawn.

EAST HILL HOME ENTERED BY NIGHT

Lower Part of Arthur Brown's Home Ransacked but Nothing Taken PHANTOM STRIKES

Changing his tactics somewhat, Belleville's phantom burglar operated without detection again last night when he entered the home of Arthur Brown, 326 Foster Ave., and after ransacking the downstairs part of residence, left without stealing anything of material value. Again all doors were left unsecured to effect hasty exit in the event of interruption.

Unlike his previous episodes, when he forced entrance during the absence of householders last night, the "ghost burglar" daringly unlocked the front door of Mr. Brown's home and quietly and stealthily completed a thorough ransacking of all parts of the downstairs without so much as disturbing the occupants, who were sleeping peacefully upstairs.

The break-in was not discovered until the Brown family arose this morning, but Mr. Brown assured the police entrance must have taken place after 2.00 a.m. today as he had not retired until that hour.

On previous occasions when Belleville's latest crime mysteries have been reported and homes entered and ransacked, the phantom burglar usually operated before the midnight hour, but last night this ghost marauder changed his tactics and entered the Brown home long after the stroke of twelve. Again, as in other incidents of a similar nature, nothing was stolen.

Belleville police have thoroughly patrolled the east hill section, where all of the breakins have taken place, every night for two weeks without gaining information that might lead to the detection of the culprit. Today, however, Chief Kidd is wondering whether or not Belleville's latest crime wave is not the result of what is commonly known as a "headline hunter".

WATERS DRAGGED FOR MAN'S BODY

Fred Leeson, Miner, Believed to Have Drowned When Canoe Capsizes

Kirkland Lake, Ont., May 16 (CP) —Miners in rowboats, aided by electric lamps used in mines, dragged the waters of McTavish Lake overnight and early today for the body of Fred Leeson, 25, an employee of Bidgood Mine who was believed to have drowned when his canoe overturned. In the faint hope Leeson reached shore after his craft upset, other miners searched waterfront bushlands.

Formerly of Fort Frances, Ont., Leeson started out by canoe for Victoria Lake, a small body of water near McTavish Lake, six miles east of here, late yesterday to meet his wife and daughter who were visiting there. He failed to appear and Rubin James set out in a rowboat. He found the overturned canoe. Later, search parties found a cap identified as belonging to Leeson.

Two minutes' silent prayer was then observed in memory of mothers in W.M.S. who have passed on.
